Alcona County Dive Team ready to serve community

By Cheryl Peterson
Editor

In a time when many services are being reduced due to lack of funding, Alcona County has gained a service thanks to the dedication and resourcefulness of organizers and members of the Alcona County Dive Team.

Even though most residents will probably not need this service first hand, it is a component that strengthens law enforcement and fire and rescue services in the county.

And, according to Ralph Klotz, Alcona Township Fire Chief and organizer of the dive team, is a logical service for the community. "We are surrounded by water — why not have a dive team?" Klotz said.

He has been working toward establishing a dive team since 2008 and is pleased to have seen that realized this summer when the team was asked to recover evidence for the Alcona County Sheriff's Department.

Klotz said it was after two fishermen died in a storm on Lake Huron several years ago that he started pushing for having a local dive team. "Back then the closest team was the Oscoda Township Fire Department or the state police...I met with Sheriff Doug Atchison after he was elected and he gave his support," Klotz said.

In a letter of support dated October 2008 Atchison wrote, "I take great pride in the association between the various Alcona County volunteer fire departments and myself. In our small rural setting it is imperative that all emergency services stand together on a mutual front to provide each other assistance when called upon.

"This sheriff's office has had, for many years, a marine division and puts in many hours on top of the water. Unfortunately, there have been numerous times that the Alcona County Sheriff's Office has had a need for a specialized dive team, for evidence recovery and body recovery. The protocol is to call upon an outside source for this service."

It didn't take much for Alcona Township FD Lt. Dennis Scott to get behind Klotz's efforts to form a dive team. With 11 years serving on the fire department and eight as a licensed emergency medical technician (EMT) he supported the idea and also worked toward that goal. He is the dive team leader/coordinator and personally got involved because, like everyone on the team, he enjoys diving and because it would "help the community."

He and Klotz have worked to obtain funding through various grants from various sources including several local foundations and through the federal government under the auspices of Home Land Security department. The largest was $22,000 for dry suits for team members.

The effort to outfit the team is a combined effort with respective fire departments, grant allocations, and the members. Dive team members have spent hours of training, which is generally paid for by their fire department, and they have used their own money to purchase some of the equipment necessary. Additionally, the county procured an 18-foot Sea Wolf from the U.S. Coast Guard which the team uses.

Alcona County Dive Team members are all volunteers. And, the team is available outside of Alcona County if needed. "We have a mutual aid agreement with Alpena," Scott said.

"It's a lot of work (to be a member). As a rule, if you dive for an hour you are gone for four hours in order to put on all of the equipment and then to put it away properly," Scott said.

Scott explained the team is available to respond to calls and all of the team members are certified for open water (60 foot depth), advanced (100 foot depth) and rescue (lifesaving technics like administering CPR, et cetera). Later this summer, if all goes according to plan, dive team members will be certified in rescue.

"Last summer we had an opportunity to train with the Michigan State Police dive team," Scott said. "They were training up here and we joined them. We spent eight hours in the water... It was really good training to work with those divers. It was a good day."

"I'm so happy to have this up and off the ground," Klotz said. "I think it's a positive thing (for the community). It has taken time to put together, but nothing happens overnight."

Recruitment of dive team members is ongoing. Scott said a member of the local fire departments or the Alcona County Sheriff Department is encouraged to participate.

New director for Alpena/Alcona/Montmorency DHS offices

By Cheryl Peterson
Editor

Increasing the presence of the Michigan Department of Human Services (DHS) in Alcona County is one of the goals of the newly appointed director of the field offices serving Alpena, Alcona and Montmorency counties.

John Keller has been serving as acting director for the three counties over the past year. He was recently officially appointed as the director and is happy to be working in northeastern Michigan.

Keller makes his home in Alpena and recently returned to the area after working in Isabella and Grand Traverse counties.

He has spent nearly 30 years in social work, in a career that began as a treatment specialist at Boyssville of Michigan (Holy Cross Children's Services) in 1982. Keller worked for Holy Cross services for more than a decade, promoting to family counselor and eventually program manager. He began his career with DHS, serving as a child welfare licensing consultant, a family-to-family coordinator, services supervisor and a second line program manager.

He was raised in Alpena. "I have a connection in northeastern Michigan. This is home," Keller said. "It's nice to be back and I'm looking forward to continuing to work with the partners we have in

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor,
 For as long as I can remember, every Fourth of July, my family and I have visited my grandparents, who live in Harrisville.

Looking forward to the activities of the weekend, my family and I have made it a tradition to participate in our favorite event -- the sidewalk chalk art contest.

Sadly, this past year, the chalk art contest was not held because of the new sidewalks that the city put in. It is sad to think that family fun would be forfeited to temporarily preserve the appearance of a sidewalk. Who deemed this as vandalism?

In today's economy, those seeking an inexpensive respite would more likely come to participate in a chalk art contest then viewing new sidewalks.

Elizabeth Tennes, 15,
 Charlotte, Mich.

This traditional holiday, known as the "Spring Festival," is the longest and most important of the year in Chinese culture, marking the end of winter. Symbolic floral displays are given as gifts - plum blossoms and sunflowers for good luck, kumquats and narcissus for prosperity, and eggplants representing good health.

The Harrisville DHS office was closed several years ago due to budget reductions and Keller said he understands the need for more presence for residents in Alcona County. "A lack of an office has led to a number of problems...Transportation is a major issue with clients," he said. "However, we've made some major strides (to overcome the office closure) but, we have a long way to go," Keller said.

He explained the Harrisville branch of the Alcona County Library has computers available for DHS clients to use to apply for programs online. "All public assistance programs are available online at www.michigan.gov/mibridges," Keller said. "They can sign up, check benefits and make changes online." Lady Tigers improve to 2-0 in conference

By Dan O'Connor
Special to the Review

The Alcona girls varsity basketball team turned two tight games midway through the second quarter into solid wins last week at Rogers City and against Oscoda at home.

In Rogers City the athletic Hurons proved to be a tough matchup for Alcona early on. The Lady Tigers trailed 9-4 at the end of the first quarter.

Karina Cole helped jump start the Alcona offense with a 10 point burst in the second quarter and pushed Alcona to a 23-15 lead at the half.

The teams traded baskets in the second half until a late Lady Tiger run finished off the pesky Hurons.

Alcona was led by Cole with 22 points and 11 rebounds; Ashley Smith added eight points and Amy Nowak notched 15 rebounds.

In their second conference game Alcona hosted Oscoda on January 12. Midway through the second quarter the Lady Tigers led by five points until a late 10 to zero run pushed the Alcona lead to 25-10 at the half.

The story of the second half was the Lady Tigers defense which held Oscoda to two field goals and the Alcona team offensive effort. Nine Lady Tigers scored for the night piling up 15 assists. Alcona was led by Kayla Rasmussen with 10 points and 11 rebounds while Smith added nine points. A. Nowak chipped in seven points and 11 rebounds.

Alcona is 8-0 in the season and 2-0 in the conference. They travel to Tawas January 19 in a battle for first place in the Huron Shores Conference and then to Au Gres on Tuesday, Jan. 24.

Tigers' winning streak comes to an end

By Ron Yokom
Basketball Writer

The Alcona boys varsity basketball team's five game winning streak came to an abrupt end Wednesday, Jan. 11. Bay City John Glenn roared into town on a five game winning streak of its own, but that was accomplished in one of the hot beds of Michigan basketball -- the Saginaw Valley.

With poise, deadly shooting, and a smothering man-to-man defense they slowly took apart the Tigers and won 64-44.

Alcona competed very well in the first half, actually leading 15-13 after one quarter. Even scoring was the secret as six different players scored at least a basket. The game was tied three times and the Bobcats led only once 13-12 before William Bates came off the bench to hit a three-pointer to close out the first quarter.

The second quarter was more of the same as the game was tied four times. After Jared Steiner hit a three-pointer to tie the game at 22,

John Glenn outscored Alcona six to three and led 28-25 at half time. At this point the Tigers had competed with John Glenn and it looked like we had a battle that would be decided in the final minute of the game.

There must have been a wake-up call in the visitor's locker room at halftime because the Bobcats came out more aggressive on defense, began shooting the lights out and led 48-35 heading into the final period. To this point the Bobcats had hit nine three-pointers for the game.

The fourth quarter was more of the same as John Glenn outscored Alcona 16-9 to put the game away.

The Bobcats must have scouted the Tigers because they shut down the Tiger's leading scorer, Bryan Layton, holding him to a season low of four points. Brock LaVergne led Alcona with 13 points and 11 rebounds. No one else had more than three rebounds. Steiner added 12 points, Bates and Andrew Chamberlain added five points each, Brandon Gibson had three and Andy Cammack scored two.

One bright spot was Bates who played well off the bench. It could earn him more playing time in the future.

The Friday game with Oscoda was cancelled because of bad weather and will be made up February 15.

The junior varsity team saw its undefeated season disappear as the junior Tigers were soundly defeated 74-47. Trenton LaVergne again led with 16 points.

SENIOR LIFESTYLES

How to find senior airfare discounts

Dear Savvy Senior,
Do airlines still provide discounts to seniors on their airfares? My husband and I are retired and like to travel and are wondering which airlines offer the best discounts to budget conscious seniors.
Frugal Travelers

Dear Travelers,
While senior airfare discounts are not nearly as common as they used to be, there are a handful of carriers that still offer them. Here's a run-down of the different airlines that are currently offering senior airfares, along with some tips to help you find the best deals.

The only U.S. airlines that are currently offering senior airfare discounts are:

- Southwest which has discounts on all domestic routes to passengers 65 and older. For details on fares call (800) 435-9792 or you can search online at southwest.com.

- American which offers some senior fares to travelers 65 and older on their American, American Eagle and American Connection domestic flights. Call (800) 433-7300 to find out which flights offer these discounts. You cannot search specifically for senior airfares on American's aa.com website.

- United has some discounts on select flights to those 65-plus but they are few and far between. To search for them, visit united.com and select "child or senior" from the dropdown menu. When the site returns your fare quote, the results for your search will indicate the type of discount you are receiving, if one is available. You can also call (800) 241-6522 to find out if a senior discount is available for a particular flight.

- Continental which is merging with United in a few months has senior discount fares as well on very few flights to passengers 65 and older. To search, visit continental.com and click on "Advance Search" to access the "seniors" category, or call (800) 523-3273.

- Delta has senior discounts that vary by age and apply only to flights from three Latin American nations - Panama, Honduras and Ecuador. Call (800) 241-4141 to inquire.

When shopping for cheap plane tickets, it's important to know that many of the airlines regular discount fares or online specials are usually cheaper than the senior discount fares. So, to ensure you get the best price available, you need to compare prices and options from all carriers.

To help you do this, your best resources are online travel sites like orbitz.com, travelocity.com and kayak.com. These sites will let you search for the lowest priced flights on all the different airlines at the same time. They will not, however, let you search for senior fares.

Once you find a flight with the lowest fare that fits your schedule, look up similar flights on the different airlines that offer senior fares (Southwest, American, United, Continental and Delta) and compare. You can do this either online at their respective website (with exception of American and Delta), or by calling their reservation department number. This will ensure you're getting the best deal.

Another tip that can help you save is to be flexible when you travel. Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday are typically the three cheapest days of the week to fly, while Friday and Sunday are the most expensive. And the cheapest time to fly is typically the first flight out in the morning.

The day of the week you purchase your tickets can also affect the price. Airlines usually post their lowest domestic fares on Tuesday at 3 p.m., Eastern Standard Time. Sales typically last three days so you stand a decent chance of getting bargains on Wednesday and Thursday too.

(Send your senior questions to: Savvy Senior, P.O. Box 5443, Norman, OK 73070, or visit SavvySenior.org.)

Winter no excuse not to exercise

Senior News Line
By Matilda Charles

Are you tired of winter? You're not alone. Too many of us have cocooned as temperatures have dropped, often not leaving the house for days or more.

We need to get moving, one way or the other, and here are some ways we can:

Look for exercise programs on TV, especially if you have cable. "Sit and Be Fit" is a show with exercises for seniors and others with physical limitations. All the exercises are done while seated. Check the website (www.sitandbefit.org) to learn where the show airs on public television. If you have On Demand, look at the Exercise TV section for other workout shows. Look for the walking in place programs or those geared to seniors.

Check into Tai Chi or QiGong classes geared to seniors. These are gentle, flowing movements that can be done even sitting in a chair if balance is an issue. (They'll help with strengthening core muscles, which actually can help with balance problems.)

If transportation is a concern (or if you don't like driving in winter) ask if the senior center has a van that can pick you up for classes. Parks and recreation also is a potential source of rides, as is social services. You're more likely to go to your class if someone is coming to pick you up!

If you're in an area with snow and ice (but are otherwise sturdy on your feet), look for indoor places to walk. Schools sometimes open their halls after hours and indoor malls open early in the morning.

If you're determined to walk for exercise, look into grips that attach to shoes. Search the Internet for "Stabilicers" and ask if your local shoe store can order something similar.

Students make clay bowls for community fundraising event

The Oscoda Lions Club and Richardson Elementary Middle School teacher Jamie Merdzinski's art classes are working together on a unique community service project.

The local Lions Club helped provide clay to the classes and is working in the classroom to help students make bowls which will be used and sold at the upcoming, "Souper Bowl Supper" and Art Show on Friday, Feb. 10.

"This project is meant to bring awareness to all the empty bowls in the world. Many children and adults go hungry everyday in this community and throughout the world. This collaboration between our young children and our community service group is meant to show that by working together we can bring attention to this global problem and hopefully help in some small way," said Lions Club member and project chairperson, Yvonne Mallak.

"We wanted to find a way to not only bring awareness to the children in our schools about Lions Clubs and the many ways that Lions around the world help those in need, but find a way we could work together on a community service project. We believe it's important that children learn early about getting involved in community service and volunteerism," Mallak said.

On February 10, the Lions Club, with the help of the art classes, will serve a Souper Bowl Supper at Oscoda High School from 5 to 7 p.m. The soup will be made by the Lions Clubs members and served "potluck style." Cost of the meal will be $3 for children ages five to 12, and $5 for 13 and up, and a maximum cost of $20 per family. Dinner will include soup, crackers, bread/rolls, dessert and drink. Tickets will be available from Lions Club members, or at the door the night of the soup supper.

Those present will have the opportunity to purchase the bowls which have been made through this project, as well as view other artwork done by the elementary and middle school student. By purchasing a bowl and taking it home empty, it serves as a constant reminder that there are millions of people in this world that have empty bowls every day of their lives.

Proceeds from the evening will be shared between the Lions Club to be used on some of its many service projects, and the children's choice of a charity which will focus on feeding the hungry.

Any questions regarding this project may be directed to Mallak at (989) 329-1415.

What a difference a day makes

By Kathryn Fritz Kniep
Columnist

"Time is tapping on my forehead, hanging from my mirror, rattling the teacup..."

~ Paul Simon

From time to time these past few weeks, I've found my thoughts turning to the people of Samoa. Just wondering how it's going there.

If you missed it in the rush of the New Year, during the last week of December, the Samoans made a great leap forward, moving from Thursday the 29th to Saturday the 31st and by-passing Friday altogether. The whole exercise was accomplished by shifting the International Dateline to the west of the little island, and the goal was to put them more in line with the schedule of its principle trade partners.

Prime Minister Tuilaepa Sailele Malielegaoi, (presumably also known as the keeper of the vowels) who proposed the change, explained it this way, "We're losing out on two working days a week. While it's Friday here, it's Saturday in New Zealand and when we're at church on Sunday, they're already conducting business in Sydney and Brisbane."

Malielegaoi is apparently a real out of the box thinker. In 2009, he enacted a law switching drivers from the left side of the road to the right, putting them more in line with New Zealand and

Puttin' On The Fritz

Australia - and presumably, at least at first, with other drivers who momentarily forgot about the law.

In reality, the change actually put things back to normal, since Samoa moved to the other side of the dateline in 1892, to facilitate trading with then trade partners like Hawaii. But since there are probably few folks around who remember the change 120 years ago, it seems like a new concept. And I wonder, as I said, how the folks of Samoa are doing in the wake of their lost Friday.

Regular readers know that fooling around with time is a concept I don't take to well. Daylight saving time - both falling back and springing forward - leave me with a strange sense of incorrectness for days, plaintively inquiring from time to time (no pun intended), "But what time is it really?"

My husband, who lived all over the world in his military days and adapts to such things much more easily than I, is fond of answering, "Well, it really is eight o'clock (or whatever). If you're asking what the time would be..."

It might really be eight o'clock, but for a long time after the change it just doesn't feel right to me and my internal clock. So I find it hard to imagine how difficult it would be to have a whole day suddenly disappear. In fact, up until the end of December, I didn't even realize it was an option.

Actually, I suppose it really is only an option if you're located right on the International Dateline. If we, located on the 45th parallel, decided to do it, I suppose we could only move ahead (or behind)

During the fourth quarter of 2011 the staff of the Lincoln branch of the Alpena Alcona Area Credit Union decided to raise money and collect food for families in need in their community. Staff members organized many different fundraisers. Candy bars, holiday ornaments and special "Santa Bucks" were sold at teller windows. The staff also held two bake sales. Their efforts raised $1,536.34 plus many pounds of food to help those less fortunate in Alcona County. Baskets of food, gas cards, and gifts were assembled and delivered to families in the community who were in need. The Lincoln branch also made a donation of $157.31 from the funds they raised to the Alcona Food Pantry. (From left to right) Lincoln branch staff members Lorna Dellar, Missy Stoner, Nick Bouchard, Stacey Hall, Brenda Bouchard, Nancy Somers and Michele Russeau pose with some of the items they collected to help needy families in their community. Courtesy photo.

StarWatch By Gary Becker - A Horizon for All Seasons

As I write these words near mid-January, my new North Face winter jacket hangs idly in the closet patiently waiting for winter to begin. Maybe we'll skip this dreaded season altogether and emerge into an early spring. I thought about this the other evening as I exited my SUV in a light jacket. It was about 6:00 p.m. Looking towards the NW, I spied a madly scintillating star across the street near the tree line. It was Vega, the brightest luminary in the constellation of Lyra the Harp. Vega is also the brightest star of the Great Summer Triangle, an asterism of two seasons ago, and yes, still visible low in the west and NW. I like seeing constellations at odd seasons of the year, such as winter's Orion the Hunter rising in the predawn hour of mid-August while watching for Perseid meteors. Now the winter group featuring Orion, Auriga the Charioteer, Taurus the Bull, Gemini the Twins, and Canis Major and Canis Minor, the big and little dogs are on the rise in the east at the same time the Great Summer Triangle is on the wane in the west. Due south at 6 p.m. and nearly two-thirds of the way up in the sky will be found bright Jupiter. To Jupiter's right and slightly higher in the sky can be found the four vivid stars that form autumn's Great Square of Pegasus the Flying Horse. Find the two stars farthest to the right in the Great Square and follow them downward towards the horizon. On the way, it will be impossible to miss radiant Venus to the right, the brightest object of the night except for the moon. Keep trekking downward and just before reaching the horizon will be lonely Fomalhaut of Piscis Austrinus the Southern Fish. Looking NE near the horizon, the bowl of the Big Dipper is beginning to point upward, a sure indication that winter, at least astronomically, must give way to spring. There are the leftovers and appetizers of all of the seasons along the lowly horizons. www.astronomy.org

STRANGE BUT TRUE
by Samantha Weaver

• It was noted 20th-century poet T.S. Eliot who made the following sage observation: "Some editors are failed writers, but so are most writers."

• The United States' first railroad was built in 1809 in Crown Creek, Pa., by a man named Thomas Leiper. It had wooden tracks.

• When the now-classic television show "Gilligan's Island" first aired in 1964, critics were not impressed. The review published in the San Francisco Chronicle said, "It is difficult to believe that this show was written, directed and produced by adults. It marks a new low in the networks' estimation of public intelligence." The show went on to air for three seasons and spurred three TV movie sequels.

• Believing that beards and long hair were too easy for enemies to grab, Alexander the Great ordered his soldiers to shave their faces and heads before going into battle.

• You hear a lot about the isolationism of Switzerland — the country that's always neutral in any conflict — but you might be surprised to learn how serious they are about it. The country's system of roads is mined in 2,000 places and can be demolished in the space of 10 minutes.

• Are you doing your share? If you've had a beer today, you've contributed to the approximately 90 million cans of the brew that are consumed by Americans every day.

• When the territory that later became the state of Alaska was purchased from Russia in 1867, the cost came out to about 2 cents per acre.

• It's not clear why, but it seems that fine hair grows faster than coarse hair.

Thought for the Day: "My father taught me to work, but not to love it. I never did like to work, and I don't deny it. I'd rather read, tell stories, crack jokes, talk, laugh — anything but work." — Abraham Lincoln

MOMENTS IN TIME
The History Channel

• On Feb. 3, 1780, in one of the most famous crimes of post-Revolution America, 20-year-old boarder Barnett Davenport commits a mass murder, killing a family of five at their home in rural Connecticut. Until then, crime was viewed as sinners losing their way. But Davenport's crime caused people to perceive criminals as evil and alien to the rest of society.

• On Feb. 2, 1812, Russians establish Fort Ross on the coast north of San Francisco as a source of growing food. The effort was not successful. American John Sutter bought Fort Ross in 1841 with an unsecured $30,000 note that he never paid.

• On Feb. 1, 1917, Germany returns to the policy of unrestricted submarine warfare in the Atlantic as it prepares to attack any and all ships. Two days later, the United States broke off diplomatic relations with Germany. Just hours after that, the American liner Housatonic was sunk by a German U-boat.

• On Feb. 4, 1922, the Ford Motor Company acquires the failing luxury automaker Lincoln Motor Company for $8 million. Ford's son Edsel eventually helped to convince his father to drop his famous rule: "You can have any color, as long as it's black."

• On Feb. 5, 1937, President Franklin Roosevelt announces a controversial plan to expand the Supreme Court to as many as 15 judges. Critics charged that Roosevelt was trying to neutralize Supreme Court justices hostile to his New Deal. By 1942, all but two of the justices were his appointees.

• On Jan. 30, 1948, Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi, the political and spiritual leader of the Indian independence movement, is assassinated in New Delhi by a Hindu fanatic. Known as Mahatma, Gandhi's persuasive methods of civil disobedience influenced leaders of civil rights movements, especially Martin Luther King Jr.

• On Jan. 31, 1950, U.S. President Harry Truman publicly announces his decision to support the development of the hydrogen bomb. In 1952, the United States successfully detonated "Mike" in the Pacific Marshall Islands. The 10.4-megaton thermonuclear device instantly vaporized an entire island.

six hours...or so. As I said, time isn't my strong point. I don't wear a watch and unless I have an uncompromising appointment, I tend to rely more on my own sense of time.

It's a pretty good one, too. As a general rule, I'll get up to go check the cake just about the time the oven timer goes off and when the Princess was younger, I often found myself looking up to check the clock just as her curfew rolled around. So the idea of just skipping over a whole Friday rather gives me the whim-whams.

What, for example, if that particular Friday happened to be your birthday? Birthdays are highly anticipated and celebrated events in our house. Oh, I know it would be perfectly possible to just cut your cake and blow out your candle on Saturday, but personally, I'd be left with the unsettling feeling that I'd lost "my" day that year, and would remain one-off for all the years to come. Unless or until they changed it back, at which time I'd feel even more discombobulated.

I'd be the first to agree that it doesn't make a great deal of sense. Nonetheless, my internal clock, as I said, is a strong one and I'd feel for the rest of my life like that particular birthday had fallen through the cracks or folded up in the end of the year calendar, and it just wasn't right.

I suppose working people might have appreciated going directly to Saturday from Thursday. Still, you'd think if they were going to take a day, they could have dispensed with Monday - one that most people would just as soon skip. And what if it was payday or you worked on an hourly basis? Would you just come up one day short in your paycheck (assuming you got one at all)? Far too complicated, if you ask me.

I recognize, of course, that time is only a concept, like money. There's nothing, after all, that says that a particular size and shape of green paper truly equals 100 pennies and another equals 500. It's only the fact that we say it does that makes it so. The same is true of time. And yet...

What if it was the day you'd scheduled to turn over a new leaf? Admittedly, most people tend to do things like that on New Year's (which, by the way, came first to Samoa of anywhere the world thanks to the day/time change) but sometimes these things are based on personal choices for whatever reason. Wouldn't the temptation be greater to just say "Oh heck with the whole thing?"

Our days are made up of little, but important, things. As someone who once had to stay home sick on the rare and long looked forward to occasion when I was finally supposed to serve as sixth grade hall monitor, I can tell you that the whole concept of a missed opportunity can loom large in your memory for a long, long time thereafter. And so I've been wondering how the folks in Samoa are faring, one day ahead of where they're supposed to be. I'd be willing to bet that some people are still feeling ill at ease. Maybe frustrated or annoyed or still feeling the void where that Friday was supposed to be. Despite being described as a culture where change is taken in stride, there have to be some Samoans who are muttering to themselves that the primary export of Samoa is coconuts and how often, really, does anyone need a coconut on an urgent basis? (That is, when they're not driving and muttering to themselves, "On the left. On the left." One would think it would be rare enough that when the situation did come up, one could just express mail the coconut in question.

All in all, I'm glad the land where I live isn't inclined to such timefoolery. For one thing, Congress would undoubtedly find all kinds of days that needed to be avoided, resulting in a totally catawampus calendar in no time at all (pun intended). And folks like me would be conflicted to the point of distraction.

No thanks. I'll take my time in one long unbroken spiral (with the exception of the days we fall forward and spring back) thank you. Just the way it was intended to be. I personally predict that in the near future, we'll see ads conjecturing that for just a few minutes a day, you too can give a poor Samoan back their Friday. That would be a donation I'd find hard to resist, time after time.
