

Sheriff's department investigates Black River man's death

By Cheryl Peterson

The Alcona County Sheriff's Department is investigating the death of a Black River resident.

According to Alcona County Sheriff Douglas Atchison, Alcona County 911 Dispatch received a call on Friday, June 1 at 11:25 p.m. from a male who said he was suffering from a self-inflicted gunshot wound. The call ended when the signal to the cell phone was lost. Dispatchers contacted the cell phone provider to get a location on the caller.

When deputies arrived at the residence in Black River they found Peter Bohlen, 51, deceased from a gunshot wound. "The incident is still under investigation pending autopsy results," Atchison said.

Lighthouse history timeline

- In 1855 a 3.5 Order Fresnel Lens was made in Paris, France by Henry Lapalte.
- In 1899 the lens was transported from Oswego, New York to the Sturgeon Point Lighthouse where it still remains active today.
- In 1941 the United States Coast Guard (USCG) closed down the Sturgeon Point Lighthouse. The facility was abandoned, and some buildings on the grounds were torn down for safety reasons. Vandals stripped the keeper's house of lumber, doors, electrical fixtures, stairs and railings.
- In 1961 the federal government deeded the property to the State of Michigan, excluding the tower, the Fresnel light and 4.85 acres adjacent to the tower that the Coast Guard retained because it still had an active aid to navigation device. The state owns the majority of land at the Sturgeon Point site including the lightkeeper's quarters attached to the tower, the dividing line runs right through the breezeway between the lightkeepers' quarters and the tower.
- In 1982 the Alcona Historical Society began restoration, rebuilding, painting, and grounds work with a $10,000 grant from the

Atchison will run for second term as sheriff

Alcona County Sheriff Douglas Atchison has announced his candidacy for re-election. He has served as sheriff for five years.

Atchison, who was born and raised in Alcona County, has been with the Alcona County Sheriff's Department since 1983. He spent 10 years as a deputy and then 14 years as the undersheriff. He was appointed as sheriff in 2007 after then sheriff, Douglas Ellinger retired. He ran for the position in 2008 and was elected.

"Thirty-one years ago this spring I started my law enforcement career, and I am proud to say that I've gained all my law enforcement experience where it counts - Alcona County," Atchison said. "As sheriff I set a goal for myself to have the citizens of Alcona County recognize a more friendly and approachable law enforcement agency, therefore gaining respect for my staff by providing respect towards the community.

"When first elected sheriff I recognized the financial hardships felt by the community along with county government. I continually work to lighten the financial responsibility on the taxpayers of Alcona County and prevent law enforcement services from being reduced. I work shoulder to shoulder with county government to show the importance that a solid law enforcement agency holds within the community. I have actively sought and received alternative funding sources in excess of $125,000 and am proud to say that the citizens of Alcona County and their safety have prevailed. "I have shown my leadership abilities to the community, my dedication to service and ask for your continued support on August 7," Atchison said.

Historical society gains support to make improvements to Sturgeon Point Lighthouse

By Mary Weber
Staff Writer

The Alcona Historical Society may have moved a step closer in the process of obtaining grant funding to keep the Sturgeon Point Lighthouse maintained as a pivotal point of interest and tourism in Alcona County.

In an effort to gain long term leases with the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) and the United States Coast Guard (USCG), Alcona Historical Society President Linda Klemens contacted State Representative Peter Pettalia and Senator John Moolenaar as well as the DNR and USCG in an attempt to resolve problems the society has been battling for almost 30 years - getting long term leases in order to secure grants for maintenance and improvements to the 113-year-old structure.

During an open meeting on May 30, historical society members met with DNR managers as well as representatives from Pettalia and Moolenaar's office. For years the historical society has been denied grants desperately needed to maintain the Sturgeon Point Lighthouse, but has been refused due to the complexity of ownership of the lighthouse and a mountain of red tape issues and challenges from several entities including the DNR, the State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO) and the USCG.

Since 1982 the Alcona Historical Society has requested long-term leases with the U. S. Coast Guard (which owns the tower) and with the DNR (which owns the buildings and surrounding land), but has only been given one year leases.

In 2009 the historical society applied for a $20,000 matching grant from the Michigan Lighthouse Assistance Program which was reviewed by the State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO) and was denied for two reasons: The society had no long term lease with either USCG or the DNR and there was no Lens Assessment and Maintenance Plan.

The group continued caring for the grounds and has been able to keep the site open to the public through fund raising events, gift shop sales and donations while working on obstacles keeping them from grant monies to make necessary improvements.

In January of this year Kurt Fosburg, a lampist with Superior Lighthouse Restoration, LLC sent a copy of his assessment and maintenance plan for the Sturgeon Point Light Station's 3.5 Order Classical Fresnel Lens.

The assessment was performed to evaluate the current condition of the lens, any stabilization or preservation necessary, and to determine any requirements necessary for long term display of the artifact at its current location. Fosburg's report stated "Overall the lens is in very good condition, clean with no evidence of insect or bird intrusion and had very little dust. The bronze framework had beautiful dark and even patina with virtually no oxidation present from improper polishing compounds in the past. There was no evidence of trauma to the glass prisms other than normal chips and cracks." The report also stated the litharge (the white compound which secures the focusing wedges and prisms in the bronze framework) is approximately 90 plus percent intact and solid."

Despite the clean care and solid condition the lamp is in, Fosburg's report stated concerns with the lighthouse tower where the lens is housed. It was Fosburg's opinion that the lens is in the worse possible location for visitation and recommended that if public access to the lens is desired, it should be removed from the tower and displayed in the lighthouse keeper's station.

According to Klemens moving the lamp is no easy feat as it cannot be removed in pieces and must remain intact; meaning the top of the lighthouse tower would have to be removed in order to attach crane hoists to move it into a new location. The new location would also require a number of renovations as the lens would need to be displayed in a climate controlled setting with UV protection and encased so public could view it but not touch the lamp. The historical society believes the cost would be in excess of $100,000. "A cost the historical society simply cannot afford without grant funds," Klemens said.

Members of the historical society who attended the meeting, as well as the DNR also had concerns about how the move would affect the integrity of the tower and its historic value to visitors. "Another important issue is the housekeeper's quarters being in desperate need of a new roof which the society cannot afford to repair," Klemens said.

A representative of the United States Coast Guard was invited to join the meeting and was asked to bring a replica of the type of light they would use to replace the Fresnel lens if it should be moved. No one from USCG attended to the meeting.

The absence of USCG, however, did not stop the DNR from communicating its desire to help the Alcona Historical Society. Ray Fahlsing, DNR manager of the state park system said "One of the things that are complicating things here is the dual ownership between the Coast Guard and the DNR. As I understand one of the major hold ups for transfer of the Coast Guard property, the tower and the lens to the DNR was the lens maintenance plan.

"The study has now been done. The study has made recommendations and I have no strong opinion as to what's the best way to go. The historical society has been working hard here for 30 years to preserve it and I think we will value strongly what your (historical society's) feelings are about this. The sticky point is what the Coast Guard will accept. Whatever we come up with has to be acceptable to the Coast Guard."

Fahlsing also said, "I'm not sure why a long term lease has not been accomplished. It's one of the goals we (the DNR) has for properties like this is to get out of a short term lease. We prefer to have a long term lease."

Anna Sylvester, DNR district manager for Parks and Recreation, said, "We can certainly give you a long term lease for the property the DNR has, but we cannot give you a lease for the Coast Guard property." Sylvester also indicated that the society may be able to obtain grants with availability of long term lease with just the DNR.

"The good news," Fahlsing said, "the recreational passport which is the new way the parks are funded has earmarked a certain percentage for cultural resources and some of that money has been set aside for Sturgeon Point. We have $36,500 for the housekeeper's quarters which are available to use this year to put a new roof on the dwelling. We (DNR) value this as an important cultural resource and it is important for tourism in this area."

The DNR suggested that it would be an advantage for everyone who came to the lighthouse to have the ability to see the Fresnel lens and an option may be to put a web cam on the lens in the tower allowing visitors to view it on monitors in the housekeeper's quarters. Another option would be to have a replica made of the lens which Klemens looked into and found an acrylic replica of the 3.5 Order lens would start at $50,000 to $75,000.

Klemens said the historical society will start immediately at the next meeting to make a decision and come up with a statistical analysis of two options: Remove the lens from the tower and put it in the keeper's quarters versus leaving it in the tower and including safety factors, American Disability Act considerations and timeline."

Klemens ended the meeting by saying "Thank you, this has just opened doors unbelievably, you (the DNR) have told us things that we've just worked and worked and worked on and never got anywhere and your input has been very helpful."

Employment Recognition

Northland Area Federal Union recently recognized Brenda Nowiski for 10 years of exemplary service. She began her career at Northland in May of 2002 as a senior accounting clerk. She advanced quickly to assistant accounting coordinator and accounting specialist. In February of 2009 she was promoted to assistant vice president of internal controls.

Nowiski lives in Mikado with her husband, Sheldon, and two children, Brooke and Shane. She is active in her community and is a volunteer for AYSO soccer, Girl and Boy Scouts and is involved in her church.

Northland Board Member Jean Thomas, formerly supervisory committee chairman, stated, "It has been my privilege to work with Brenda during my time on the supervisory committee. She has continued to grow in knowledge and has taken on additional responsibilities during her tenure at Northland. She has become one of our most valuable resources. Members and employees alike are fortunate to have her looking out for their interests. We congratulate her on 10 years and we certainly hope she has many more."

To Alcona County Residents

I've been your Alcona County Road Commissioner for 3.5 years now, the first 3 were hard but there has to be a turning point. Requirement of my job is to ensure that every decision is made in full public view so that the average citizen can see what the Road Commission is doing.

Too often the public minutes in the papers are not all Road Commission comments and important problems are ignored. Month after month the issues are ignored hoping that they will just work themselves out. The Road Commission is in an income shortfall...we have a crisis! I am being open and transparent with the public concerning this problem and it's my legal responsibility. Poor policies lead to a constant state of struggle and severely limits the effectiveness of the Road Commission.

Operating under an informal policy of (that's the way we've always done it) isn't cutting it. The Road Commission is crying out for reform and I don't know of any 100% foolproof way to run it. My position must be to always take the extra step in caution to ensure that any potential conflicts are addressed from the onset of any issue in full view of both my board members and the public. As an added safeguard, make sure that they are also in full view of the local media which they aren't and this has to stop.

As a Road Commissioner I can either be acceptable but the address is important to perception of the public eye, I am only as good as the public perceives me to be. If the public thinks I am doing a great job, I am, if they don't, no matter how hard I try, I am not. It may be harsh but it is reality.

In the past I have felt the pulse of the general public about the Road Commission's management and the board, it hasn't been good. Public input is essential to provide good roads.

Faced with decreasing revenue, increasing expenditures including skyrocketing fringe benefit cost.

I am proposing:

- 1) Someone in management (non-union) has to go.
 - 2) I have asked for a five percent cut in wages for all management and some feel as if I am holding them hostage.
 - 3) Health care is killing us, a lot could be done here!
 - 4) I am talking real cuts not gimmicks. I've not come this far this long for the talk around.
- To my fellow Road Commissioners, we all know talk is cheap and action will get the job done. The Road Commission is crying for reform to save the jobs that are still there.

Growing pots of herbs

Just one sunny windowsill will do for growing pots of herbs. Moisten lightly, as too much water will rot them. Trim often to prevent an overgrown appearance. Add freshly-cut sprigs to soups, salads, sandwiches, roasts and fish. A little goes a long way with fresh herbs, so use sparingly!

SENIOR LIFESTYLES

Top senior-friendly cellphones

Dear Savvy Senior,
What types of simple cellphones can you recommend to seniors that are easy to use, without all the bells and whistles? My 77-year-old mother has had a cell phone for two years but never uses it because she finds it too confusing.

Shopping For Mom

Dear Shopping,
While smartphones garner most of the attention in the mobile phone world today, there are still a number of companies that offer simplified cellphones that are specifically designed for boomers and seniors who want one for the primary purpose of making and receiving calls.

Created by GreatCall nearly six years ago, the Jitterbug (greatcall.com, 800-733-6632) continues to be the best senior-friendly cellphone on the market. This custom designed Samsung flip-phone offers a big numerical keypad that lights up, extra-large text on a brightly colored screen, and "yes" and "no" buttons to access the phone's options versus confusing icons.

It also offers voice dialing, an ear cushion that cups around your ear to improve sound quality, a powerful speakerphone, a 24-hour Jitterbug operator who can place calls for you and optional features like voicemail, texting, medication reminders, 5Star personal security service, a live nurse service to answer your health questions any time, night or day, and more. The Jitterbug J sells for $99 with a one-time $35 activation fee, no-contract and calling plans that start at $15 per month.

If you're looking for something a little less expensive, the Doro PhoneEasy 410 sold through Consumer Cellular (consumercellular.com, 888-345-5509) is also an excellent option. This flip phone offers a large separated keypad, with a bright easy-to-read color display screen and huge text. Other features include a vibrating ringer, easy text messaging, a two-way speakerphone, and a one-touch emergency SOS button on the back of the phone to contact help when needed.

The Doro 410 sells for $25 with service plans starting at $10 per month, a one-time $35 activation fee and no long-term contract. They even give a five percent monthly service discount to AARP members.

Two other senior-friendly phones to check out are the Just 5 (just5.com, 800-709-0509) that costs $90, and the new Clarity Pal (clarityproducts.com, 800-426-3738) for $100. Both of these cellphones have big buttons, amplified sound, a "talk back" feature that speak the numbers as their dialed, an "SOS" button that can automatically call your emergency contacts if needed, and they're both sold as "unlocked" phones, which means they can be used on any GSM network like AT&T and T-Mobile.

Another option you might want to consider is to get your mom a simple cellphone through your cellphone provider. Most carriers - including AT&T, Verizon, Sprint and T-Mobile - still offer basic cell phones for people who like things simple.

This option is also very affordable. An extra line can be added to your family shared plan for around $10 per month, and the cost for these phones is very low. The following are some of the best basic cellphones that are recommended by the different carriers.

If you're an AT&T customer, the Pantech Breeze III, which costs $30, is a good choice for seniors. It has a big spacious keypad, a bright display screen, large fonts, and offers voice command capabilities, and three "one-touch" easy access keys located below the phone's display screen. It also has both an easy and advanced mode to suit customers with different comfort levels.

For Verizon users, consider the LG Revere. Retailing for $80, this is a basic flip-phone that has a bright two-inch display screen and offers one-touch access to three emergency numbers, voicemail, speakerphone and voice commands.

If you're a Sprint customer, the M370 by Samsung is recommended, and it's currently free. And T-Mobile users should consider the $30 Samsung t259.

Long live the queen

The family of Donna Morang would like to thank everyone for the cards and prayers during the hospital stay and loss of our mother and grandmother.

By Kathryn Fritz Kniep
 Columnist
"Her Majesty's a pretty nice girl, but she doesn't have a lot to say..."
 ~ The Beatles

In my family, we've always had a soft spot for the queen (that would be Queen Elizabeth II of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland). For starters, she looks a little like my mum. Maybe it's the predilection for hats and handbags.

Admittedly, it's hard to imagine my mother walking a brace of corgis on multiple leashes or hunting and shooting any animal. On the other hand, it's not at all difficult to imagine Mama ruling the British Empire, so it balances out.

Anyway, Mama had a fascination with the British monarchy, as she did with the Kennedys, and given her love of sharing history and trivia, we all kind of grew up feeling like we knew both families. For most of his life, I've rather viewed Prince Charles as the dorky son of your mom's best friend who you hang out with at all the family dinners but wouldn't go to the movies with on a bet.

So I've enjoyed watching the Queen's Diamond Jubilee begin to unfold. A flotilla of 1,000 boats (a nod to Queen Elizabeth I's launching down the same river in the 16th century) is a pretty snappy way to begin a celebration, particularly when as queen you take your place on a 90 foot yacht covered in flowers. After all, the British Navy once ruled the world and the collection of barges, ships and military boats were matched by a one-man kayak, rowboats and six boats from the original Battle of Dunkirk.

As I watched the boats make their way down the river in the rain (and by the way, it rained hard on Elizabeth II's coronation day, as well) I couldn't help but imagine the conversation between she and Phillip regarding this particular event.

"Yew know, Phillip, I've been thinking perhaps a flotilla might be the way to go."
 "A flotilla? Smashing idea, Liz - we hardly ever use the boats anymore."

"And we wouldn't have to have people back for lunch. Remind me to pick Charles up some seasick patches, won't you?"

Not everyone, of course, is celebrating. While six million royal fans stood in the rain to cheer her on, a small group protested the Diamond Jubilee and its cost and PETA (who can always find something to object to) protested the serving of foie gras.

Another element of my fondness for the queen rises (as it were) from her height - or the lack thereof. Officially, the queen is listed as being five feet, three inches tall. Those close to the palace contend that she's more accurately about five foot, making her just my height. It's good to know that a short, slightly portly lady can still breath fear into her family, the staff and if necessary, the House of Parliament.

One of my favorite memories of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth happened on a visit to America during the Bicentennial in 1976. Stepping to the mic to speak, Queen Elizabeth simply disappeared, hat and all. After a moment of confusion on the part of the cameramen, it occurred to the White House staff that she needed something to stand on in order to be visible above a podium designed for the six foot Gerald Ford.

During the same visit, the White House band swung into "The Lady is a Tramp" just as the queen and President Ford moved to the dance floor. On another visit, after George W. Bush inadvertently said she'd helped to celebrate independence in 1776, he gave her a wink and an elbow nudge. She must just love to come to the US.

"They're such barbarians, Phillip, but you know - the food is always quite lovely."

We make fun, in our family. We invent conversations. But it's difficult not to admire this 86-year old who has held the throne longer than any monarch but her namesake, Elizabeth the first (and has only three years to go to break that record). On Sunday and a year ago at her grandson, Prince William's wedding, she proved that she remains lovely, both in face and manner, with a grace that is timeless.

It's hard to imagine what it must be like to become the reigning monarch of the British Empire at the age of 21. According to the history books, she was awakened in the middle of the night on a visit to Kenya and told that her father, King George VII, had passed away and that she would ascend the throne. "The king is dead, long live the queen."

She has had 12 prime ministers, from Winston Churchill, who met her at the airport after her father's death, to the current prime minister, David Cameron, who this week praised her "extraordinary level of physical energy, mental energy, and above all devotion to her people, to the institutions of this country, to the way our democracy works."

Puttin' On The Fritz

Early on, she led the people of London through the bombings of World War II. When she and Phillip married, she collected ration coupons for the fabric for her dress, just like any other British citizen would. Her support for her grandsons and her subjects came through at the loss of her former daughter-in-law, Princess Diana, when she was criticized by those who did not recognize her firm hand on the tiller, accusing her of being cold.

Those who know her describe her as fun - a loving grandmother who enjoys teasing her family. I was delighted to read a report a few years ago that said one family member presented her with a "singing fish" plaque for Christmas - and that she was enchanted with it.

And you have to love a lady with six dogs. The current census at the palace includes three corgis named Monty, Willow and Holly. The other three are "dorgis" Cider, Candy, and Vulcan, (a mix between a corgi and a dachshund). Depending on which story you choose to believe, the dorgis were either first intentionally bred by the queen or were the result of an accidental meeting between one of her corgis and Princess Anne's dachshund, Pipkin. To the extent that she can, she keeps them with her and cares for the dogs herself.

Her children, too. A working mum, she's raised four children and helped with eight grandchildren and most recently, her first great grandchild. And if that's been a rocky road from time to time, well, the queen herself said, "Like all the best families, we have our share of eccentricities, of impetuous and wayward youngsters and of family disagreements."

So God save the queen, as she celebrates her 60 years on the throne. She's been the ruling monarch many of us have known for all of our lives. At her coronation, a young woman barely out of her teens and still dealing with the loss of her own father, she said this: "I declare before you all that my whole life, whether it be long or short, shall be devoted to your service and the service of our great imperial family to which we all belong."

Well done, Elizabeth Alexandra Mary Windsor. I'd say you've kept that promise spot on.

(Kathryn Kniep has contributed to the Alcona County Review for more than 30 years. She has published fiction, nonfiction and poetry in several venues. She and her husband, Art, live in Harrisville. The couple has one daughter, Katrina - "the Princess," two dogs, Lady and Henry, and grand-dog, Bastian, all of whom are frequent victims of her column.)

Basketball players from Alcona County and the surrounding area are going to get a chance to improve their skills as the Jason Otter Basketball Camp comes to Alcona High School Saturday, June 9.

This sold-out camp will be an opportunity to develop ball handling and shootings skills for basketball players of all ages. Many have been waiting since signing up in February and are anxious to meet Jason Otter and get out on the court.

Jason Otter has played professionally in the United States and overseas. He played with a full-ride scholarship for Division 1 Austin Peay in his college years. Otter also has a degree in special education, health and physical education with a minor in psychology.

His attention to detail and a driven work ethic and ability to work with kids of all ages have helped him become one of the most popular basketball camp instructors around the world. As quoted on his website, "If you want to be the best player you can be, work harder and smarter, make everyone around you better on and off the court, then Otterbasketball is for you. Otterbasketball is a 21st century approach to training basketball players."

For enthusiastic basketball hoopsters this weekend should be one to remember.

Happy Father's Day!

Give your Dad the gift of time. Pack a bag with binoculars, a field guide, a sketchpad, some colored pencils and lunch. Scope out your favorite park or go to the beach, lake or river. Have a birding adventure with your Dad. I'm sure he'd love it.

Cook, a retired probate judge, is known for his marquetry pictures of Alcona County landmarks. The board is pleased to have one of his original art works commemorating the clinic. It will be hung in the waiting room of the Lincoln clinic for all to see. Courtesy photo.

NASCAR REPORT

Kahne, Hendrick back in gear

NASCAR This Week

By Monte Dutton

Could it be that Kasey Kahne has finally turned the corner?

Kahne, 32, won his third Coca-Cola 600 at Charlotte Motor Speedway on Memorial Day weekend, meaning that four of his 13 career victories at the Sprint Cup level have occurred at the 1.5-mile track, where he also won the Sprint All-Star Race in 2008.

But Kahne, who is from Enumclaw, Wash., has never finished better than eighth (2006) in the point standings. This year, Kahne's first at Hendrick Motorsports, began slowly, but now he has reeled off consecutive finishes of seventh, eighth, fifth, fourth, eighth and first, advancing from 31st to 15th in the standings. The latest CMS victory was important in terms of one of two wild-card slots in the Chase for the Sprint Cup, but, with 14 races remaining in the regular season, Kahne is only 42 points behind 10th place Carl Edwards. The top 10 automatically advance into the Chase.

"The win's really important for us to make the Chase and keep moving up in the points," Kahne said. "You've got to win to make the Chase."

"We just need to stay after it and keep doing the things we've been doing."

Kahne and teammate Jimmie Johnson are the hottest drivers in the sport. Although Roush Fenway drivers Greg Biffle and Matt Kenseth are atop the point standings, it would be premature at this point to suggest Hendrick isn't still NASCAR's best team.

"Our team is solid," Kahne said. "Our car is solid. Mr. Hendrick gives us everything we need to win races and run up front. Finally we were able to put it all together."

"But next week (Dover) will be a new show. We have to figure it out again next week in practice. It's just tough. The competition is stout. It's hard to just move through the field and pass cars because everybody is so fast. The cars are so competitive right now, it makes it difficult."

Guests at the famed Grand Hotel on Mackinac Island have long been drawn by the rich history, postcard-perfect views and natural surroundings that many would say surpass those found nearly anywhere else on the planet.

Every year, hundreds of thousands of people make the scenic trek to Michigan's "crown jewel" – but this year, there is a more artistic pull; a special showcase in honor of Grand Hotel's 125th anniversary, that will likely speak sweetly to the inner artist, historian and explorer in everyone.

Now through October 7 visitors to the island's Richard and Jane Manoogian Mackinac Art Museum will be treated to "Mackinac's Grand Hotel" – a juried exhibition that features private-collection pieces; historic items from Mackinac State Historic Parks' collection from the hotel's history; and selected artwork from both amateur and professional artists for public display.

"Grand Hotel is a readily identifiable and much treasured part of Mackinac Island's history," said Phil Porter, director of Mackinac State Historic Parks.

"With the important anniversary upon us, we wanted to find a very simple yet powerful way to help the public make a stronger connection to the history of this place that has touched so many people," Porter said.

"Through art, artifacts and all kinds of hotel keepsakes, the exhibition helps to tell a story about this iconic establishment and the people who have walked its grounds over the years," he said.

The Grand Hotel opened in 1887, mainly as a summer retreat for vacationers in the region who would arrive by lake steamer from Chicago, Erie, Montreal and Detroit, as well as cross-country rail travelers who wanted to see what the grand excitement was all about.

According to Mackinac State Historic Parks Deputy Director Steve Brisson, who planned and compiled the exhibition, that anticipation was – and remains – well founded for every visitor who steps onto the Grand's celebrated front porch and wanders throughout the hotel.

That fascination and wonder are exactly the feelings Brisson hopes the current exhibition will inspire.

"This important anniversary afforded a unique opportunity for us to share special pieces from our collection that are usually not visible to the public," he said. "Because the exhibit is housed in the art museum, we put a major emphasis on showcasing the aesthetics of Grand Hotel – everything from the décor and architecture to the design of their dinner menus."

"Dining at Grand Hotel is one of the key experiences and a central part of the hotel's history," Porter said.

Over the last 125 years, the menu offerings and china patterns have changed and specimens of early china are rare. According to Porter, from 1900 to 1918, Grand Hotel was jointly managed with Planter's Hotel in St. Louis, Mo. The plate features Planter's Hotel Company logo in the center, which includes two oval devices representing Grand Hotel on Mackinac Island and Planter's Hotel in St. Louis.

Porter also cited a soup plate branded with the letters PGH, which stands for Plank's Grand Hotel. During its first three seasons, the Grand was known by this name as a condition of manager John Oliver Plank.

"Family tradition holds that hotel employees were allowed to take home chipped china," Porter said. "This piece was passed down through the family."

Every facet of the exhibition is infused in some way with the unique flavor of life on Mackinac Island and the understanding that any stay at the Grand is, naturally, grand.

Whether through photography, painting, sculpture or creative staging of prized items from the private collection, the "Mackinac's Grand Hotel" exhibition pulls visitors in, escorts them through a remarkable past and celebrates the bright future of this proud piece of island lore.

"What I find quite special is the way the older pieces work with the newly created artwork," Porter said.

He complemented the work and critical eye of the exhibition jurors: Valerie Mercer, the first curator of African American Art and head of the General Motors Center for African American Art at the Detroit Institute of Arts; Vince Carducci, assistant dean and interim chair of fine arts at the College for Creative Studies in Detroit, Mich.; and Marlee Brown, an artist who has studied at the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the National Academy of Design

St. Joseph Health System Foundation awards 10 education scholarships

St. Joseph Health System Foundation hosted its fourth annual Scholarship Celebration on Wednesday, May 30 awarding $4,000 to 10 area students.

Through the generosity of St. Joseph Volunteers, Dr. Patrick and Kathleen Murtha and private community donors, more than $20,000 has been gifted to 59 students since the program's inception in 2009.

The $1,000 President's Scholarship was awarded to Lisa Winters, a 16-year associate working as the lead histology technician in St. Joseph's laboratory department. She is pursuing a registered nursing degree.

Two $500 Community Scholarships were awarded to Shanna Britt and Lindsey VanderVeen, 2010 and 2011 graduates, respectively, of Tawas Area High School. Eight $250 Dependent Scholarships were awarded to the following graduating seniors: Justine Alderete, Kieran Clarke and Evan Dennis of Oscoda; Andee Boyle, Keith Finley, Lindsey VanderVeen and Jordan VanderVeen of Tawas; and Benjamin Jurek of Standish, Mich.

Health System leaders, volunteers and community members evaluated scholarship applications from more than 20 applicants, who were scored on a written personal statement, letters of reference, grade-point average and extracurricular and volunteer community activities.

Shelley Buresh, executive director of SJHS Foundation said, "It is always such a pleasure to celebrate with students and their families this wonderful milestone in their lives. We continue to consider it a privilege to work in partnership with our community and award gifts on behalf of the generosity of our donors."

StarWatch By Gary Becker - Clear Sky Eclipsed

"I never look at a weather forecast," says my friend, Jesse Leayman. "What will be will be." I, on the other hand, ponder through the data trying to get a perspective on the upcoming atmospheric events as if I have some magical power to will the movements of highs and lows into their most favorable positions. When Jesse and I arrived at Chaco Culture near Nageezi, NM for eight nights of camping and to view the May 20 solar eclipse, the long and short range forecasts look very favorable. No sooner had we set up our campsite, then the sky grayed and sheets of rain came cascading over North Mesa, a befitting welcome to a desert park that has had more than its fair share of cloudy nights when I am in residence. But after a sumptuous dinner of cheese dogs, the sky cleared over Gallo Campground revealing a bewildering plethora of stars in the dimming light, and that is the way it stayed for the next eight days and nights. We did have one cloudy afternoon with a raindrop here and there, two dust storms that put a fine layer of grit over everything, but each evening cleared. So you can imagine my trepidations as eclipse day approached with one sunny day after another. It would just have to be cloudy on May 20, but it wasn't. In fact, e-day had the best weather of our entire stay. Stationed near Casa Rinconada, the largest Ancestral Puebloan kiva at Chaco, Jesse and I watched the slow inexorable movement of the moon courting the sun, the decreasing shadow intensities over a purpling landscape, the cooling of the air as centrality drew near, and the ring of fire surrounding Luna that was created by a smaller moon too far away to hide the sun completely. When Sol finally set behind West Mesa still partially eclipsed, and the landscape began to purple for the second time that day, I realized that this was the first solar eclipse I didn't have to "chase down" for a clear sky. On that day, the eclipse came to me. www.astronomy.org

Staying safe online

Dollars and Sense
By David Uffington

Keeping updated anti-virus software on your computer is a good start to staying safe online. But, it's only a start. You need to take more steps to safeguard your information and your family. Online safety is a complicated business, but here are a few things to keep in mind:

—If you have a number of devices linked together in a home network, such as cell phones, laptops, storage and gaming consoles, you'll need to make sure that all are safe from access. Your network safety is only as strong as the weakest link on it.

—Be sure your router is set to WPA2, the most secure network privacy setting. You'll be required to type in an ID and password, the longer and more complicated the better. This will protect you from those outside who might try to piggyback on your network, either for their own access or to steal your data, or to turn your computer into a remote computer for their own use.

—Beef up your security with a firewall, either the one in your computer or one that comes with your anti-virus software. Install good spyware to keep others from following you around the Internet. Run malware scans frequently.

—Stay off social networking sites until you have a thorough understanding of the security settings. If you have children, be sure they're old enough to know not to disclose where they live, the school they attend or even their real name. Use online names that have nothing to do with who they really are. An innocent remark in a public chat room about going away on vacation can lead burglars to your door while you're away, if paired with other personal information. And don't let your children use flash drives belonging to their friends.

—Remember that what you post online stays forever. While you might think it's OK to tell someone that you went to the XYZ Farmer's Market just down that street, that information will be there for anyone to read years from now. If you post photos, make sure they were taken with a digital camera that's had the GPS location tagging turned off.

StaySafeOnline.org has a wealth of information to help ensure that you and your family — and your gear — are safe. Read the Fixing Problems section just in case. If something happens, you'll know what to do quickly and whom to contact.

Hurry up and wait

Veterans Post
By Freddy Groves

Too many veterans have waited far too long for mental-health care.

The Office of the Inspector General at the Department of Veterans Affairs was asked to look at whether the Veterans Health Administration is accurately recording the wait times for mental-health services for both existing and new patients.

Policy states that if a veteran calls in and asks for help, he or she is to be seen within 24 hours.

If after the initial evaluation the veteran is not immediately given services (hospitalization or outpatient care), a more-comprehensive evaluation must take place within 14 days. This would include a diagnostic and treatment plan.

VHA is to calculate wait times by figuring the days from the desired date of care to the date of the actual appointment. This assumes, of course, that the right date is entered into the system.

The VAOIG determined that: 1) VHA doesn't have a reliable way to determine whether it's giving services on time; 2) VHA doesn't provide initial appointments within that 24-hour window; 3) Veterans are waiting far past that 14-day window for their treatment plan appointments.

As always, the devil is in the details.

The VA's own 2011 performance report claimed that 95 percent had their evaluation within 14 days. Not so, said the VAOIG. The VA's inaccurate calculations were based on the time between the actual appointment date and the time the evaluation was complete ... often on the same day, which looked like a wait of zero days. It wasn't calculating how long it took to get the appointment, which might have been weeks.

The VAOIG looked at selected records and determined that only 49 percent of veterans had their evaluation within 14 days. The average wait was 50 days to get a full evaluation.

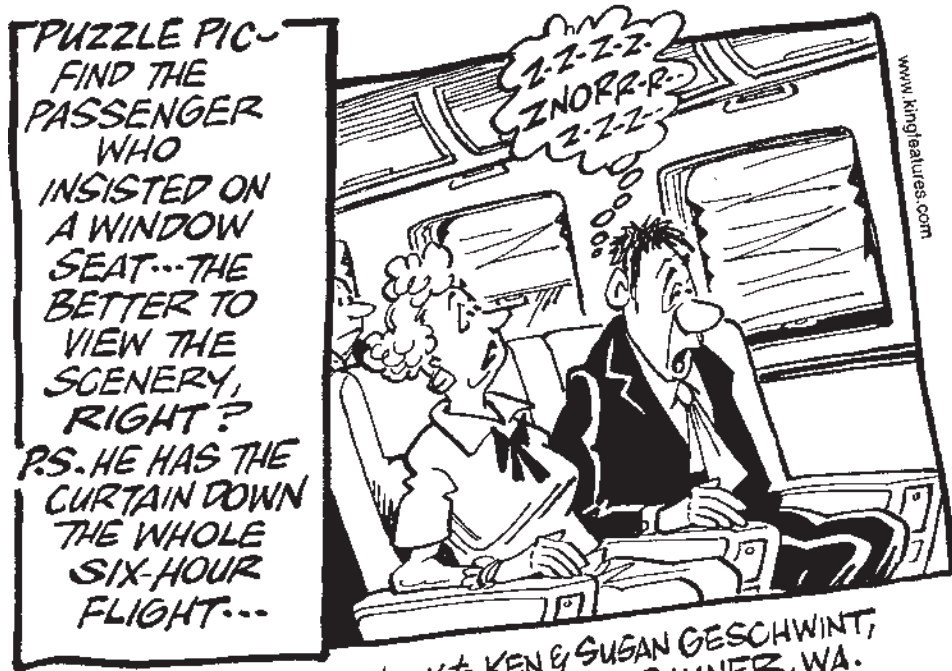

Fifty days is a long time for a veteran who is seeking help.

To read the whole report, go online to www.va.gov/oig/pubs/VAOIG-12-00900-168.pdf.

STRANGE BUT TRUE
by Samantha Weaver

• It was pop art icon Andy Warhol who made the following sage observation: "It's the movies that have really been running things in America since they were invented. They show you what to do, how to do it, when to do it, how to feel about it, and how to look when you feel about it."

• If you were like the average rabbit, you would take 18 naps every day.

• You probably know that the 1939 film "The Wizard of Oz" was based on the book "The Wonderful Wizard of Oz" by L. Frank Baum. You may not realize, though, that Baum wrote a total of 14 Oz books between 1900 and 1920. The series continued even after the author's death; Ruth Plumly Thompson produced one Oz book every year between 1921 and 1939.

• Those who study such things say that wine was being drunk more than 7,000 years ago, in ancient Sumeria.

• When the Coca-Cola Company first started marketing its product in China, the advertisements used Chinese symbols to spell out the brand's name phonetically. It was only after the ads had been published that the marketers learned that those symbols spelled out the phrase "bite the wax tadpole."

• The manufacture of a single domestic automobile requires the use of a whopping 39,000 gallons of water.

• Every year, about 10 percent of the world's population visits a zoo. In the United States, though, about half of us make such a visit annually.

• Most people have about 100,000 hairs on their head. It's not clear why, but redheads tend to have somewhat fewer hairs — about 90,000 — while blondes have more.

• On June 21, 1788, New Hampshire becomes the ninth and last necessary state to ratify the Constitution of the United States, thereby making the document the law of the land. Massachusetts had initially opposed the document as it failed to reserve undelegated powers to the states.

• On June 23, 1902, German automaker Daimler-Motoren-Gesellschaft (DMG) first registers "Mercedes" as a brand name. The famous Mercedes symbol, a three-point star, was registered as a trademark in 1909.

• On June 24, 1915, young German fighter pilot Oswald Boelcke makes the first operational flight of the Fokker Eindecker plane. The Fokker was equipped with machine guns that could fire straight ahead through the aircraft's propellers. The precise timing of the propeller blades allowed them to avoid being struck by the machine gun bullets.

• On June 18, 1923, the first Checker Cab rolls off the line at the Checker Cab Manufacturing Company in Kalamazoo, Mich. The shipment stood out as a major landmark in the history of the company, which by then employed some 700 people.

• On June 19, 1953, Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, who were convicted of conspiring to pass U.S. atomic secrets to the Soviets, are executed by the electric chair at Sing Sing Prison in Ossining, N.Y. Both refused to admit any wrongdoing and proclaimed their innocence right up to the time of their deaths.

• On June 22, 1964, Dan Brown, author of the international blockbuster "The Da Vinci Code" as well as other best-selling thrillers, is born in New Hampshire. Brown's novels are known for involving symbols, conspiracies and secret societies. His first novel, "Digital Fortress," was published in 1998.

• On June 20, 1980, in a match in Montreal, Roberto Duran out-points "Sugar" Ray Leonard to win the World Boxing Council welterweight title. Yet, five months later in a rematch, with less than 30 seconds left in the eighth round, Duran looked at the referee and famously uttered the words "no mas" or "no more," giving up.

"Our hope is that when people walk among these pictures, mementos and original artwork they will feel a very real sense of the long, rich history of this important hotel - and how even the most ordinary of days can be transformed into a once-in-a-lifetime experience because of Grand's inviting, unique
