

Gov. Snyder visits Alcona County Fair

By Cheryl Peterson
Editor

The Alcona County Fair was off to a high profile start Tuesday, with a visit from Michigan's highest official - Governor Rick Snyder.

Gov. Snyder visited with Alcona County residents as he walked through the livestock barns, the Campbell Building and along the fair grounds. He spent roughly 40 minutes talking to residents, posing for photographs and answering questions.

Alcona County was the last stop on a week-long tour of the Upper Peninsula and lower northeast Michigan. "We did a lap around the U.P., making 47 stops in four days," Gov. Snyder said Tuesday afternoon. He explained the purpose of his tour was "a chance to highlight Pure Michigan and visit the places that epitomize that campaign. It is also a chance for him to listen to citizens and hear what they have to say about issues.

The comments he's been hearing are "mostly positive, but that more needs to be done," Gov. Snyder said. "Things are getting better... I'm finding that in general people in communities are working better together to solve some situations... One of the topics that keeps coming up is the need for improved education in the skilled trades - so that people can have the background they need for the jobs that are available."

When asked if high school curriculum requirements that focus primarily on getting students prepared for college were hindering that avenue, he said, "I think we have to be careful that we don't jump on making too many changes... We need to make the classes practical for the jobs (across the board). We just had a demonstration where someone needed to solve a welding problem and they needed math to do that."

When asked about the issue of the state's role in funding school districts he said it was important to "keep focusing on student growth - because the state funds on the number of kids enrolled... We have increased K-12 funding - an increase of $652, on average, per student..." Gov. Snyder said the issue of inequity for some school districts under Proposal A was something that needed to be corrected over time.

Gov. Snyder admitted that a lack of jobs was an issue he'd heard repeatedly on this tour. However, "A lot of private sector jobs have been created. We've seen a lot of positive progress and that is a good sign. However, that intersects back to the need for individuals who are skilled for the jobs that are available in industry, agriculture... If you go to mitalent.org you will see there are about 50,000 jobs in Michigan - most of which are in the skilled trades."

When asked by a student reporter what was being done in regard to financial aid for

Gov. Rick Snyder waves to residents as he tours the Alcona County Fairgrounds Tuesday afternoon. He was presented with an Alcona County Fair baseball cap by Alcona County Board of Commission Chairperson Kevin Boyat when he arrived. Gov. Snyder spent about 40 minutes touring the grounds, answering questions, shaking hands and posing for photographs. He visited with college students, he talked about the dual enrollment programs that high schools have for students where they can finish high school courses and take college classes at the same time. "While this isn't an answer to financial aid concerns, it does help the students save money for the first year ... but we also have the K-12 funding issue."

Harrisville Harbor dredging could begin soon

By Mary Weber
Staff Writer

The dredging of the Harrisville Harbor, which has been plagued with problems concerning proper permits, seems to be making some progress and the chairman of the Harrisville Harbor Commission is optimistic the work will begin soon.

Part of the permitting process required sediment sampling, testing and survey work. Neal Gehring, chairman of the Harrisville Harbor Commission said testing of seven sediment samples taken earlier this summer have determined the sediment sighted for dredging is "pretty clean," but has less sand than anticipated. "After coordinating test results with Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) it was decided disposal of maintenance dredged sediments would occur along the shoreline, south of the harbor. Upland disposal was also possible environmentally, but certainly not monetarily for the commission," Gehring said.

He didn't have a dollar figure for the cost of having the material dredged and disposed in the lake versus upland disposal, stating the answer was intuitive. "You dredge the harbor and pump the material back into the lake from where it came. In order to truck the material inland and upland, you need to construct a diked area to initially hold the dredged material," Gehring said.

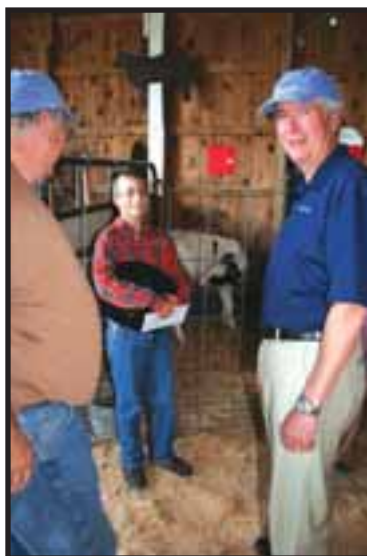

"The dredging process may need to be slowed down in order to allow the extra water in the dredged material to drain out of the diked area. The dredged material then needs to be loaded from the diked area into trucks to be hauled, dumped and spread into the final disposal area." Gehring said the shoreline disposal area starts at Main Street and extends 2,500 feet south. It extends from the shoreline, to the six-foot depth contour.

When asked if the dredged material would be a concern to shoreline property owners, Gehring said, "It could be, but this is the same disposal area that is in the existing Army Corps of Engineers permit which we've had the last nine years. I presume this disposal area (which is one of three allowed under that permit) was a result of the public coordination effort at that time."

"I have been advised that the no dredge period in that permit (from Friday before Memorial Day through September 15) was selected so that dredging would not oc-

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor,
The towns of Lincoln and Harrisville have been transformed with new lights, trees, flowers and needed paved roads. Everyone is so proud.

The Lincoln Lake is next door and attached to the Twin Lakes Cemetery in Hawes Township. It is in a beautiful setting and could use attention. A sexton can't do it alone.

At one time I was told that the cemetery was not the responsibility of Gustin. On family plots there are tombstones with names we all recognize and are welcome.

People who moved away because of the economy are planning to come back and be buried with loved ones, many have already returned.

One of my family plots is located in the Civil War Section since 1907. It has room for more. Those were the horse and buggy days.

The damaged fence is over 100 years old. Gravel roads are difficult to walk or drive on especially for outdoor services. Some are very narrow.

The beautiful old trees need professional trimming and dead shrubs removed.

Veterans from the wars would be honored to have an attractive resting place, a quiet beautiful place.

What can we do for all our cemeteries in Alcona County?

cur during the summer months and little to do with fish and bunny environmental considerations," Gehring said.

An exclusion from this no-dredge period has been requested and is expected this week, he said.

The Harrisville Harbor Commission has applied for two permits to the DEQ -- a one-time permit to dredge up to 5,000 cubic yards over five years; the second permit, the joint DEQ and Army Corps of Engineers permits which, by a joint application, results in two separate permits, allowing up to 20,000 cubic yards of dredging over five years.

The harbor commission also holds an existing Army Corps of Engineers permit which expires at the end of 2013. Gehring anticipates the one-time permit will be received any day and the other is expected in about eight weeks after a public review period. The new Corps permit would be anticipated in about that same eight week time frame.

Gehring said he believes the Corps contacts adjacent property owners, et cetera during the 30-day public review period and advises to contact Gina Nathan at the Corps (313) 226-5383 or email Gina.R.Nathan@usace.army.mil to find out more information about the review period.

According to Scott Rasmusson from the DEQ Water Resources Division, the process of their review is a public notice which allows comments by adjacent and affected property owners and local government entities 20 days to post comments about the project on the MDEQ's costal inland water website at <http://www.deq.state.mi.us/ciwpiis/> or submit your comment or by mail to MDEQ 2100 W. M-32, Gaylord, Mich. 49737 and reference the file No. 13-01-007-P.

Gina Nathan from the Army Corps of Engineers office said letters will be sent out in the next week to the Corps data bank of property owners adjacent to the dredging area and to list of governmental entities for their comment and feedback during the public review period. Public notice can be found at <http://www.Ire.usace.army.mil/Missions/Regulatory-ProgramandPermits/Public-Notices.aspx>.

Should the exclusion from dredging in the summer months arrive this week, and coupled, with the one-time permit from DEQ, dredging could begin immediately. The exclusion would also allow dredging in the entrance channel area, a dredge area which was requested in the one-time permit.

Dredging could still take place twice in Harrisville this year, once by Alcona Dredge, the dredge contractor for Harrisville Harbor and also under the State of Michigan's Emergency Dredging Program (EDP) Contractor.

Gehring has been in contact with John Bernard of Alcona Dredge who is in Indiana and expects to be there for a couple more months. According to Gehring, Bernard said that once all the permits and exclusions are received allowing Alcona Dredge to start he would let Gehring know when he could be back in Harrisville. Bernard also indicated it would take a week or so to clean out around the docks with his equipment.

"Our goal is to have Alcona Dredge in as soon as possible and the EDP contractor in after the DEQ permit allowing up to 20,000 cubic yards to be dredged is received. The EDP contract work could be deferred to next year if the permitting actions take longer than anticipated," Gehring said.

Deputy Chas Neff and marine officer Brock LaVergne also assisted with the afternoon youth event at the Lincoln Lions annual car show. Photos by Cheryl Peterson.

Assistance programs that help seniors with health care costs

Dear Savvy Senior,

Are there any programs that you know of that help seniors with their Medicare expenses? I'm 67 and live primarily on my Social Security, and am having a hard time paying my Medicare premiums, deductibles, co-pays and prescription drug costs.

Need Some Help

Dear Need,

There are several financial assistance programs that can help Medicare beneficiaries who are having a tough time paying their out-of-pocket health care costs. Here's what's offered, along with the eligibility requirements and how to apply.

Let's start with a program that helps lower-income Medicare beneficiaries pay premiums and out-of-pocket costs for Medicare Parts A and B. It's called the Medicare Savings Program (MSP), and it has several different benefit levels for people with different financial resources. At its most generous the program will pay your Part B premium and pretty much all your Medicare deductibles and coinsurance. At its least generous the program will pay just your Part B premium.

To qualify for a MSP, the minimum standard set by Medicare, is an income under 135 percent of the federal poverty level, which at the moment works out to around $1,313 a month for individuals. Everything counts towards income, including payouts from 401(k) plans, pensions, Social Security, and help from family members. Medicare also allows states to impose an asset test, which can be as little as $7,080 per individual, not counting your house or car but counting retirement savings and bank accounts.

But some states have made their MSP programs a lot more generous, with much higher income limits and in some cases no asset tests at all. And the program may be called something else in your state. To find out if you qualify or to apply, contact your local Medicaid office - call (800) 633-4227 for contact info.

For help with your Medicare prescription drug plan costs, there is another completely separate program called Extra Help. To get it, you'll need to apply through your local Social Security office.

Depending on exactly how low your income is, the program will pay all or part of your Part D prescription drug plan premium and deductible, a hefty chunk of your copay, and totally eliminate the doughnut hole coverage gap. In 2013, individuals with an income below $1,436 a month, and assets under $13,300 can qualify for extra help.

If you're eligible to be in a Medicare Savings Program, you will automatically qualify for Extra Help. But because the requirements are slightly different, even if you don't qualify for a Medicare Savings Program for Part B you might be able to get Extra Help for Part D. For more information or to apply, call Social Security at (800) 772-1213 or visit socialsecurity.gov/prescriptionhelp.

To help you find out if you're eligible for these programs, use the National Council on Aging Web-based tool at benefitscheckup.org. You'll need to fill out an online questionnaire that asks things like your date of birth, ZIP code, expenses, income, assets and a few other things.

Once completed you'll get a report detailing which programs you may qualify for, along with downloadable application forms and, in the case of extra help, allow you to complete your entire application online. The program even knows the specific MSP eligibility rules in your state.

Or, if you don't have Internet access, contact your State Health Insurance Assistance Program (SHIP), who provides free one-on-one Medicare counseling in person or over the phone. To locate your local SHIP, call the eldercare locator at (800) 677-1116.

Hello, is there anybody else here?

By Kathryn Fritz Kniep
Columnist

I met my granddaughter last week.

No, she hasn't been born yet - we've got about two and three-quarters months to go until her birth day. But if "meeting" someone is when they become real to you, then we've met.

The occasion was the Princess' second ultrasound appointment. I wasn't able to make her first one and from what I could see in the blurry black-and-white prints, it appeared at that point that she was gestating a manta ray. A cute manta ray, but a manta ray, nonetheless.

Now, for a lot of grandparents and parents out there, this whole experience is old hat. Not for me. When I was expecting, the closest ultrasound was in Ann Arbor, Mich. and used largely for emergencies. I'd had diagnostic ultrasounds, but I'd never seen a baby's ultrasound before.

Ever since the Princess told us the news - and later, the news that the baby was a girl - I've been trying to imagine this granddaughter I'd begun to think I wouldn't live long enough to see. Kate is hoping for a redhead, but then, so did I and the hospital presented me with a bald, baby who became a blonde.

From time to time, I'd look at my big, strapping son-in-law and wonder if we might get a tall, strong-shouldered Dutch child. That would be fine, of course, but it might take some getting used to in a family of short, squat Irishers. Would her hair be curly like Kate's and mine, or straight like her dad and her grandfather's? Would she be inclined toward girly-girl dresses or be more of a jeans and T-shirt kind of girl? Far outweighing all those considerations, would she be all right? Would all the right things be in all the right places?

Until recently, Kate's been keeping me up on the baby based on her reading and, interestingly enough, the medical field's tendency to refer to her in terms of fruit. "She's the size of a lemon," she told me at three months. Then an orange, a grapefruit, and my favorite - a mango. I loved the idea of little mango-baby, but it didn't give me much of a mental image. And so I was excited about our appointment. I didn't realize just what an amazing event it would be.

Once Kate had drunk the requisite half an ocean of water and waited the designated time, we were ushered into a dimly lit room. "This is my mom," Kate told the tech. "Hi, mom," the tech greeted me cheerfully. Then she squirted some gel on Kate's tummy and began to move her magic wand around.

Sitting on the sidelines, the lighting and my recent lunch were making me a little sleepy. Until, that is, the squiggles and lines on the computer screen came into focus. Then, I sat up straight and leaned forward, straining to see everything I could.

Because there, in living black and white, was not a lemon or a mango, but a baby. A perfect shot of a profile I recognized at first sight. The image blurred a bit as I remembered running my finger down a tiny, upturned nose so like the one I was witnessing. "Oh," Kate sighed happily, "I haven't seen her in so long."

The tech was great. Maybe she was doing it for "Mom's" benefit or maybe she was always this thorough, but she whipped her magic wand around, showing us her back, her arms and legs, even her sweet little tushy. She turned on the sound so we could hear the heartbeat.

Puttin' On The Fritz

And then - and I know it couldn't have happened quite this way, but this is how I remember it, that little girl swam up to the camera and held up her tiny hand. I could see her closed eyes, her itty nose and her lovely mouth, formed into a little pout that her own mom might want to get used to. Then, with a flip of her teeny feet, she turned and swam away.

My computer screen is blurring again as I replay it in my mind.

Oh, baby, I should have known you'd be a mermaid. You're the third generation of Huron girls, after all, and the maidens of the lake are Grandma's favorite creatures. I purely can't wait to walk you along the shore and show you the pocket treasures to be found. To point out the stars above us and the lady in the moon and teach you the wonder of wishing. More than that, child of my child, your little hello made me ache to hold you in my arms and sing you all the songs of the water that's been your first Earthly home.

We'll go on wildflower walks and wait to watch the train go by, and Grandpa will show you what happens when you put a penny on the tracks. As soon as you're old enough, I'll sneak you your first taste of the amazement of chocolate.

The tech was nice enough to print us three pages of photos, including one of that first face-to-face encounter. Funny, it captures the nose and the pout, but it isn't quite like I remember. That's okay, though.

I'll tell you over and over again about the day I met you - and the day, I truly believe, that you met me. I won't forget, promise. It's engraved on Grandma's heart.

Invasive species outdoor workshop set on Curran property next month

The Alcona Conservation District's Forestry Assistance Program (FAP) and Natural Resource Conservation Service is hosting a Forest Invasives Field Day outdoor workshop.

The aim of this event is to educate private landowners about current and impending forest health threats and invasive plant species that currently endanger Michigan's forests. Private landowners need to know what to prepare for and ways to mitigate the potential impacts from these threats.

Forest health concerns covered will focus heavily on threats common to the timber types found within Alcona, Iosco and surrounding counties. Presenters will discuss oak wilt, beech bark disease (BBD), Asian longhorned beetle (ALB), emerald ash borer (EAB) and removal of invasive autumn olive plant species and tactics to mitigate and limit the spread of all those mentioned above.

The outdoor workshop will feature the expertise of Conservation District Foresters: Andrew Beebe (Alcona/Iosco), Lora Freer (Ogemaw/Oscoda) and Ben Nowakowski (Alpena/Montmorency). Natural Resource Conservation Service (NRCS) employee Bryan Zabel will also be present to discuss forest health threats and field questions.

All presenters are natural resource professionals and have the practical knowledge and insight necessary to discuss a variety of forest health threats and invasive plant species. They will also be discussing where to go from here in terms of ash replacement in a post emerald ash borer world.

Participants can expect to learn about current and future health threats, damaging exotic insects, nonnative invasive plant species and methods of mitigating the spread of Autumn Olive.

The workshop will take place from 1 to 5 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 13 at the de Longpre property, 4047 North M-65, Curran. This site is located 3.2 miles north of the BP gas station in Curran, halfway between Hubbard Lake Trail and McCollum Lake Road. Signage will be posted along M-65.

A fee of $5 per person or $8 per couple is required to cover event costs. Informational handouts and knowledge will be available. This event is outdoors and covers uneven ground so participants should dress accordingly.

The Forest Invasives Field Day workshop is being made possible by partnership with the following organizations: Michigan Association of Conservation Districts, Natural Resource Conservation Service and Michigan State University Extension. Register for this event by Saturday, Sept. 1 by calling (989) 335-1056. Feel free to e-mail Andrew.beebe@macd.org or visit www.alconaconservation.org for more details.

Area workshops set for upcoming arts grant deadline

The Region 19 Regranting program of the Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs has set October 15, 2013 as the upcoming deadline for grant applications for 2014.

The Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs Region 19 Regranting program includes Alcona, Crawford, Iosco, Ogemaw, Oscoda and Roscommon counties. The deadline is for projects that fall within a timeline of January 1, 2014 through September 30, 2014.

New to the regranting program is professional development grants for arts professionals. Individuals or organizations can apply for up to $1,500 towards workshops, seminars or conferences to help develop skills to enhance the arts organization.

The minigrant program is a grants-giving partnership funded by the state of Michigan through the Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs (MCACA) and administered by agencies in each region of the state. Minigrants provide up to $4,000 for locally developed, high quality arts and cultural projects, which are special opportunities to address local arts and cultural needs and increase public access to arts and culture.

Minigrants support a broad range of artistic expression from all cultures through projects which preserve, produce, or present traditional or contemporary arts and culture. Non-profit organizations, located in the state of Michigan, including (but not limited to) service organizations, arts organizations, parks and recreational organizations, churches, professional associations, public and non-public schools, cities, townships and villages may apply.

Informational meetings will be held in each of the six counties for those interested in applying through this program:

- Alcona - Alcona County Library - Tuesday, Aug. 27 at 6 p.m.
- Crawford - Crawford County Library - Thursday, Aug. 29 at 5:30 p.m.
- Iosco - Call regranting coordinator for details
- Ogemaw - West Branch District Library - Wednesday, Sept. 4 at 5:30 p.m.
- Oscoda - Oscoda County Library - Monday, Aug. 26 at 5:30 p.m.
- Roscommon - Roscommon Area District Library - Wednesday, Aug. 28 at 5:30 p.m.

For more information regarding these meetings, call Beth Petrik, regranting coordinator, at (989) 275-5000 ext. 397.

The guidelines for both grants can be found on the MCACA Regranting website at: www.kirtland.edu/mcaca. To apply for these grants, go online to mcaca.egrant.net.

Anyone that would like a copy mailed to them, contact Petrik at (989) 275-5000 ext. 397, or e-mail at beth.petrik@kirtland.edu.

"Do you like green eggs and ham?"

"Would you like them here or there?"

"I would not like them here or there. I would not like them anywhere. I do not like green eggs and ham."

"I do not like them, Sam-I-am."

"Green Eggs and Ham"
 Dr. Suess

I have a deep, dark secret: I am not very adventurous when it comes to new or different vegetables. I like my usual standbys.

I know; I should follow the "walk the talk" rule. After all, I have spent the last 30 plus years counseling clients on the importance of eating a wide variety of fresh fruits and vegetables. Yet I find myself in the same dilemma as that poor soul that Sam-I-Am kept pestering relentlessly to try the green eggs with a side of green ham.

So, it is with some hesitation that I accept Cheryl Peterson's column idea for this month. Her suggestion? I should write about how to prepare some of the more "unusual" vegetables that are found at our local farmer's market.

Should I admit to her now that I have no idea how to prepare beet greens? That I am pretty sure I could not identify arugula in a line up? Not sure if kale is a color or a vegetable? Or just smile and agree to the assignment?

This probably means I have to actually taste them. Hmmm.

I arrive at the ARA Farmer Market in Lincoln early enough Saturday before all of the best produce is purchased. Perusing the vendors' fare, I fight back the urge to buy my usual: Onions, potatoes, cukes, zucchini. Instead, I examine each booth, bravely asking each vendor to identify and sell me a typically snubbed produce -- the vegetable that is usually left behind while their better-known vegetable cousins are bought up.

My first vendor, Ruth Merrick from Plenty Stone Farms in Lincoln, really got into this challenge. She started by waxing poetic about her Swiss chard, even jotting down a recipe for me to try. She has, in my opinion, the widest variety of "weird" vegetables at the market (meaning I have never tried them before).

After listening to her draw the similarities of chard to a vegetable I am familiar with and like -- spinach -- I start feeling somewhat confident that I can foray into the uncharted world of greens. She talked me into purchasing the Swiss chard, along with some kale and a bag of beet greens. I thanked her, a little dubious about the contents in my grocery bag, and continued on.

My next stop is Brian Bishop's Poor Farm Organics table. He, with the help of his 13 year-old-granddaughter, Alicia, are selling a lovely array of organic vegetables just picked from his hoop house on Poor Farm Road in Harrisville.

Alicia was glad to help when I asked her opinion about any vegetable she would consider ignored in favor of the more common choices. She didn't think any of her produce were out of the ordinary, but suggested maybe her pattypan squash may not be a typical vegetable for many. She presented these cute, little round yellow squash to me. I was, at that moment, feeling pretty foolish -- I was under the impression that these were strictly for decorating... it never occurred to me to actually eat them.

When I asked Alicia her recommendations on how best to cook these adorable members of the summer squash family, she said, "I can't decide. I like it a whole bunch of ways; I even like it raw." Ugh, shown up by an

The weeds of summer

By Mary Weber
Columnist

Every year about this time, after months of working, weeding and coaxing my flower beds to bloom, I sit back for a few days and feel content.

The contentment spawns from the fact that most of my easy to grow perennial flowers are in full bloom, the daylilies are still hanging on to a few late blooms, enough to add some red, yellow and orange splashes amid the daisies, coneflowers, black-eyed Susans and phlox.

These are my flowering standards which I rely on to bring color to my garden. Actually, due to my natural brown thumb, a lot of crummy clay soil and swampy areas -- along with deer and rabbits using my garden as their midnight snack spot, not much else seems to bloom in my garden. Well, nothing else besides weeds.

Horticulturists could argue the flowers I'm so proud of are really nothing but weeds, in fact most perennials are weeds, just some weeds are better looking than others. By definition a weed is a plant, especially a wild plant, growing where it is not wanted. To me a weed is anything that doesn't bloom with a fairly decent looking flower, something that takes over completely, strangling out the prettier blooms or something which could cause illness.

Most weeds are not threatening to our health and are easy to dispose of, however, some noxious weeds can be quite painful to extract.

My darling Wil found this out the hard way when a small patch of spinney nettle sent the man -- fully clothed, shoes, wallet and cell phone in his pocket -- jumping six feet into the river to try and wash off the burning effect the plant had on him. The cool, clean water did help; it actually took more time to dry out his belongings than to recover from the nettles sting. The event left a monumental mark on the man's memory though and except for occasionally weeding our ponds, Wil rarely ventures into the garden to weed.

Although it can reach greater heights, spinney or stinging nettle, Urtica dioica, generally grows about three to four feet high in masses. The plant has edgy saw tooth green leaves with noxious bristly hairs on the underside of the leaves and along the stems of the plant.

Stinging nettles spread via rhizomes and are often found bordering flower beds. The Latin root of its name, Urtica, means "burn" -- an encounter with the plant may cause an intense burning prickling sensation just after contact, followed by an itchy rash.

There are many other plants in northeastern Michigan which gardeners, hikers and any outdoor enthusiasts rash. This may happen when you touch clothing, pet fur, sporting gear, gardening tools, or other objects that have come in contact with one of these plants. Urushiol does not cause a rash on everyone who gets it on their skin.

The rash is not contagious. You cannot catch or spread a rash after it appears, even if Cow parsnip, blooming in July, is often confused with giant hogweed. Both are conspicuous, large plants and both may cause burning blisters. The giant hogweed is by far the larger and more dangerous of the two and has even been known to cause permanent blindness. While cow parsnip is prolific in the area, luckily, giant hogweed has never been sighted in Alcona County. Photos by Mary Weber.

must be mindful of and keep their distance.

Poison ivy is probably the most common plant which can cause a skin rash. The red, uncomfortable, and itchy rash often shows up in lines or streaks and is marked by fluid-filled bumps, blisters or large raised hives.

The rash is caused by contact with urushiol, a type of oil found in poison ivy, oak, or sumac. The oil is present in all parts of the plants, including the leaves, stems, flowers, berries, and roots. Urushiol is an allergen, so the rash is actually an allergic reaction to the oil in these plants. Indirect contact with urushiol can also cause the you touch it or the blister fluid, because the oil will already be absorbed or washed off the skin. The rash may seem to be spreading. But usually it is still developing from an earlier contact or you have touched something that still has urushiol on it.

The more urushiol you come in contact with, the more severe your skin reaction. Severe reactions to smaller amounts of urushiol may also occur in people who are highly sensitive to it. Serious symptoms may include swelling of the face, mouth, neck, genitals, or eyelids (which may prevent the eyes from opening).

Poison ivy may be an erect individual plant, or climb as a vine on fences or trees but it is most commonly found in

Queen Anne's lace, also known as wild carrot, may have a small purple-blackish flower in the middle of a cluster of white flowers which distinguishes itself from its parsley family cousin, water-hemlock, which is also blooming now. Both weeds grow in meadows of Alcona County, but only the water-hemlock also grows in swamps and stream banks. Handling the leaves of Queen Anne's lace may cause a skin rash in some people. All parts of the water-hemlock are deadly poisonous to humans when eaten.

epiprecocious 13-year-old. Alicia must have sensed my embarrassment, and tried pointing me toward more familiar territory -- small red potatoes, onions, and garlic. No. I am staying resolute in my quest. I purchase the pattypan and quickly note Alicia's favorite way to prep them: "Just slice 'em up, throw them in a hot pan with butter or olive oil, and eat."

My final stop is at Billie and Bill Thompson's table, representing White Barn Gardens Farm on M-72 west of Harrisville. Billie is already waiting for me with printed recipes in her hand (she must have known I was coming?). She wanted me to try eggplant. I remember having eggplant in some type of Greek or Hungarian dish years ago. It was okay at the time but, I was never sure how to cook the darn things. I reviewed her recipe. It didn't look difficult at all. I agreed to give it a whirl, and purchased some eggplant.

So here I am at home with my bag of grown-only-in-Alcona-goodies. And you know what?

Say Cheryl!
I like pattypan and kale!
And beet greens and Swiss chard!

And kohlrabi and eggplant!
I do!! I like them, Cheryl-I-am!

And I would eat them in a boat!

And I would eat them with a goat...

And I will eat them in the rain.

And in the dark. And on a train.

And in a car. And in a tree. They are so good so good you see!

So I will eat them in a box.
And I will eat them with a fox.

And I will eat them in a house.

And I will eat them with a mouse.

And I will eat them here and there.

Say! I will eat them ANYWHERE!

I do so like my new-found vegetables from the Alcona Farmers Market!

Thank you!

Thank you, Cheryl-I-am.

Sauteed Swiss Chard with Feta Cheese

- 1 Tbsp olive oil
- 1 tsp butter
- 1 large sweet onion, sliced thin
- 2 garlic cloves, minced
- 6 cups swiss chard, cleaned, coarsely chopped, stems removed
- 2 Tbsp water
- ½ fresh lemon
- Salt and pepper (to taste)
- ¼ cup reduced fat feta cheese

Heat a large skillet over medium-high heat. Add 1 Tbsp olive oil to pan; swirl to coat. Add 1 tsp butter, allow to melt, careful not to burn. Add 1 large sweet onion, sliced, saute 2 minutes or until tender, then add 2 cloves chopped garlic; sauté 1 minute watching that garlic does not burn. Add Swiss chard (I would remove stems, but that is up to you...you can leave them on) and 2 tablespoons water to pan; cook 3 minutes or until chard wilts. Squeeze ½ lemon over vegetable; sprinkle with salt and pepper to taste. Top with ¼ cup feta cheese. Serve immediately.

Spicy Baked Kale Chips

- Any or all of the following spices:
- 1/3 tsp garlic powder
- 1/3 tsp toasted ground cumin

- 1/3 tsp paprika
- 1/8 tsp cayenne (add 1/8 tsp for spicier chips)
- 1/8 tsp salt
- 2 Tbsp olive oil
- ½ lb kale (about ¾ a bunch), large stems removed, cut into 2 to 3-inch pieces

How to make it:

1. Preheat the oven to 350°F. In a large re-sealable bag, combine the spices, salt, and oil. Stir to dissolve. Add the kale, seal, and toss to coat.

2. Spread leaves in a single layer on two baking sheets. Try to flatten any folded-over pieces for optimum crispness. Bake until the tips of leaves are slightly crispy, about 10-15 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

a mat formation on the surface of the ground. Leaf size and shape are variable but it always has three leaflets from a common point, which is the reason most outdoorsmen know the saying, "leaves of three, let it be." The shiny green leaves of three turn brilliant red toward the end of summer. They are mostly oblong in shape and may have one or more irregular lobes along the side.

Poison oak is not really oak, but a sumac. It is called poison oak because its leaflets resemble the leaves of some native oaks. Luckily, according to the late Dr. William T. Gillis who did his PhD thesis on poison ivy with the help of Dr. John Beaman in the Herbarium at the Michigan State University Department of Botany and Plant Pathology, there is no poison oak in Michigan.

Other plants of caution that do grow in Michigan include some that look similar in color, but vary in size. Wild carrot -- a member of the parsley family otherwise known as Queen Anne's lace -- is abundant and blooming right now as is its close cousin, water-hemlock. The two plants look very similar and both plants grow in meadows, but only the water-hemlock grows in swamps and streambanks. Not many know handling the leaves of Queen Anne's lace may cause a skin rash in some people or that its deadly cousin, water-hemlock, is poisonous and life threatening when eaten. Cow parsnip, another of the parsley family cousins, is a tall conspicuous plant which can grow up to 10 feet, --but more commonly grows three to eight feet tall and is very prevalent in our area.

Its flat topped clusters of white flowers are similar to the lace of Queen Anne and water-hemlock but are much larger, nearly eight inches across. They generally bloom from early June through July. The stems of the cow parsnip are typically two inches in diameter, deeply ridged and are often covered with fine soft fuzzy hairs. Like Queen Anne's lace, the sap from cow parsnip can cause a rash and, when exposed to sunlight, the rash can turn into nasty burning blisters on some people.

Many often mistake the cow parsnip for its wickedly heinous cousin and look alike, giant hogweed. Giant hogweed is just as its name suggests -- giant. It can grow over 15 feet tall with very large leaves up to five feet across. Its stems are two to four inches in diameter, hollow, stout and ridged with purple blotches and coarse, white hairs. Plants in Michigan have been known to have stems approach 12 feet in height.

Like the cow parsnip, sap from the giant hogweed can cause photodermatitis, a severe skin reaction. Skin which has been in contact with the sap from the hogweed followed by exposure to sunlight may result in large painful burning blisters which later develop into purplish or blackened scars.

Because of its large hollow stems, its been said children will try to use the stems of giant hogweed as play telescopes, unfortunately, sap contact with the eyes can lead to temporary or permanent blindness. Luckily, there have been no sightings or reports of giant hogweed in Alcona County according to the Michigan State University Extension office.

With that said, it's no wonder my husband would rather look at the flowers than weed the garden. For me, proper attire, shoes, socks, gloves, protective eyewear and vigilant care is a must when tending the garden, a garden, which for now, I can finally sit back for just a little while and be content with.

Weekly fishing report available through toll-free telephone number

Starting Thursday, Sept. 5 the Michigan Department of Natural Resources' (DNR) Weekly Fishing Report will be available via a toll-free telephone number.

Anglers will now be able to hear the report, previously accessed by a Lansing-based number, without incurring any phone charges.

The Weekly Fishing Report is available in three formats: online at www.michigan.gov/fishingreport, via e-mail or over the phone. The report's current phone number is (517) 373-0908, but on September 5 that number will become (855) 777-0908. After September 5 the Weekly Fishing Report will no longer be available through the (517) 373-0908 number.

"We hope anglers will take notice of the Weekly Fishing Report's new telephone number so they can continue to get the latest news and information to help them plan their next trip," said Tami Pattison, department manager with the DNR's Fisheries Division.

When anglers call the new toll-free number, they will hear an overview of current fishing conditions in the state and then they will be prompted to select a section of Michigan they would like to hear a detailed report for (southeast Lower Peninsula, southwest Lower Peninsula, northeast Lower Peninsula, northwest Lower Peninsula or Upper Peninsula).

To access the Weekly Fishing Report online, visit www.michigan.gov/fishingreport.

On the outbound trip to Hanksville, Utah and the Mars Desert Research Station, one of our travelers, Sarabeth Brockley, purchased an extraordinary book titled, All Over the Map by David Jouris, Ten Speed Press, 1994. According to its subtitle, it is an "extraordinary atlas of the United States, featuring towns that actually exist!" There are artistic, natural, divine, historical, eccentric, everyday, personal, and miscellaneous maps with real town names that defy description. Under the subheading of "Natural," there is a heavenly map of the United States which hypes towns like Nova, Comet, Neptune, Aurora, Sunshine, Saturn, Seven Sisters, and dozens of other names which are astronomically slanted. We've all heard of Satellite Beach, Florida, near the Kennedy Space Center, but did you know that Florida also contains communities known as Jupiter, Venus, Sunrise, and Tropic? There is Half Moon, New York and Montana; and New Moon, Alabama; Moon, Oklahoma and Wisconsin; Luna and Los Luna, New Mexico; and Crescent, Oregon. And let's not forget about the sun either! There is Sunset, California; Sun City, Arizona and Kansas; Rising Sun, Illinois; Sunshine, Arkansas and Maine; and Ray, Minnesota. There is also Sunrise, Florida, a retirement community, according to Jouris, which was originally named Sunset, but no retirees came to retire to it. Once the name was changed, the community began to sell. For more exotic astronomical town nomenclature, try Ozone, Tennessee; Pluto, West Virginia; Draco, North Carolina; Milky Way, Tennessee; Orion, Illinois; North Star Acres, North Dakota; and Polaris, Montana. There is also Terra, Utah; and Earth, Texas among many, many others. It is a wild and wacky world of town names in All Over the Map, and the astronomically identified cities and towns of the US are just the beginning. www.astronomy.org

New to NEMCSA Board

Hospice Angelic Care Director Melanie Hayes has been named to serve on the Northeast Michigan Community Service Agency, Inc. (NEMCSA) Board of Directors to represent the private sector on the board. NEMCSA is a private, non-profit Community Action Agency - part of a state and national network of Community Action Agencies. The basic service area of the agency is eleven northeast Michigan counties that include: Alcona, Alpena, Arenac, Cheboygan, Crawford, Iosco, Montmorency, Ogemaw, Oscoda, Otsego, and Presque Isle. The agency is governed by a 33 member board of directors. Policy and fiscal matters as well as program and service issues are reviewed by the board to provide meaningful guidance to NEMCSA.

NEMCSA brings together federal and state grant funds as well as dollars from local private and public sources. These resources are then directed into programs which aid the poor and otherwise disadvantaged throughout the age spectrum, from preschoolers to the elderly of northeast Michigan. The funds include targeted dollars aimed at very specific problems as well as dollars which are more flexible in nature.

Hayes who has owned and operated local businesses in Iosco and Arenac counties for several years brings the entrepreneurial and health care expertise to help in the board's decision making process. Hayes received an associate registered nurse degree from Kirtland Community College, has several specialty certificates in alternative therapies including Reiki, aroma and reflexology and is also an ordained minister.

For more information about NEMCSA services call Karen Godi at (989) 358-4674.

STRANGE BUT TRUE by Samantha Weaver

• It was famed film producer and studio executive Samuel Goldwyn who made the following sage observation: "The most important thing in acting is honesty. Once you've learned to fake that, you're in."

• Sarah Bernhardt, the French star of stage and early film, who was often referred to as "the most famous actress the world has ever known" and "the divine Sarah," often slept in a coffin. She said it helped her to better understand tragic roles.

• Have you ever suffered from otorrhea? If you've had a pus-containing discharge from your ear, you have.

• In the original "Star Trek" series, a pair of the false ears worn by Leonard Nimoy in the role of Spock would last only three to five days of shooting before they had to be replaced.

• I'm sure you've heard that President Richard Nixon was sometimes called "Tricky Dick," especially toward the end of his troubled career, but you may not be familiar with other nicknames he had. In college his perceived lack of a sense of humor prompted the name "Gloomy Gus," and his tendency to spend long hours sitting and studying earned him the moniker "Iron Butt."

• Records show that during the last seven months of Elvis Presley's life, he had 5,300 different medications prescribed for him.

• In 1938, Fortune magazine published a prediction that, in hindsight, turns out to have been rather egregiously off the mark: "Few scientists foresee any serious or practical use for atomic energy. They regard the atom-splitting experiments as useful steps in the attempt to describe the atom more accurately, not as the key to the unlocking of any new power." ***

Thought for the Day: "Success usually comes to those who are too busy to be looking for it." -- Henry David Thoreau

MOMENTS IN TIME The History Channel

• On Sept. 5, 1666, firefighters in London begin blowing up homes in a desperate attempt to halt the spread of a great fire through the city. By the time the fire was finally snuffed out the following day, more than 100,000 people had been left homeless.

• On Sept. 7, 1776, during the Revolutionary War, the 8-foot-long American submersible craft Turtle attempts to attach a time bomb to the hull of British Admiral Richard Howe's flagship Eagle in New York Harbor. It was the first use of a submarine in warfare.

• On Sept. 6, 1915, a prototype tank nicknamed Little Willie rolls off the assembly line in England. It weighed 14 tons, got stuck in trenches and crawled over rough terrain at only 2 mph. For secrecy, production workers were told the vehicles would be used to carry water on the battlefield. The new vehicles were shipped in crates labeled "tank," and the name stuck.

• On Sept. 3, 1935, a new land-speed record is set by Britain's Sir Malcolm Campbell. On the Bonneville Salt Flats of Utah, Campbell and his 2,500-horsepower car Bluebird made two runs over a 1-mile course at speeds averaging 301 mph.

• On Sept. 8, 1945, U.S. troops land in Korea to begin their postwar occupation of the southern part of that nation, almost exactly one month after Soviet troops had entered northern Korea to begin their own occupation. Although the U.S. and Soviet occupations were supposed to be temporary, the division of Korea quickly became permanent.

• On Sept. 2, 1969, America's first automatic teller machine (ATM) makes its public debut, dispensing cash to customers at Chemical Bank in Rockville Center, N.Y. It wasn't until 1971 that an ATM could handle multiple functions, including providing customers' account balances.

• On Sept. 4, 1972, U.S. swimmer Mark Spitz wins his seventh gold medal at the Summer Olympics in Munich and establishes new world records in all the events. The record would stand until Michael Phelps took home eight gold medals at the Beijing Games in 2012.
