

Alpena state police post sees addition of detective

By Cheryl Peterson
Editor

With the expansion of coverage from three to five counties, the Michigan State Police post in Alpena has been adding personnel, and one of the newest additions is a detective sergeant.

Detective Sgt. Jennifer Pintar was assigned to the Alpena post in May and joins Detective Sgt. Steve Harshberger in the investigative responsibilities for the counties of Alcona, Alpena, Montmorency, Oscoda and Presque Isle.

Pintar, who will be working in Alcona and Oscoda counties, has been getting acquainted with the area during the last few months.

Acclimation to northern counties is much easier since she's spent the last 17 years at the MSP post in East Tawas.

Prior to being assigned to the Alpena post, Pintar was a trooper for 14 years and an acting post detective for three years at the East Tawas post. She was raised in Newago County and graduated from Hesperia High School in 1991. She attended Central Michigan University (CMU) for four years. When Pintar began taking classes at CMU, law enforcement was not on her radar as a career choice. "When I went to CMU I had a scholarship for theater. After a while I realized there wasn't a lot of stability in theater," Pintar said.

After spending time with the career placement department and considering various options, Pintar was on her career track. She worked as a dispatcher and a student security officer on the CMU campus police department.

She also worked for the Saint Louis, Mich. police department as a reserve officer as a student, and that led to the police academy. "I had put in an application at the Saint Louis Police Department," Pintar said. "When a position opened for a certified officer to go through the Delta Police Academy, I was selected."

She graduated from the police academy and worked for the Saint Louis Police Department for four months

Harrisville's Children's Parade going strong after 37 years

By Mary Weber
Staff Writer

Dogs on leashes sit with their young humans in the shade of a large tree trying to keep cool. Several parents slather sun screen on wriggling youngsters who don't want to stand still. Kids on bicycles, kids pulling wagons, babies and toddlers in strollers, preteenagers in floppy hats, on roller blades, skateboards and bikes -- mill around, in an organized type of chaos -- waiting to begin.

The crowd of about 250 youth of all ages are awash in red, white and blue. Everything from ribbons, streamers, bunting and balloons are used to decorate anything and everything with wheels (and paws) that kids can ride, push, pull, lead or follow.

The crowd grows continually in a half hour. Chattering and laughter meld into a hum that grows in volume.

Then, the announcement is made -- a few sentences of direction and then, "Let the Children's Parade begin! Have fun!" is heard over the loudspeaker on the nearby fire truck.

First, the sheriff's department, then the veteran's float, a couple of cars and then -- the kids, in their patriotic finery hit the pavement.

Fun and kids just go together and there is nothing more fun than celebrating the nation's Independence Day than by having a children's parade.

This was exactly what Harrisville resident Mary Lou Webb decided to do in 1977 -- she organized the first Children's Parade through downtown Harrisville. Little did she know then she would still be organizing and enjoying the parade 37 years later.

Webb did not plan on the parade becoming an annual event initially. It took on a life of its own when someone asked, at the first one, if Harrisville had the parade every year. Before Webb could respond someone shouted back, "yes."

Webb explained that prior to 1976 the Village of Lincoln and the City of Harrisville alternated Independence Day activities. "There was a very large celebration in 1976 to celebrate the bicentennial. A lot of businesses spent a great deal of money on their parade entries and went all out. After that nobody really wanted to do anything. I figured it shouldn't cost a lot to put on a kid's parade, so that's what we did," Webb said.

Webb had young children when she first began organizing the parades. She roped her family into helping and they are still helping. Her sister, great-nephew and granddaughter passed out handmade ribbons to as many of the entrants as they could before the start of the parade last Saturday.

Year after year -- for 37 years -- it's gone off without a hitch. Well, except for one skinned knee. And, she enjoys the parades now just as much as she did then.

"The first year I collected money from relatives and businesses to purchase small prizes. We had enough for each kid walking the parade to get something," Webb said.

Over 100 children participated in that first parade which, Webb thought was an excellent turn out due to the fact they did very little advertising of the event except to put out fliers that said, "decorate your stroller, bike or your baby brother and come and walk in the parade."

Webb said a woman from Oscoda would come and put on a puppet show for the kids after the parade and a small

Local magician performs at Mikado Day Festival

By Mary Weber
Staff Writer

Alcona County is home to many artists. They use a variety of mediums to portray their lives and tell stories. Some paint, some photograph, others tell their stories through music or by writing.

One artist has a medium that is a little more mysterious than the others -- he tells his stories through the art of magic.

Mike Maturen first began honing his craft when he was a young boy during a time he spent with his grandmother at the Saginaw, Mich. fair. A clown named Quacky the Duck, was entertaining at the fair and showed him a magic trick.

Maturen was immediately hooked on magic and began learning all he could. At age 11 he performed his first paid magic show.

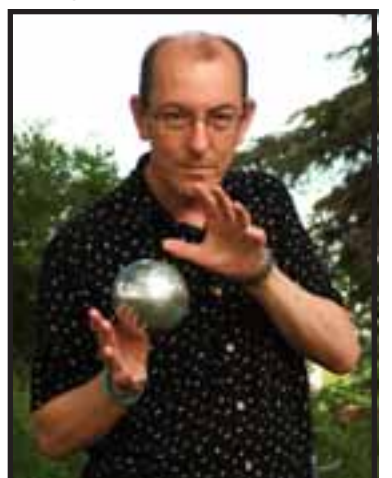

Thirty-seven years later, Maturen still includes the trick he learned from Quacky the Duck in every one of his magic performances.

Several years ago he was able to reunite with Quacky. "I thought Quacky was long dead because he was an older man when I first met him. You couldn't miss Quacky, he was six feet, seven inches tall and wore size 14 or 15 duck feet. I was (Internet) posting on the Magic Café one day -- a sight similar to Facebook only it's just for magicians -- and a question thread popped up asking what got (me) interested in magic.

"I told the story of Quacky the Duck. Somebody saw my post and wrote that his name was Eugene Curtis, he lived in Toledo, Ohio and he was still Quacky the Duck. So I looked him up and called him. He was in tears, he was so thrilled that somebody from 30 years ago would take the time to call him to say thank you."

Maturen enjoys telling a story through his family-friendly magic, sometimes tugging at heart strings, but most often bringing joy and laughter. He believes in being an entertainer first and a cruit School. She graduated in July 1996 and was assigned to the East Tawas post. In 1998 she received a bachelor's degree in community development with a minor in communications.

"This is my first post change and I'm getting used to new people and new contacts," Pintar said. "The state police (have) become so mobile (since reorganization in 2011) - this post covers five counties. I'm going to be covering Alcona and Oscoda counties as my primary area and I have handled cases in in each county (in the past). It's great that if we do have a major case we can work together as a team.

"I worked in a factory and did the same thing over and over and I love the variety of this job. Sometimes that's hard to handle though, too," she said. "Every police officer has their strength and my skill set is probably in investigation... I like dealing with people and I like to investigate - to see something through from beginning to end. I also like working with other officers in a team aspect whether it's from our agency or another agency."

Pintar and her husband, Sgt. Mark Pintar (who is assigned to the MSP detachment post in East Tawas), have two children and live in Tawas City. Pintar is involved with Iosco PRIDE - a drug and alcohol prevention group for high school students - which does a variety of community service projects throughout Iosco County. She is also involved in the figure skating program in Tawas.

When Pintar isn't working she enjoys spending time with her family and helping "with whatever our kids are involved in." Her morning routine includes doing the insanity workout. "It's a good stress reliever," she said.

So is living and working near the water.

"It doesn't get any better than this," Pintar said. "I had always thought I love being a trooper on the water and I came to Tawas. Now I'm in Alpena. I'm just working my way along the coast."

Her exploration of art began while growing up in Michigan and her love of color and creating art started with a large box of crayons. As she grew older, this love turned into a passion and a career. She attended Adrian College, Eastern Michigan University and Madonna College and holds a Bachelor of Arts degree in art and English. "Teaching, painting and sharing what I learned - and I am always learning - gives me great pleasure," Bacon said. "I have taught art classes in public schools, art guilds and the Visual Arts Center in Punta Gorda, Fla."

magician second. “If I go up and technically do great magic, but it’s boring, nobody is going to watch it again. I would rather have them leave laughing and tell their friends they had a great time. They might not remember a single trick I did, but they had a great time,” he said.

Maturen has had several mentors and idols while working on his art including David Copperfield, Harry Blackstone Jr. and Doug Henning. He has met all three magicians and strives to bring to his magic a little of what their magic brought to him.

“David Copperfield was a master story teller and Harry Blackstone Jr. was a classic tuxedo magician. Doug Henning used to bring a sense of wonder to his magic. People have lost the sense of wonder; there is no more suspension of disbelief. He (Henning) would do a trick and he looked as amazed as the audience did.

“He was a great actor. He was so in awe of what happened in front of him. That becomes infectious.

“I enjoy bringing that to people and I bring it to myself too. When I see kids’ and adults’ eyes get as big as saucers at something I’ve just performed it brings a great sense of accomplishment to me. There is enough tragedy, sadness and evil in the world.” Maturen enjoys helping people forget the problems of the world by adding a little magic to their lives, if only for a half hour.

The Magic and Mayhem of Mike Maturen Show has been entertaining audiences of all ages at a variety of venues including birthday parties and school shows like as the Child Abuse and Neglect Prevention of Alcona County Family Fun Night. He will be lecturing at a clown convention to be held in Detroit, Mich. in October and he is working on increasing his half hour show to an hour long program to entertain at corporate functions and charity events.

Maturen will bring his magic to Mikado this Saturday at 3 p.m. at the Mikado Township Hall to honor the township’s 127th birthday during the Mikado Day Festival.

Other Mikado Day Festival events include a parade and car cruise at 11 a.m., craft show and flea market, a slide bounce, carnival games, Jim Miller’s Wilderness, a 1860s baseball game, water ball competition, 4-H pony rides, photos with the Cat in the Hat, and a puppet show.

Get growing with new MSU Master Gardener training program

For those who love to garden with flowers, an educational opportunity is now available to help budding gardeners from the ground up. The Sunrise Side Master Gardener Association and Michigan State University (MSU) Extension horticulturist Rebecca Finneran is putting on in what she calls a "dry run" of the newly created flower gardening component of the MSU Extension Master Gardener curriculum.

This intensive, four-hour session scheduled on July 31 at Plainfield Township Hall (220 N. Washington, Hale, Mich.) will not only be a refresher for seasoned master gardeners, but will equip new gardeners with a foundation of horticulture knowledge and flower growing.

Class will be held from 4:00 to 8:30 p.m. A light dinner will be provided. Contact Mary Gartland for registration information at (989) 362-6793 by July 24.

Reading homework will be required for those who sign up early enough. Contact Mary Gartland

The Michigan Master Gardener Program has a rich history of equipping people with science-based gardening principles that embed sound environmental methods. It is not only a horticulture education program but also a volunteer leader training program. Volunteers are committed to improving the quality of life in Michigan through horticulture-based volunteerism and beautifying communities throughout the state.

Becoming a Michigan master gardener requires that applicants attend training classes and complete at least 40 hours of community-based service to earn the title of certified master gardener volunteer.

Finneran received a Bachelor of Science degree in horticulture with emphasis in landscape design from Michigan State University in 1983. She has been a MSU Extension horticulture educator since 1987 where she helps the green industry and consumers learn about horticulture, the environment and pesticide safety. Finneran teaches and sponsors numerous consumer horticulture programs across Michigan, is seen frequently on television and is a prolific writer.

She served on the board of directors for the Grand Rapids based Frederik Meijer Gardens for 12 years and is overseeing an urban display garden known as the "Grand Ideas Garden."

Golf event raises money for emergency room renovations

St. Joseph Health System Foundation hosted its 20th Annual Charity Golf Classic on Wednesday, June 19 at Red Hawk Golf Course raising more than $28,000 to support the Emergency Room renovation.

The renovation will increase room size, bed count, and patient privacy. The emergency room at St. Joseph Health System was designed in 1987 and has 4,900 square feet of space split among seven open bay areas. The current patient areas are undersized by approximately 25 percent based on today's code requirements. There is no private space for patients or families, and due to space limitations, patients are only allowed one family member or visitor at bedside. The area also lacks a contained medication dispensing area and has no space for central cardiac monitoring.

Renovation plans will increase the emergency room to 6,400 square feet, an increase of over 30 percent. That will provide private rooms for patient and family, centralized nurses' station and better operational flow for delivery of patient care.

"It was a beautiful sunny day and the weather could not have been any better," said Tony Beran, foundation executive director. "We enjoyed a great day of golf and were able to raise significant dollars from the generosity of businesses and friends of St. Joseph to support the renovation of the emergency room. It was a true win-win day all the way around."

The team taking home the honor of Best Overall Score, with a score of 56 (16 under par) went to the team of Thomas Huck, Richard Huck, Todd Huck and Jim Huck.

Recognition was also given to the best mixed team of Scott Chapleski, Colleen Chapleski, Matt Buresh and Mason Buresh, and to the best all women's team of Ann Balfour, Anne Lawter, Chi Smedley and Donna Sanford.

The name game

By Kathryn Fritz Kniep
Columnist

"I don't like your miserable lonely single 'front name.' It is so limited, so meager; it has no versatility; it is weighted down with the sense of responsibility; it is worn threadbare with much use; it is as bad as having only one jacket and one hat; it is like having only one relation, one blood relation, in the world. Never set a child afloat on the flat sea of life with only one sail to catch the wind."

~ DH Lawrence

When it comes to names, my family is slightly less than inspired. I may have mentioned before that my mother and her three sisters were all named Mary -- Mary Faith, Mary Marguerite, Mary Alice and Mary Ellen. Their mother's name was Kathryn. The one boy in the family, Frank, married a woman named Kathryn, too.

My father's mother was also Mary - Mary Bridget. Among his sisters, were Kit and Kay and a cousin who grew up with the family was Kate.

My husband's mother's name is Arlene Mary. When I met Art, he had a daughter named Kathryn, spelled the same way as my name.

Together, we had Katrina. So, when Katrina (aka the Princess) announced that the baby coming this fall was a girl, the logical name choice was probably Mary Kathryn, or maybe Mary Kate, like the famous Olson twin. But all of us felt sort of lukewarm about it. I suggested the only unique name among us - Bridget - but the Princess thinks that's a purely awful name.

Accordingly, when I ran across the book "450,000 Names for Baby" during the community-wide garage sale, I snatched it up. Of the 225,000 girl's names, the potential parents have considered about 50 so far without finding one that they both like.

In the meantime, I've been reading some articles on the impact of names on children. Overall, I'd say the jury remains out. Some authors believe that if you stick a child with a name like Percy, you have sentenced him to a life of wimpdom, no matter how big and strong he grows to be.

Others feel that giving a child an unusual name will make him or her stand out among their peers. I rather liked the opinion of one author, who said that with repetition your name comes to simply say "me."

Celebrities these days are muddying the water with "unique" names. Kanye West and Kim Kardashian recently named their daughter North, thus making her North West. I felt kind of sorry for her, but there are worse.

Rob Morrow has a daughter named Tu Morrow, and Nicholas Cage a son named Kal-El, presumably after Superman's father. Bob Geldolf's daughter is Fifi Trixibell, joining sisters Peaches Honeyblossom and Pixie.

Faced with those choices,

Mary Kate takes on a certain appeal.

You don't have to be a celebrity, though, to come up with an unusual name. A downstate high school basketball player often mentioned on the sports news is Chianti Brown.

I recently saw an article on the news about a woman whose twins were Paris and Brooklyn, which made me wonder if the glamorous Paris made Brooklyn feel a little low-rent. And my all-time favorite name when I was working with the Head Start program was a little girl named Stardust Kowalski.

Last names do have to be taken into consideration, after all. When I was expecting Katrina, my brother Ben campaigned long and hard for Dee, thus making her "Dee Kniep." When that failed, he suggested Knancy.

The Princess is considering Wouters -- the first syllable pronounced like "wood" without the d.

From early on, Art has contended that he will call the baby Scooter.

Turning to literature proved somewhat futile. Harper is too popular these days, and one of the Princess's and my favorite literary characters, Scout, is too boyish. Unfortunately, Scout's real name was Jean Louise, which is almost as bad as Mary Kathryn.

As with most things, familiarity takes its toll on some names. The Princess seriously considered Aurora, but found, she told me, that after repeating it many times, she found she didn't really care for it.

When I was choosing Kate's name, one book I read recommended opening the back door and shouting the potential name several times. It's not such a bad idea. Had I shouted it longer, I might have realized that I would spend a good portion of my life calling, "Ka-treena, come 'ere."

While the choice of a name is important, to be totally realistic, it's not like what you choose will be cast in stone. Nicknames have a way of creeping in. Consider my cousin Bill, a big, strapping football player type guy, known to the family all of his life as "Bunny."

And at some point in their life (most often during junior high) your child will fiddle with whatever appellation you've come up with, anyway.

In her three decades on earth, the Princess has been Ralphie (which I called her as a bald infant, as in "Ralphie, my boy"), Treena, Kati, Kate, Kat and, of course, the Princess. And well-intentioned souls will get it slightly wrong. I spent a good portion of my life fighting off the dread "Kathy" and although she's been my friend since first grade, my father consistently called my friend Chere, "Terry."

So what's in a name? It's really hard to say. It's one of those things that's usually chosen before your personality is formed and before you can speak to defend yourself.

On the other hand, the law

Puttin' On The Fritz

says that your name is what you say it is, so when you attain the age of majority, if you really, really want to be Moon Unit, you have that option.

Nonetheless, it's a good thing the Princess and AJ have another five months or so to make a decision. Right now, my personal favorite is Calliope, the Greek muse of poetry, usually illustrated with a notebook in her hand and a gold crown. I figure it's an appropriate name for the first few months of an infant's life, aurally, it has a great history and later we could call her Cally. I don't think the Princess likes it. So far, she hasn't even answered my e-mail suggesting it.

Overall, though, I think it's safe to assume that whatever mom and dad choose, it will be okay. And really, in the great scheme of things, naming children is rather like what people say about naming cats. Isn't it?

It doesn't matter a great deal what you call them, they rarely come, anyway.

(Kathryn Kniep has contributed to the Alcona County Review for more than 30 years. She has published fiction, nonfiction and poetry in several venues. She and her husband, Art, live in Harrisville. The couple has one daughter, Katrina - "the Princess," two dogs, Lady and Henry, and granddog, Bastian, all of whom are frequent victims of her column.)

SENIOR LIFESTYLES

Summertime heat poses special risks to seniors

Dear Savvy Senior,
Can you write a column alerting seniors to the dangers of summertime heat? I manage a number of urgent care clinics, and last summer we had more than 200 cases of heat-related illnesses, most of who were seniors. I would like to reduce that this year.

Concerned Citizen

Dear Concerned,
I certainly can. Most people don't realize that extreme summer heat causes thousands of heat-related illnesses in the U.S. each year, and kills more people than hurricanes, lightning, tornadoes, floods and earthquakes combined, and seniors are among the most vulnerable. The reasons behind this are because of the body's ability to regulate temperature through blood circulation and sweat glands tends to decline with age. Bodies of older adults also contain far less water than a younger person, and older brains don't recognize thirst as easily, making them more likely to get dehydrated.

In addition, many seniors have certain health problems that can increase their risk of hyperthermia (when the body overheats). These include:

- Underlying diseases like congestive heart failure, diabetes and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease or COPD.

- Trouble walking or moving around.

- Being overweight.

- Having dementia or other problems with thinking skills.

Medications that some seniors take, like diuretics and other high blood pressure drugs, can also cause dehydration or affect the ability of their heart, blood vessels or sweat glands to respond to the heat.

Heat stroke is the most serious heat-related illness. The signs to watch for include a body temperature above 103 degrees Fahrenheit, a rapid pulse rate, throbbing headache, dizziness, nausea, confusion, and hot, dry skin with the absence of sweating. If you, or someone you know is experiencing these symptoms, call 911 immediately because heat stroke is a medical emergency.

Heat exhaustion is milder and can develop after several days of exposure to high temperatures. The warning signs are heavy sweating, paleness, muscle cramps, tiredness, weakness, fainting, dizziness, headache, and nausea or vomiting.

If you think you may be suffering from a heat-related condition, cool yourself down by going indoors into air conditioning, remove or loosen any tight-fitting or heavy clothing, drink plenty of water (but avoid alcohol and caffeine), take a cool bath or shower, or apply cold water, ice packs or cold compresses to your skin.

And when you do go out in the heat, be sure to dress in lightweight, light-colored, loose-fitting clothing, avoid extended periods of sun exposure and drink plenty of water even if you don't feel thirsty.

Seniors who live without air conditioning should go to public places that have it like shopping malls, senior centers or public libraries. Your local health department can also refer you to an air-conditioned shelter in your area.

For those who can't afford to run their air conditioning at home, there's the federal Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program, along with many utility companies and charitable organizations that may be able to help you with your utility costs.

To find out about the programs available to you, along with their eligibility requirements and how to apply, call the National Energy Assistance Referral project at (866) 674-6327 or visit energy-near.org.

For more extreme heat-related safety tips, visit the Center for Disease Control and Prevention website at cdc.gov/extremeheat.

group of volunteers poured Kool-Aid. In years to follow prizes were discontinued and the children were treated to a matinee performance at the theater in Harrisville instead. After the theatre sold there was a sidewalk chalk art contest that was organized by the Harrisville Arts Council. Webb said through the years they have tried different ways of organizing the event and have learned that it's best to keep things simple. Now, she gives ribbons to the approximately 250 kids attending the parade. The Alcona Veterans of Foreign Wars, Post No. 6466 has also been generous over the last 20 years or more by offering hot dogs and beverages to parade participants at its club on Lake Street (the end of the parade route). Webb always looks for some kind of entertainment for the kids after the parade. "Last year we had the Frisbee dogs and this year we had a magician perform at the harbor pavilion," she said. In all the years Webb has organized the event for the city she has never missed a parade and it has also always started on time at 1 p.m. without exception.

The only mishap -- in all of this time -- has been a skinned knee when one of the participants fell.

"It's great fun, it's fun to see the generations grow up and have their kids and even a few grandkids marching in the parade now. I hope to keep doing the Children's Parade for as long as I can."

Youth explore water quality issues at 4-H camp

Nineteen Alcona County youth recently attended a four-day, three-night summer camp held at the Ocqueoc Outdoor Center in Millersburg, Mich. The camp, one in a series of four, was designed by local 4-H staff to acquaint youth ages 9-12 with water quality issues and environmental stewardship as well as help them explore careers related to natural resources and conservation.

The other three camp themes - Fur, Fins and Feathers, Science-Engineering and Technology (SET) and Go GREEN - are held in succession so campers can attend for four years and not repeat major themed content.

The camp, coordinated by MSU Extension staff covering Alcona, Alpena, Antrim, Montmorency, Otsego and Presque Isle counties, offers youth an opportunity to learn and grow in an environmental setting that inspires independence, builds resilience and offers a recreational break from electronic games and television.

In addition to the eight hands-on sessions, youth were treated to a presentation by Harriet Smith from the Thunder Bay National Marine Sanctuary on remotely operated vehicles (ROVs). The 45 minute presentation touched on the practical applications of ROV technology as well as career opportunities related to the engineering field.

Campers also participated in a scavenger hunt, swimming, fishing, and team building games led by a group of 13 volunteer teenage counselors. The counselors, including three from Alcona County, helped campers get to sessions on time, prevent homesickness, solved problems as well as worked one-on-one with campers that had special needs.

"They really are our biggest asset," said Otsego and Antrim 4-H Coordinator Michelle Pietrzak. "Despite some bumps in the road, our camp goes very smoothly thanks to volunteers -- especially the teen counselors."

Camp sessions were led by agency professionals as well as volunteers from across northern Michigan. Each session was 90 minutes and included both hands-on learning and instructional games that helped campers understand the intended lesson. Sessions included: Invasive Species, ROV Build, Ground Water/Water Quality, Macro Invertebrate Study, Archery, Canoeing, Conflict Resolution and Nutrition Education.

Part of the camp's success rests in the fact that it is a very low cost option for families -- mostly due to the efforts of the numerous volunteers involved. Camp volunteers this year included archery instructors Tom Keerl and Chad Kamischke; water quality instructor and kitchen assistant Meggie Spens; canoeing instructors Vicki and Dennis Habitz; lifeguard Michelle Davis; and camp health officer Chris Mutchler.

Partners for this year's camp included Michigan State University Extension's Greening Michigan and Health and Nutrition Institutes, Huron Pines Resources -- conservation and development, NOAA Thunder Bay National Marine Sanctuary as well as AmeriCorps members assigned to the aforementioned organizations.

Two of the major partners involved again this year were the county of Presque Isle and the Friends of Ocqueoc group. Presque Isle County owns the facility which was at one time a Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) Camp. The group's responsibility is to keep the grounds and building in good shape and make capital improvements as resources are available.

The group only charges a very small amount to use the grounds which also helps keep the cost to families low. Additional support for Alcona campers was given through the Alcona 4-H Advisory Council providing scholarships totaling more than $600 for the event.

"Eleven of the 13 counselors this year had attended 4-H camp at least once as a camper, and a few counselors as many as four times. This demonstrates that we are also helping to develop leaders... That's very exciting," Pietrzak said.

The macro invertebrate study offered youth a chance to collect, sort and identify numerous aquatic macro invertebrates (water critters) using a dichotomist key, which sorts the invertebrates by visible features. Helen-Ann Prince, an AmeriCorps member sponsored by Michigan SeaGrant and currently housed at the MSU Extension Office in Harrisville, helps youth collect samples to take back to their outdoor classroom.

Sarah Adcock, an AmeriCorps volunteer stationed at the Thunder Bay National Marine Sanctuary, helps youth deploy the Remotely Operated Vehicle (ROV) that they designed and built. The team consisted of Matt on controls, Billy on the tether and Drake on deployment.

StarWatch By Gary Becker - Scorpius Rules the Deep South

The summer is upon us, and as we head towards mid-July, I'm looking forward to seeing some of my favorite seasonal star patterns. Just like in winter when I look forward to witnessing Orion climb into the sky along with his entourage of winter favorites, summer brings with it a following of patterns that I anxiously await. Foremost are the stars of the deep southern sky that form Scorpius the Scorpion and Sagittarius the Archer. This week is a wonderful time to view the Scorpion because the moon is new on the 8th and won't begin to interfere with stargazing until the end of the week. An online map is available. Try the Scorpion first by looking south at 11 p.m. Make sure you have no street lights to hamper your view. The first star you'll notice, about 20 degrees off the horizon, should be the bright red supergiant Antares of the Scorpion. Its low altitude accentuates its redness and dims it slightly, but it is truly one of the best stars for its class. Bigger than Orion's red Betelgeuse, if placed in the center of our solar system, Antares would stretch halfway between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter. At a distance of 600 light years, its total energy output is 65,000 times that of our sun, but because of its cool surface temperature, about 7000 degrees F., most of that energy spews from the star as unobservable infrared or "heat" energy. Thus, it is only the 15th brightest luminary in the nighttime heavens. Once Antares is located, three stars above and to its right form a gentle arc outlining the head. Southward of Antares, the Scorpion's torso slants slightly to the left, ending in a sweeping curl that represents the tail and stinger. The tail is the most difficult part of Scorpius to view because of its close proximity to the horizon, but if you can see it, the scorpion comes to life as one of the truly beautiful constellations of the night. In two weeks, I'll talk about Sagittarius. www.astronomy.org

STRANGE BUT TRUE by Samantha Weaver

• In 1977, Ken Olson, president, chairman and founder of Digital Equipment Company, made the following regrettable statement: "There is no reason anyone would want a computer in their home."

• Gross fact of the day: Half of the bacteria in the human mouth haven't even been identified yet by science.

• The drug Ivermectin is a broad-spectrum antiparasitic, used mainly to treat infestations of worms. The people who have been helped by this medication might be surprised to learn that the drug was developed through research spurred by a fungus found growing on the golf shoe of a botanist.

• If you're a centenarian, you might want to consider moving to New Mexico. In that state, there is a law declaring that everyone 100 and older is tax-exempt.

• Unless you were around on April 17, 1964, you may not be aware of the hullaballoo caused by the introduction of the Mustang. In Seattle, a truck driver was so distracted by a display of new Mustangs that he crashed his cement truck through the window of the dealership. In Chicago, so many people were trying to crowd into the cars in a showroom that the dealer had to lock all the vehicle doors. A dealer in New Jersey had only one Mustang, so he auctioned it off. The winner of the auction insisted on sleeping in his new car that night, just to make sure nobody else got it before his check cleared.

VILLAGE OF LINCOLN MINUTES

The Lincoln Village Council met on Monday, July 1 at 7 p.m. at the village hall. The meeting was opened with the "Pledge of Allegiance." Those present included: Treasurer Kossa, clerk Somers, council members Gauthier, Healy, Phillips, Somers and Stutzman. Absent: President Jordan and council member Naylor. The meeting was presided over by president pro-tem Bonny Gauthier. The minutes of the June meeting were approved on a motion from Gauthier, with support from Somers. The treasurer's report was approved, subject to audit, on a motion from Gauthier, with support from Stutzman. Treasurer Kossa reminded residents that their tax information is posted to the village website at lincolnm.com. Leroy Hall, fire chief, gave his report. He stated there have been repairs made to the fire truck and some needed for the first responder rig. The brush rig has a radiator leak that needs to be fixed. He is nearly finished filling out paperwork for a grant through the DNR. He said this is a 50/50 match grant. Sheila Phillips, county commissioner, addressed the board. On July 18 a joint meeting regarding the economic future of Alcona County will be held. It will be held at 6 p.m. at the EMS building on M-72. She asked that people let her know if they are attending so that there will be enough food for everyone who is planning to be there. She would like to have two persons attend from the village council. She presented a flier for the Alcona County Fair that will be held at the ARA site August 21-24. Dick Somers gave his street report. He had a problem today with one of the pumps for the sewer system. He will be working on resolving the problem tomorrow. In old business, Stutzman asked about whether or not sidewalks will be fixed in town. There are several that need to be done and Bonny suggested that Dick get figures together and bring to the next meeting. Phillips suggested we do something about having a work order plan put in motion for priorities that need to be attended to. The mulch for the playground should be arriving in the next two weeks. Sara Healy presented a policy that was drafted following a discussion at last month's meeting regarding payroll. A motion to adopt the payroll policy was made by Stutzman, with support from Phillips. The policy states: "It is the policy of the Village of Lincoln that all employee payroll checks will be issued on the first business day of the month. If the first of the month should fall on a Saturday or Sunday, the check will be issued on the following Monday. If the first should fall on a holiday, the check will be issued the next business day." Phillips stated the buoys have been placed at the beach area this past week. Also, the two new barbecue grills have been installed at the Flights of Imagination playground area. Bonny presented a check to the treasurer from Maurice and Mary High in memory of Connor Kasubowski, who passed away last week. It is to be used for the Little League baseball field. Bonny stated she has received word that the fencing company will honor the estimate they gave last year for fencing the new ball field. She said we need to get things taken care of quickly as the bills need to be turned in soon. Phillips asked that we honor the fallen fire fighters in Arizona with a moment of silence. In new business, Stutzman asked about the five minute rule for persons who address the board. He was assured that President Jordan will take care of it if it becomes an issue again. Somers said he has been trying to get pavement markings taken care of. Bonny gave the president's report. The second dock will be put in soon at the beach. The signs for the new bathroom and also the sign for the tree commemorating Dr. Carpenter have been put up. President Jordan asked council members be vigilant in checking the park area. This includes the Barlow Road Park as well as the Flights of Imagination Park. We need to draft an ordinance regarding park usage and therefore we will be able to put up signs for park hours. Attorney Cook suggested modeling an ordinance after the one in place at the beach area. A motion to pay the bills as presented was made by Stutzman, with support from Somers. Motion carried. A motion to adjourn was made by Stutzman, with support from Somers. Motion carried. Linda K. Somers Village Clerk
