

Alcona County marine officers patrol area lakes

By Cheryl Peterson
Editor

The duty of patrolling the county's recreational bodies of water during the summer months has been assigned to two Alcona County natives.

Scott MacNeill, 21, of Harrisville and Brock LaVergne, 18, of Lincoln were recently hired as the marine deputies for the Alcona County Sheriff's Department and began their assignment Memorial Day weekend.

They are responsible for bodies of water in and around Alcona County including Lake Huron, Hubbard Lake and Cedar Lake and at various times throughout the summer, the AuSable River. Primarily patrolling on the weekends, when most recreational boaters use the area's lakes, MacNeill and LaVergne will be conducting boat checks to ensure all required safety equipment is onboard, that boaters and others using recreational water equipment like jet skis, are following safe boating procedures. If needed, they will also be able to conduct rescues and provide assistance for other marine officers in the area.

Both officers are pleased with their summer position. They agreed the weekends near the Fourth of July will be the busiest time of the summer.

MacNeill recently received an associate degree in criminal justice from Alpena Community College and is applying to the Michigan State Police Academy. He is also working part-time as a security officer for the Lost Lake Woods Club. He is the son of Warren and Judy MacNeill of Harrisville.

LaVergne is studying mechanical engineering at Saginaw Valley State University and will play football for SVSU in the fall. He has a part-time job with JB Auto in Lincoln. He is the son of Ed and Renee LaVergne of Lincoln.

"It's a great job to be out on the water and protecting our waterways," LaVergne said.

"This weekend will be a true test," MacNeill said in an interview last week prior to the power boat races on Tawas Bay. "We will be working with other agencies - U.S. Coast Guard, DNR and Iosco County marine officers (during the races on Saturday and Sunday). We will have a rescue diver on board."

LaVergne and MacNeill have spent many hours in training with former marine officer Greg Alexander and DNR Conservation Officer Warren MacNeill prior to taking the helm of the sheriff department's 24-foot Boston

Whaler. Their training included docking, towing, approach to other vessels, navigation, vector searches and retrieval of individuals.

Spreading the love of dairy farming

By Mary Weber
Staff Writer

June -- among other things -- is dairy month and Alcona County has a number of dairy farmers who take pride in their product.

One such young farmer recently attended the "Connecting the Dots in Alcona County" interactive seminar -- a program designed to connect government and business to share ideas about the future of Alcona County.

Katie Dellar of Gustin Township shared her love of farming and the agricultural interests of Alcona County. She shared ideas and hopes of future "Breakfast on the Farm" events and bus tours for tourists and community members to visit different farms to entice more visitors to the area.

Katie, a mother of four young children, spoke with confident passion about her life. However, Katie's story didn't turn out how she thought it would be when she was young.

Katie did grow up in the area, but not on a farm. She had never belonged to a 4-H club or associated herself with farm life. She was the daughter of a plumber and her passion as a teenager was to leave the area after high school, become a lawyer and never return to rural life.

Her dreams of corporate litigation faded quickly when she fell in love with her husband, Jason Dellar. He had grown up on a dairy farm and never wanted to be anywhere else. He convinced his young bride to give it a try.

Katie didn't want to do any farming at first. She was happy just being a farmer's wife and had no interest in becoming a farmer. As time went on Katie grew curious about her husband's career and started asking more questions. Jason taught her the job.

"I still have things to learn and I love it now. I learn things every day which absolutely amazes me and gives me reason to love it even more. It's a good, honest living, very rewarding and a future for our kids," Katie said.

The Dellar's have four children, Kiersten, 7, Matthew, 6, Victoria, 4 and Wil, 2, 60 cows, several calves, a dozen or more chickens, and two new Labrador puppies. As the kids went about the business of being active farm kids -- holding puppies, running freely through the yard, getting dirty and asking for treats, Katie told her story of dairy farming.

She explained that as part of the Dairy Check Off, a non-profit organization for the purpose of educating consumers and promoting dairy and the United Dairy Industry of Michigan (UDIM) she attended instructional classes on how to speak to consumers about dairy farming. "Probably 90 percent of dairy farmers don't speak to consumers, not that they aren't willing to, it's just that they don't know how. There are a lot of words (dairy terminology) that I could spit out that wouldn't make any sense to half the people I talk to," Katie said.

The Dairy Check Off research found that consumers are far removed from the farmer who supplies milk for their family. In fact, they have figured the average consumer is at least four generations removed from farm life. When Katie thought about it she realized she fell into that category, however, her situation provided a unique advantage.

Her first initial UDIM training class three years ago was a class titled "Telling Your Story." Katie, who disliked public speaking in high school, found a passion and her voice. "I realized afterwards that I am a speaker and I do have a story. It's a unique story and a fun story. It's a story people are going to want to listen to and they are going to want to come back for more.

"My dad's a plumber. I never wanted to milk a cow in my life. I wanted to be an

To the Editor,
Lloyd Streeter, again, is the one who "cannot admit to reality" in regard to the consequences of fracking.

Mr. Streeter stated (Alcona Review, June 12) that fracking wastewater goes to water treatment plants and then is "recycled," adding this to his previous claim that the waste water is "completely purified" and then "returned to the ground." In fact, in Michigan, fracking wastewater is disposed of in "deep injection wells" without treatment.

I found this out from the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ), the agency which is responsible for overseeing fracking operations in Michigan. Mr. Streeter and all of you readers, can put yourselves in touch with the "reality" and "truth" of this by calling the DEQ at (800) 662-9278 and talking to Rick Henderson, DEQ's lead fracking authority.

Regarding earthquakes, you can Google "Wastewater Injection Spurred Biggest Earthquake Yet" to be connected to a report from Columbia University's Earth Institute and the U.S. Geological Service discussing Oklahoma's biggest ever earthquake which geologists tied to the disposal of fracking wastewater. The report links earthquakes in several other states to fracking as well.

While Mr. Streeter accuses those who speak out against the risks of fracking of using "hysterics and scare tactics" it is he who employs these very tactics in referring to us as "merchants of hysteria and fear" and "extremists." I suggest he update his list of extremists by adding the DEQ, Columbia University and the U.S. Geological Service to it for their efforts to inform the public about fracking.

To the Editor,
Congratulations to Pastor Ernest Ruemenapp of the Family Heritage Baptist Church for the fine Memorial Day message that he delivered in the courthouse lawn. It was the best of several messages that I heard on Memorial Day weekend. Pastor Ruemenapp actually said something.

With all due respect to others who speak, Memorial Day speeches often miss the mark, are vacuous and anemic, repeating the same platitudes and slogans that we have heard hundreds of times. Ruemenapp honored our dead war heroes, honored those who have served, stressed the need to continue to defend our liberties, and held out hope for the future.

The pastor's message can be heard on the church's website: church72.org. I encourage everyone to hear it.

Mike Johnson's criticisms were unfounded. Ruemenapp's message was not "hate and fear-filled." Nor did the pastor say that "America alone is involved in pursuing peace," something that would obviously have been untrue since England, Israel and many other countries also want peace.

Johnson finds fault because Ruemenapp does not take a "cue" and say just what someone else said. That is silly.

It is right to raise "the specter of Islamic terrorism," (Johnson's words). Was it not Islamic terrorists who killed almost 3,000 people on September 11, 2001 in New York; who murdered 13 of our troops and wounded many more at Ft. Hood in Texas; who killed and wounded several people at the Boston Marathon; who killed four Americans in Benghazi, Libya? What is wrong with identifying our enemies?

Ruemenapp's message was that our freedoms have been protected in the past by those who fought and gave their lives, we must not let our freedoms slip now, and we do still have enemies. That is the way I heard it, and there was nothing wrong with it.

Karen Streeter
Lake City, Fla.

To the Editor,
You have published another letter from Lloyd Streeter in your June 12 issue, warning us that "merchants of hysteria and fear should be ignored" on the subject of fracking. The choice of the word "merchants" implies that they are selling something, but the only people in this "debate" who have profits at stake are the gas companies, who already have billions of dollars and want billions more. They can afford to pay skills and stooges to repeat their lies, and their influence over elected officials and regulatory agencies is virtually unlimited.

It is ironic that Mr. Streeter repeats his lies about treating fracking waste water on the opposite side of the same page as your report about the June 10 meeting with Peter Pettalia in Lincoln, where a DEQ representative confirmed that fracking waste cannot be purified, and must be sequestered forever. The DEQ is in the business of telling lies to promote fracking, but that whopper was too big even for them.

He also repeats his lies about earthquakes, quoting a bogus study by some scientific body that "proves" that fracking does not cause earthquakes. Again, the gas industry can fund a great number of "studies," until they get the results they want.

I will simply point out that the state of Ohio banned all fracking within its borders earlier this year, after it was proved beyond any shadow of doubt by professors at Ohio universities that fracking activities were responsible for a series of earthquakes near Youngstown.

You can find anything you want on the Internet, but

(Editor's Note: The June 10 Town Hall meeting with Rep. Peter Pettalia did not have a representative from the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ). Additionally, Mr. Pettalia did not comment about the water used in the fracking process. He did say he was learning about the subject and is planning to put together town hall meetings with both gas industry representatives and environmentalists. When asked if those meetings would include the DEQ, Pettalia said he would invite them.)

Police Report

Law enforcement entities in northern Michigan are requesting the public's assistance in identifying the location of where a large amount of utility type copper wire was stolen.

On May 20, two men and one female brought approximately 600 pounds of utility grade copper wire to a recycling company in Traverse City, Mich. This wire is the type used by electrical utility companies as ground wire for utility poles. At present, it is believed this wire was stolen and then sold to the recycling company as scrap metal. Suspects have been identified; however, law enforcement is attempting to identify the location where the wire was stolen from and obtain any other information surrounding the theft.

Anyone having information regarding this theft is requested to call Crime Stoppers at 1-800-422-JAIL. The information will remain confidential and a caller may remain anonymous. Crime Stoppers will pay up to a $1,000 reward for information that assists in the solving of a criminal act or results in the capture of a wanted fugitive.

Additional reward monies may be available depending on the location of the theft and which utility company may have been the victim of this theft.

SENIOR LIFESTYLES

What to consider before joining a clinical trial

Dear Savvy Senior,
What can you tell me about clinical trials and how to go about finding one? My wife has a chronic condition and we're interested in trying anything that may be able to help her.

Looking For Help

Dear Looking,
Each year, hundreds of thousands of Americans participate in clinical trials in hopes of gaining access to the latest, and possibly greatest, but not yet on the market treatments for all types of illnesses. But, you need to be aware that clinical trials can vary greatly in what they're designed to do, so be careful to choose one that can actually benefit your wife. Here's what you should know along with some tips for locating one.

A clinical trial is the scientific term for a test or research study of a drug, device or medical procedure using people. These trials – sponsored by drug companies, doctors, hospitals and the federal government – are conducted to learn whether a new treatment is safe and if it works. But, keep in mind that these new treatments are also unproven, so there may be risks too.

Also be aware that all clinical trials have certain eligibility criteria (age, gender, health status, et cetera) that your wife must meet in order to be accepted. And before taking part in a trial, she'll be asked to sign an informed consent agreement. She can also leave a study at any time.

Before deciding to participate in a trial, you and your wife need to first discuss it with her doctor. Then, schedule an appointment with the study's medical team and ask lots of questions. Here are some to get you started.

• What's the purpose of the study and can it improve your wife's condition? You may be surprised to know that many drug or procedural trials are not designed to find a cure or improve a patient's health, but only to provide scientific data.

• What are the risks? Some treatments can have side effects that are unpleasant, serious and even life threatening.

• What kinds of tests and treatments does the study involve, and how often and where they are performed?

• Is the experimental treatment in the study being compared with a standard treatment or a placebo? Keep in mind that if your wife gets the placebo, she'll be getting no treatment at all.

• Who's paying for the study? Will you have any costs, and if so, will your insurance plan or Medicare cover the rest? Sponsors of trials generally pay most of the costs, but not always.

• What if something goes wrong during or after the trial and your wife needs extra medical care? Who pays?

• If the treatment works, can your wife keep using it after the study?

Every year, there are more than 100,000 clinical trials conducted in the U.S. You can find them at condition-focused organizations like the American Cancer Society or the Alzheimer's Association, or by asking her doctor who may be monitoring trials in his or her specialty.

Or, use the National Institutes of Health's website at clinicaltrials.gov. This site contains a comprehensive database of federally and privately supported clinical studies in the U.S. and abroad on a wide range of diseases and conditions, including information about each trial's purpose, who may participate, locations, and phone numbers for more details.

If, however, you don't have

Savvy Senior

Internet access or could use some help finding the right trial, use the Center for Information and Study on Clinical Research Participation (ciscrp.org). This is a non-profit organization that will take your wife's information over the phone and do a thorough clinical trials search for you, and mail or email you the results in a few days. Call (877) 633-4376 for assistance.

attorney and here I am. I own a dairy farm with my husband and love it.

"It's a lot of fun. I didn't know I wanted this, it was just meant to be. I never could have found my voice in a courtroom as an attorney. I think when you speak you have to speak about something you truly believe in and when you speak about something you love to do, it just comes naturally to you. I would have never felt that in a courtroom," Katie said.

Since that time Katie has participated in many activities locally, including programs with a co-op and assisting with UDIM instructors helping other farmers find their voice and confidence to tell their story.

In a measure to educate the consumer, the Dellars encourage guided tours explaining the operation of their farm. They follow bio-security protocol, so all tours must be scheduled with some advance notice.

During the tour the Dellars explain the milking process and how many people come together to help them with their cows including a veterinarian, hoof trimmers and even a cow dietitian.

They explain what the cows eat and how the milking process is completed without any human hands ever coming in contact with the milk. They take consumers through their barn and explain the different stations and the care they give to each cow and calf.

They have done tours for the children's Head Start program and for their own co-op where they were finalists for the Outstanding Young Dairy Cooperative Conference last year.

This year Katie is excited about starting a 4-H group, having never been a member of 4-H before, she's anxious to see how that will go.

The Dellars welcome interest from groups and individuals. Anyone interested in scheduling a tour of an operating dairy farm, contact Katie by phone at (989) 335-0879, e-mail at jasonkatie-dellar@yahoo.com or visit her Facebook page under the name Dairy Mom.

Dairy -- did you know...

The dairy facts are from the Michigan Milk Producers Association and Katie Dellar, a local dairy farmer:

- There are about 355,000 cows producing milk in Michigan. The large black and white Holstein is the most common. Other breeds include: Guernsey, Jersey, Brown Swiss, Ayrshire and Milking Shorthorns.

- In 2009, Michigan ranked eighth nationally in annual milk production, representing 4.2 percent of the total U.S. production.

- Regulatory standards for dairy products are higher than those of any other food product.

- Dairy cows eat roughly 70-90 pounds of food a day and drink nearly a bathtub full of water - 20 to 25 gallons.

- About 76 percent of the calcium available in the food supply is obtained by consuming milk and dairy products.

- To make one pound of butter it takes 21.2 pounds of milk. To make one pound of cheese it takes 10 pounds of milk and to make one gallon of ice cream it takes 12 to 15 pounds of milk.

- There are approximately 2,000 Grade A dairy farms in Michigan.

- The average milking herd in Michigan has 150 cows.

- Michigan dairy herds produce approximately eight billion pounds of milk on an annual basis.

- Michigan dairy farms employ approximately 17,000 people and generate an additional 9,500 jobs throughout the state's economy.

- The dairy industry in Michigan contributes approximately $5.9 billion to the state's economy annually.

- The average Michigan cow produces approximately 22,445 pounds of milk each year. That's 2,610 gallons of milk a year or over eight gallons of milk every day of her milking period.

- The Dellar household, with two parents and four young children, goes through a gallon of milk a day. Their cows produce enough milk in one day to feed their family for an entire year.

- An eight ounce glass of milk provides a big percentage of the recommended daily allowance of vitamins and minerals: 17 percent protein; 29 percent calcium; 23 percent phosphorus; 23 percent riboflavin; 25 percent vitamin D; 15 percent vitamin B-12.

- Michigan is a surplus milk state and provides milk for not only Michigan but all of United States and many other countries. If you look under the date on your milk for the code beginning with the number 26 that means your milk came from Michigan. Some cheeses also contain the Michigan number starting with 26.

The spy wore purple

By Kathryn Fritz Kniep
Columnist

Just a week and a half from now, the Princess will become the Princess Bride. That's a significant event in our family history. But it also means that for the last month or so, said Princess and I have been making and assembling and organizing the various elements of the event.

This includes choosing, finding or when necessary painting, dying or otherwise contriving things in the bride's colors - plum (which I think of as purple) and fuchsia (which I think of as pink). The more tedious assignments, such as rolling silverware in napkins or creating a dozen identical centerpieces, tend to go on Mom's to-do list.

While I'm sitting at the dining room table, awash in a sea of pink and purple and watching the news, I've been entertaining myself with the little on-going story of Smedly, the earnest, if imaginary, National Security Administration agent assigned to monitor my e-mail and Facebook.

Smedly isn't your flashy, Tony Dinozzo-style secret agent. Not the sort who, upon arriving in a third-world country, rents a shady lady for the weekend on the government dole. Actually, he's quite happy if he can bring in a baseball game on his laptop and find a decent pizza. Smedly originally joined the FBI to do forensic accounting, but what with budget constraints and changes in government structure, he found himself transferred to NSA.

And ever since he up-chucked eggnog on the director's wife's designer shoes at the last agency Christmas party, he's been drawing less than exciting assignments.

Like monitoring my communications. Actually, I'm only on the list because it says, after my name, "left-wing newspaper columnist" which sounds like much more of a much than it is. So instead of a raving liberal fire-brand, Smedly finds himself monitoring a frazzled mom who's planning a wedding. I imagine the bi-weekly staff meeting at the agency as going this way...

The director, "Well, Smedly, it looks like you might be on to something here. According to our monitoring of your monitoring, your subject spent a considerable time on communications last week in which she used the word 'turkey' more than 117 times."

Smedly sighed, "Well sir, that's true. But if you review the materials, you'll find that she also used the word 'chicken' 237 times. They decided on the chicken." He consulted his notes, "Turkey is cheaper, but it's harder to keep hot, sir."

"Well, the commerce division reported that she's ordered a large number of glass jars and two cases of incendiary devices in the past 30 days. What do you think, Smedly? Molotov cocktails?"

"Candle jars, Sir," Smedly dutifully reported. "And the accompanying votive candles - 72 of them, plum - except for the head table where they're fuchsia. They'll have a little sand in the bottom, because it's a beach wedding, and then a shell and a couple of..."

The director cut him off. "You don't think this is all clever code, Smedly? You don't think this is an attack in the planning stages?"

Once again, Smedly sighed. "I think it's a wedding sir. Unless she's planning to pelt the Pentagon with mozzarella balls. The little ones, that come in the basil marinade."

"Well, stay alert, man," the director told him, slapping a computer printed 8 1/2 x 11 glossy photo onto the table. "Our surveillance team thinks this structure might be some kind of sniper stand."

"It's a trellis, sir," Smedly reported. "A white trellis - not white-white, more off white, of course. And if you think it's easy to rent a trellis that a six foot, five inch groom will fit under while wearing a top hat, you've never tried to find one."

"So you don't think she's plotting a swift and terrifying takeover of the Harrisville, Michigan Children's Fourth of July Parade, Smedly?" Smedly took off his glasses, rubbed his eyes and shook his head. "No, Sir. I think she's planning a wedding. A beach wedding. Where the bride only wants a tent if it rains, so they had to find a company that would have one available on a last minute, as-needed basis. It's a small tent, but if it rains, she figures fewer people will show up and..."

One more time, the director cut Smedly off. "And what about these 72 computer logins to a government agency in the last 30 days?" Smedly looked over the print out the director handed him. "Oh, this is the father of the bride," he explained. "He's checking with NOA on a regular basis to see if they've put up the 10 day forecast yet. He really, really doesn't want to put up that tent in the rain, sir, and I don't blame him."

"So let's wrap this up," the director said. "Give me your overall evaluation of the situation." Smedly put his glasses back on and squinted at his notes. "Well, sir, I think the decision on the chicken was a good one, if regrettable. I tend to agree with the MOB on the silk flowers versus real flowers debate - from a distance, you really can't tell the difference. And I think the candy buffet instead of individual favors was a stroke of genius. I mean, really, what does anybody do with those little pink bags of flower seeds, anyway..."

"Cut to the chase, then," the director barked, standing to indicate that the meeting is coming to an end. "Where would you set the threat level?" For a moment, Smedly gazed off into the distance. "I'd say it's not as dark as plum, Sir," he said finally, "more like... maybe... fuchsia."

Smedly gathered his notes

Puttin' On

and his cardboard cup of cold coffee and headed back to his cubicle, loosening his tie. No time to waste, after all. It's only nine-fifteen and the subject is already deep into a discussion of whether to bustle the gown or not to bustle. Personally, he's in favor of the bustle. Why drag the train through all that sand?

So that's what I've been doing, these last couple months. Painting things purple and pink and making up little vignettes about Smedly, my personal NSA agent. It passes the time. At this point, I'd really like to send him an invitation, but finding his address would prove a real nightmare.

Still, who knows, once we've taken the beach and thrown the bouquet, maybe he'll show up and whisk me off for a relaxing week in a third-world country, with baseball on the laptop and a pizza delivered to the door.

About now, that would just tickle me fuchsia.

Tigers fall in regional first round

By Jared Steiner
Baseball Writer

The Alcona varsity baseball team had a successful season which included a Huron Shores Conference title and a district championship. But the team wanted more when they traveled to Bay City, Mich. to play the Merrill Vandals in the first round of regional action.

The Tigers came up short however, losing a heart-breaker 3-4 in a battle that came down to the last inning. Cody Franklin was the losing pitcher for the Tigers. He struck out nine, walked eight and gave up four hits.

Franklin was also the leading hitter for Alcona, as he went three-for-four with two singles and a triple. Nathan Fettes also picked up a triple while Jared Steiner picked up two singles and an RBI. Trenton LaVergne and Carson Jamieson each had singles with Jamieson getting an RBI as well.

The Tigers ended their season with a 25-11 record.

At the awards banquet the Tiger players and coaches received several awards. Head coach Terry Franklin received Coach of the Year in the Huron Shores Conference as well as District Coach of the Year.

Cody Franklin, Jared Steiner and Nathan Fettes were first team All-Conference as well as first team All-District. Joe Hudgins, Carson Jamieson, Austin Cole and Trenton LaVergne all received second team All-Conference with LaVergne and Hudgins receiving first team All-District.

Whose water is it, anyway?

The Alcona County Road Commission is responsible for many miles of ditches, 26 bridges, and countless culverts across the county allowing for the dispersal of storm water, winter melt off, and natural drainage.

In fact, the road commission is responsible for any water that may affect the roadway.

According to Alcona County Road Commission Manager Director Jesse Campbell, proper drainage of water from the roadway is imperative to the life and longevity of any road surface. The best roads are those that are built up and have adequate ditches to allow water to drain away from the road.

Road commission crews spend a good portion of maintenance time on ridding ditches of brush and debris, installing new and bigger culverts where needed, and upgrading culverts to bridges, if needed to mitigate or reduce the impact of water on roadways.

With that being said, many times the road commission is called upon to solve drainage issues that may not be related to road drainage. Campbell explained, in these cases there are a few irrefutable facts about water to consider: It usually runs down hill, it seeks the path of least resistance, it isn't discriminating about damaging anything that gets in its way, and it is generally not welcomed by the property owner at the bottom of the hill unless it's being used for some purpose, then the property owner is angry if the flow is diverted for whatever reason.

"Ditch and drainage maintenance is a very important part of what we do, but the bottom line is if there isn't a negative impact on a road, it probably isn't something the road commission can help with," Campbell said.

He explained, for water issues involving a road, a road commission representative will investigate and determine what if any thing can be done to alleviate the problem. At any time, property owners are responsible for their own driveway culvert repair and maintenance. Installation of new driveways is allowed and specifications are exclusively Everything goes with beer?

By Judy MacNeill
Health Writer

Opposites attract. My husband, Warren, and I are living proof of this. Sometimes I worry about how little we actually have in common.

While my idea of fun is attending a party with lots of people to talk to; Warren thrives in the woods. Preferably by himself. I love the summer, the hotter the better. He just gets grumpy. In the winter, we switch and I get to be the grumpy one.

We tend to be opposite in our food choices as well. Not to be cliché, but Warren wants the guy's guy menu. He loves red meat. And not the three ounce "size of a deck of cards" portion that is recommended by health professionals (like his wife). Of course not... it has to be big. Fill-the-plate big.

I'm more of a flexitarian in my eating choices. I love a meal that emphasizes vegetables. Throw some chicken or fish in with it, but leave the red meat for someone else. My idea of a fast meal is microwaved "baked" potato with sautéed vegetables, topped with cottage cheese. Yum. His idea of a quick meal is a half pound of bologna. No bread - just straight out of the package.

I should have known it was going to be like this when I first met him. To impress me on one of our early dates, Warren offered to make dinner for me. Amazed that he would even offer, I quickly agreed. When I arrived, he had the table set (impressive) with a candle stuck in an empty lambrusco wine bottle (slightly concerning). After seating me, he placed what appeared to be a big slab of some type of red meat, completely covering my plate. When I carefully asked what else we might be having with this meal, he gave me a puzzled look, and then quickly offered "beer?"

Somehow we managed to see past these opposites, and have stayed married close to 26 years now. That's an impressive track record when you consider he knew full well he was marrying a dietitian, and I made it clear that I was going to make it my life's mission to teach him to eat healthier.

I thrive on challenges, and this one had all the earmarks of a humdinger.

I'm not sure that I ever succeeded, over the years, in my plans to get Warren to fully appreciate the benefits of healthy eating. Yet I tried so hard, and put so much effort into it.

When our kids were young and I had to miss dinner because of a meeting, I would carefully plan out the menu and then coach Warren on how to follow through. I would also leave him copious notes in painstaking detail. I would organize the quick-to-make foods and set them in an obvious place.

Assuming that preparing fresh vegetables would be too much trouble, I opted for canned vegetables in its place. To remove any lingering questions Warren might have about what to serve for dinner that night, I would place an unopened can of vegetables in a saucepan, set the pan on the stove, place a can opener in plain sight, and tape a note to the can saying "Heat Me!" And sure enough, I would find those items still sitting there, untouched, when I arrived at home later. When I asked what he fed our children for supper instead of my carefully planned meal, the answer sounded hauntingly similar to that first meal he made me ...minus the beer.

So it is with some relief that we found we can agree on at least one thing food-wise: The love of grilling. Fortunately, Warren wants complete control over the barbecuing process. I'm happy to relinquish that role, content to putter in the kitchen.

Of course, we don't agree on what to grill... that would be too easy. I prefer grilled vegetables, or perhaps a meat and vegetable kebab combo. Throw a Mediterranean side salad of some type to go along with that, and I am in hog heaven (so to speak). No surprise... Warren just wants meat.

But, throw in some beer, and I think we can make it work.

Judy's Grilled Mediterranean Chicken Kebabs

(Adapted from "Grilling for Dummies")

4 servings

Ingredients:

- 1 pound boneless, skinless chicken breasts
- ½ c plain nonfat yogurt
- 3 large cloves garlic, peeled & crushed
- 2 Tbsp fresh lemon juice
- 1 Tbsp grated fresh ginger
- 2 tsp olive oil
- ½ tsp ground cumin
- ¾ tsp cinnamon
- ½ tsp turmeric
- ¼ tsp cayenne pepper or to taste

- Salt & pepper to taste
- Any or all of the following:
- 15-20 grape tomatoes
- 2 bell peppers (yellow, red, green, or orange), cored & cut into 1" pieces
- ½ lb fresh mushrooms, cleaned and stems removed
- 1-2 medium onion, peeled and quartered
- 1-2 small zucchini or yellow squash; washed and cut into 1 inch pieces

Directions:

1. Rinse chicken breasts under cold running water, pat dry with paper towel. Cut into 1 ¼ inch cubes. Place chicken in a large re-sealable plastic bag.

2. To prepare marinade: in a medium bowl, using a wire whisk, mix yogurt, garlic, lemon juice, ginger, oil, and spices until well blended (can also be mixed in a food processor).

3. Pour marinade into bag with chicken, seal and toss to coat well. Press out any air, refrigerate for at least six hours or overnight.

4. If using wooden skewers, pre-soak for 30 minutes prior to grilling.

5. Prepare medium-hot heat in a charcoal or gas grill.

6. As grill preheats, remove chicken from marinade and thread on skewers, alternating between chicken cubes and vegetables except tomato (pepper, mushroom, onion, zucchini, chicken, repeat).

7. Place skewers on well-oiled grill grid; grill kebabs for 5-6 minutes per side, turning once. Place a grape tomato on top of each skewer and grill 1-2 minutes more until tomato is lightly browned

Judy's version of Tabbouleh

6 servings

Ingredients:

- 1 cup bulgur
- 2 cups water
- 1 large cucumber, peeled and cut into ½ inch cubes
- 2 cups grape tomatoes, halved
- ¼ cup olive oil
- Juice of 1-2 lemons
- 4 green onion, finely sliced (white and green parts)
- 3 cups fresh parsley (note: Warren does not like parsley, so I leave it out and it turns out fine...but not very traditional)

1/4 c fresh mint (Note: I never have any when I need it, so you can leave it out...but better if added)

- ¼ tsp ground cumin
- Salt and pepper to taste
- ½ cup reduced-fat feta cheese, crumbled

Directions:

1. You can prepare bulgur either by cooking 1 c bulgur to 2 c cold water in medium pan; bring to boil, reduce heat, cover and simmer for 12-16 minutes, allow to cool; or use a pre-soak method (place 1 c bulgur in medium bowl; add 2 cups boiling water. Let stand 1 hour. Drain any additional water out)

2. When bulgur is cool, add remaining ingredients except lemon juice and feta cheese. Toss, then add lemon juice to taste. Season as needed with salt and pepper. Top with feta cheese before serving.

Warren's Grilled Steak

For one serving

Ingredients:

- 6 ounces (12 ounces if Judy is not home) of your choice beef, venison, or pork, about 1 inch thickness
- Olive oil
- Garlic powder
- McCormick's Grill seasoning

Directions:

1. Prepare medium heat in a charcoal or gas grill.
2. Allow meat to sit covered loosely with plastic wrap at room temperature for 15-30 minutes. Brush oil on both sides of meat; lightly sprinkle seasonings on both sides
3. Place meat on well-oiled grill grid, directly over medium heat. Grill, uncovered, 14-16 minutes for medium-rare to medium, turning every 5 minutes.
4. Remove meat from grill;

cover loosely with foil and let meat rest for a few minutes before serving

5. Serve with nothing else, except, perhaps, a bottle of beer.

set by a permit process through the road commission to ensure proper and continued function of the ditch.

According to Campbell, ditches shouldn't be used to dump yard waste and/or other garbage and, more importantly, should not be filled in or changed without prior permission to do so. Further, no attempt should be made to divert or block existing water ways.

Finally, as much as it has been hoped that road ditches will solve age-old flooding problems in low areas, it is probably safe to assume a ditch along the road is not going to solve the problem.

Questions or concerns about ditches and drainage or other road issues, can be directed to the Alcona County Road Commission at 301 N. Lake Street, P.O. Box 40, Lincoln, Mich. 48742, by phone at (989) 736-8168 or by e-mail at roads@alconacrc.com.

2012 Water Quality Report for The City of Harrisville

This report covers the drinking water quality for the City of Harrisville for the calendar year 2012. This information is a snapshot of the quality of the water that we provided to you in 2012. Included are details about where your water comes from, what it contains, and how it compares to Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and state standards.

Your water comes from two (2) groundwater wells located at 417 Mill Creek Rd. The state performed an assessment of our source water in 2010. Copies of the reports are available from the Harrisville City Clerk's Office. Our wells were determined to have moderately low susceptibility to contamination.

Contaminants and their presence in water: Drinking water, including bottled water, may reasonably be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants. The presence of contaminants does not necessarily indicate that water poses a health risk. More information about contaminants and potential health effects can be obtained by calling the EPA's Safe Drinking Water Hotline (800-426-4791).

Vulnerability of sub-populations: Some people may be more vulnerable to contaminants in drinking water than the general population. Immuno-compromised persons such as persons with cancer undergoing chemotherapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS or other immune systems disorders, some elderly and infants can be particularly at risk from infections. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. EPA/CDC guidelines on appropriate means to lessen the risk of infection by Cryptosporidium and other microbial contaminants are available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline (800-426-4791).

Sources of drinking water: The sources of drinking water (both tap water and bottled water) include rivers, lakes, streams, ponds, reservoirs, springs and wells. Our water comes from wells. As water travels over the surface of the land or through the ground, it dissolves naturally-occurring minerals and, in some cases, radioactive material and can pick up substances resulting from the presence of animals or from human activity.

Contaminants that may be present in source water include:

* Microbial contaminants, such as viruses and bacteria, which may come from sewage treatment plants, septic systems, agricultural livestock operations and wildlife.

* Inorganic contaminants, such as salts and metals, which can be naturally-occurring or result from urban stormwater runoff, industrial or domestic wastewater discharges, oil and gas production, mining or farming.

* Pesticides and herbicides, which may come from a variety of sources such as agriculture and residential uses.

* Radioactive contaminants, which can be naturally occurring or be the result of oil and gas production and mining activities.

* Organic chemical contaminants, including synthetic and volatile organic chemicals, which are by-products of industrial processes and petroleum production, and can also come from gas stations, urban stormwater runoff, and septic systems.

In order to ensure that tap water is safe to drink, EPA prescribes regulations that limit the amount of certain contaminants in water provided by public water systems. Food and Drug Administration regulations establish limits for contaminants in bottled water which provide the same protection for public health.

Water Quality Data

The table below lists all the drinking water contaminants that we detected during the 2012 calendar year. The presence of these contaminants in the water does not necessarily indicate that the water poses a health risk. Unless otherwise noted, the data presented in this table is from testing done January 1 – December 31, 2012. The state allows us to monitor for certain contaminants less than once per year because the concentrations of these contaminants are not expected to vary significantly from year to year. All of the data is representative of the water quality, but some are more than one year old.

Terms and abbreviations used below:

• Maximum Contaminant Level Goal (MCLG): The level of a contaminant in drinking water below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MCLGs allow for a margin of safety.

• Maximum Contaminant Level (MCL): The highest level of a contaminant that is allowed in drinking water. MCLs are set as close to the MCLGs as feasible using the best available treatment technology.

• Maximum Residual Disinfectant Level (MRDL): The highest level of a disinfectant allowed in drinking water. There is convincing evidence that addition of a disinfectant is necessary for control of microbial contaminants.

• Maximum Residual Disinfectant Level Goal (MRDLG): The level of a drinking water disinfectant below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MRDLGs do not reflect the benefits of the use of disinfectants to control microbial contaminants.

• N/A: not applicable ND: not detectable at testing limit ppb: parts per billion or micrograms per liter ppm: parts per million or milligrams per liter

• Action Level (AL): The concentration of a contaminant which, if exceeded, triggers treatment or other requirements that a water system must follow.

Samples collected at the Wellhouse:

Regulated Chemical Contaminants	MCL	MCLG	Our Water	Sample Date	Violation Yes / No	Typical Source of Contaminants
Fluoride (ppm)	4	4	0.20 MG/L	6/13/2012	No	Erosion of natural deposits

Unregulated Chemical Contaminants ²	Our Water	Sample Date	Violation Yes / No	Typical Source of Contaminants
Sodium (ppm)	N/D	6/13/2012	N/A	Erosion of natural deposits
Sulfate (ppm)	16 mg/L	6/13/2012	N/A	Erosion of natural deposits

²Unregulated contaminants are those for which EPA has not established drinking water standards. Monitoring helps EPA to determine where certain contaminants occur and whether it needs to regulate those contaminants.

Samples Collected in the Distribution System:

Contaminants Subject to an Action Level	Action Level, MCL, or MRDL	Our Water	Sample Date	Number of Samples Above AL	Typical Source of Contaminants
Lead (ppb) ³	AL = 15	(90 th percentile) 0	8/22/2012	0	Corrosion of household plumbing systems; Erosion of natural deposits
Copper (ppm) ³	AL = 1.3	(90 th percentile) 0.100	8/22/2012	0	Corrosion of household plumbing systems; Erosion of natural deposits; Leaching from wood preservatives

³90 percent of the samples collected were at or below the level reported for our water. Lead and copper monitoring sample results were provided to all people whose site was tested in 2012

Microbial Contaminants	MCL	MCLG	Positive Samples	Violation Yes / No	Typical Source of Contaminants
Total Coliform Bacteria	1 positive monthly sample (5% of monthly samples positive)	0	0	no	Naturally present in the environment
Fecal Coliform and E. coli	Routine and repeat samples are total coliform positive, and one is also fecal or E. coli positive	0	0	no	Human and animal fecal waste

We will update this report annually and will keep you informed of any problems that may occur throughout the year, as they happen. Copies are available at the Harrisville City Clerk's Office, 200 N. Fifth St., Harrisville, MI 48740. This report will not be sent to you.

We invite public participation in decisions that affect drinking water quality. The Harrisville City Council meets regularly at 7:00 p.m. on the second Monday of the month at the Harrisville City Clerk's Office at 200 Fifth St. Harrisville MI 48740. For more information about your water, or the contents of this report, contact The City of Harrisville (989)724-6666. For more information about safe drinking water, visit the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency at www.epa.gov/safewater/.

Weather History

June 19, 1835 - A tornado tore through the center of New Brunswick, N.J. killing five people and scattering debris as far as Manhattan Island. The tornado provided the first opportunity for scientists to study firsthand the track of such a storm.

Weather Trivia

Do tornadoes occur on every continent?

Answer: Yes, except on the continent of Antarctica.

StarWatch By Gary Becker - Follow the Waxing Moon

There are lots of "fun things" happening in the sky this week. Look for the first quarter moon on Sunday, June 16. The dark terminator, which divides day from night, will look like a straight line. Since the moon is waxing or growing, the terminator at present represents the sunrise location on the lunar surface. If you scan the moon's surface with binoculars or a telescope, it is along the terminator where you will observe the greatest amount of detail, since it is here that shadows are at their longest. Then notice bright Spica, ahead and to the left of the moon. The moon is headed towards the principal star of Virgo the Virgin and will be located just to the left of this blue-white supergiant by the 18th. The moon and Spica will make a fine pair in binoculars, but you will notice that the moon's terminator has changed to a bulbous appearance. The waxing moon is moving through its gibbous phase and has become considerably brighter, easily casting shadows on the ground. The following evening the moon is below and to the left of another "star," just slightly brighter than Spica. A small telescope or even higher powered binoculars held with steady hands will reveal that this is no ordinary star. It has rings. You've just discovered the planet Saturn, which will be steadily moving across the western sky for the next several months before disappearing in bright twilight at the very beginning of autumn. By Friday, June 21, the moon stands above and to the left of the red supergiant Antares in Scorpius the Scorpion, just about as low as it can get in the sky. June 21 at 1:04 p.m., EDT also marks the summer solstice or sun standstill. In the United Kingdom this event is also termed the midsummer sun. The sun can go no higher in the sky for most of the Northern Hemisphere. It is the start of summer and the longest day of the year. For the sun, it's all downhill for the next six months until the winter solstice. www.astronomy.org

STRANGE BUT TRUE by Samantha Weaver

• It is still not known who made the following sage observation: "The difference between "involvement" and "commitment" is like an eggs-and-ham breakfast: The chicken was "involved"; the pig was "committed."

• If you wanted to use fossil fuels to equal the amount of energy released by the sun onto the Earth, you'd have to burn 550 billion tons of coal every day.

• Lightning isn't solely a phenomenon of Earth: Astronomers have noted lightning bolts on Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Venus.

• In 1915, the average annual income for a family in the United States was $687.

• You might be surprised to learn that the name Adam isn't actually a proper name in the classical Hebrew language; it's a generic term for a human being.

• If you're planning a visit to the village of Chester in the United Kingdom, be glad you're not from Wales. In that town, the law says that any Welshman found within the city walls after sunset may be shot with a longbow.

• In Germany, cacao was used for medicinal purposes long before it was used to make chocolate.

• It is, perhaps, unsurprising that the first duty-free airport shop -- those favored sources of tax-free liquor -- was in Shannon, Ireland.

• It was in the very early years of the 20th century when, in his "Devil's Dictionary," Ambrose Bierce defined a corporation as "an ingenious device for obtaining individual profit without individual responsibility."

• In Alabama, every purchase of a deck of playing cards is subject to a special 10-cent tax. Those who sell the cards must pay a $1 to $3 license fee.

MOMENTS IN TIME The History Channel

• On July 7, 1852, according to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's stories, Dr. John H. Watson is born. Coincidentally, the author died on this day in England at the age of 71. His first Sherlock Holmes story, "A Study in Scarlet," was published in Beeton's Christmas Annual in 1887.

• On July 3, 1863, on the third day of the Battle of Gettysburg, Confederate Gen. Robert E. Lee's last attempt at breaking the Union line ends in disastrous failure, bringing the most decisive battle of the American Civil War to an end. Exhausted, both armies held their positions until the night of July 4, when Lee withdrew.

• On July 5, 1946, French designer Louis Reard unveils a daring two-piece swimsuit at a Paris swimming pool. A Parisian showgirl modeled the new fashion, which Reard dubbed "bikini," inspired by a U.S. atomic test that took place off the Bikini Atoll in the Pacific Ocean earlier that week.

• On July 4, 1954, Marilyn Sheppard is beaten to death inside her home in Cleveland. Her husband, Dr. Sam Sheppard, claimed to see a man with bushy hair fleeing the scene, but the authorities charged Sheppard with killing his pregnant wife. Sheppard's case provided the loose inspiration for the hit television show "The Fugitive."

• On July 2, 1964, in a nationally televised ceremony, President Lyndon Johnson signs into law the historic Civil Rights Act. The Civil Rights Act met tough opposition in the House and a lengthy, heated debate in the Senate before being approved.

• On July 6, 1976, in Annapolis, Md., the United States Naval Academy admits women for the first time in its history with the induction of 81 female midshipmen. In May 1980, Elizabeth Anne Rowe became the first woman member of the class to graduate.

• On July 1, 1984, the Motion Picture Association of America, which oversees the voluntary rating system for movies, introduces a new rating, PG-13. The action film "Red Dawn," starring Patrick Swayze and Charlie Sheen, became the first PG-13 movie to be released in theaters.

All motions passed.

Dawn LaLonde, Clerk

This synopsis published prior to board approval.

CITY OF HARRISVILLE MINUTES

The regular meeting of the Harrisville City Council was held on June 10 at the city office. The meeting was called to order at 7 p.m. by Mayor Dobis and the "Pledge of Allegiance" was said.

Present: Mayor Dobis, treasurer Keerl, clerk Pierce, council members Tartaglia, Kaiser, Lemere, Baird and Sanderson and city attorney Cook. Absent: Crick. Motion by Baird, support by Sanderson, to approve the minutes of May 13. Motion carried 5-0. Motion by Lemere, support by Tartaglia, to pay the bills in the amount of $22,811.01. Motion carried 5-0.

Clerk Pierce informed council of most recent update concerning correspondence with Jennifer Muladore, ecologist, Huron Pines Conservation. Actively planning for a public meeting for city residents and maintenance contractors concerning invasive species within the city. Date to be announced. Mayor Dobis reported on new sign at the city compost site and the new sign-in procedures for contractors servicing residents. Residents may still have access to the city compost area on weekends with advance coordination with the city office or maintenance workers.

Mayor Dobis addressed possibility of a Port-a-Potty at the Mill Pond site. The monthly fee for rental from Holmes Septic Service is $85. Discussion. Motion to have a Port-a-Potty at the Mill Pond site by Sanderson, support by Tartaglia. Ayes: Sanderson and Tartaglia. Nays: Lemere, Kaiser and Baird. Motion denied.

Mayor Dobis updated council as to the water leak issues around the city. Larry's Electric, Sheila's Laundromat and Harrisville Holistic Center issues have been resolved by the city and the private property owners. Mayor Dobis reviewed the annual fireworks display insurance certificate by Melrose Pyrotechnics, Inc. to be coordinated by Richard Sella. The annual fireworks display is scheduled for the evening of Saturday, July 6 at the harbor.

Harbor commissioner Baird informed council that the harbor has hired two new summer help employees with one pending. There are 18 confirmed seasonal boat slip rentals with the possibility of 25-30 seasonal rentals this summer. Dredging at the harbor is waiting for the final coordination of permits from the state and the Army Corps of Engineers. Discussion concerning removal of sediment from harbor and disposal. Motion by Lemere, support by Kaiser, to make available city property on Walker Road, for a potential spoils area. Motion carried 5-0. Planning commissioner Baird reported the commission had a work session at which members gave a final review of the draft of the zoning ordinances. NEMCOG is printing copies for the commission members to review in final draft form. A public hearing will be scheduled as soon as final copies of the ordinances are made available for public review.

Fire department: Fire advisory committee member Baird reported that Harrisville Township supervisor Stone, Mayor Dobis, FAC members Pyne and Baird to discuss transparency in fire department funding within the township and the city and discussed a review of the existing contract between the municipalities. Jackie Trimmer, beautification chairperson, reported all the money has been spent for the city projects. The committee is encouraging volunteers to come to the harbor on Friday, June 21 from 9 to 11 a.m., to join in on the cleanup at the top of the harbor area. Bring rakes, trowels, gloves, and any other garden supplies for an old fashioned work bee. Council last comments: None. Motion to adjourn by Lemere. Adjourned at 7:55 p.m.
