Tigers win third straight district title

By Ron YokomBasketball Writer

The largest, noisiest, and most enthusiastic crowd of the season got its money's worth when the Alcona boys varsity basketball team hosted the Tawas Braves in the district 91 championship.

Prior to the district championship game, the Braves had won two close games during the regular season and took the Huron Shores Conference title from the Tigers.

Two evenly matched teams fought tooth and nail ending the regulation game in a 37-37 tie and then went through two four-minute overtime periods to finally decide the winner.

The Tigers outscored the Braves 13-0 in the second overtime, winning the district championship 52-39 for their third district championship in a row. The final score was no indication of the close- fought battle. Alcona's largest lead, before the second over time, was five points. Tawas's biggest lead was four points.

In the first quarter Tawas jumped in front 2-0 before Alcona went on a 6-0 run. The Braves came back with six unanswered points to regain the lead. Trent LaVergne followed with seven points and Alcona had a 15-12 lead after one quarter. The Tigers increased their lead to five points to start the second quarter. Tawas outscored Alcona 11-5 and led 24-25 at halftime.

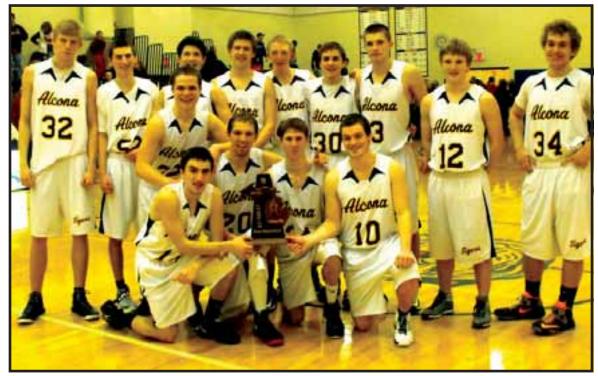

The third quarter was one of frustration for both teams with the Braves outscoring the Tigers 9-7 and led 34-31 heading into the fourth quarter. Both teams continued to struggle offensively. Tawas did not score a field goal and had three points from the free throw line. Trailing 37-33 Alcona closed to within two points on a jumper by LaVergne. Then Aaron Ritchie made two clutch free throws to tie the game. Jared Steiner had a chance to win the game in regulation but missed two free throws.

issed two free throws. The first overtime saw Tawas miss two free throws early and then take a two point lead. With 38 seconds left Steiner made up for his two missed free throws by hitting a floater to tie the game at 39. Tawas could not score on its next possession and the game went into a second overtime.

Tawas continued to struggle as they did not score a point and missed two more free throws. Meanwhile, Alcona scored 13 points including seven free throws to seal the win. Alcona held Tawas to 14 points in the second half and the two overtimes. They protected the ball very well against an aggressive defensive team, turning the ball over only eight times for the game. Garrett Norling hit two clutch free throws to put the game away and give Alcona an eight

Contra dance workshop comes to Alcona County

By Mary Weber Staff Writer

With dance names such as the "Corned Beef Quadrille," "Hey Bob," "Mr. Heimlich's Maneuver," "The Mechanic's Nightmare" and the "Guinea Pig Contra," one can't help but feel a fun evening is in store for those wishing to learn Contra dancing.

Contra dancing is being introduced to Alcona County this spring by a local group which supports the arts and promotes the area -- Inspiration Alcona.

Through mutual interest in music and dance at last year's Inspiration Alcona Arts Retreat, a seed idea was planted among participants to bring Contra dancing to Alcona County.

Eric Dunckel, music chairperson for Inspiration Alcona, is excited about the possibilities of having monthly Contra dance events in the community. "We're starting with two workshops to help people learn the dance moves and gage interest and we'll see where it goes from there. Hopefully, it will be a monthly event and something tourists can enjoy while visiting our county this summer. We are planning on having a big dance at the end of this year's Inspiration Alcona retreat weekend," Dunckel

He explained Contra dancing is a form of American folk dance that became popular in rural New England in the early 1800s. The dance combines elements of line and square dances and is described as an enjoyable community oriented style of dance done at a walking pace.

Dancers of Contra form a set of two parallel lines which run the length of a hall. The dancers move in a sequence which ends with all the dancers having progressed from one position up or down the set, eventually dancing with everyone in their line.

According to Dunckel, the music for Contra dancing can vary, but usually has an old-time Americana feel along with Irish or Scottish jigs and reels which are played acoustically. Bands performing for Contra dances are typically comprised of musicians playing flutes, trumpets, mandolins, banjo, guitar, fiddles and more.

The basic moves of Contra dancing are controlled by a caller similar to Square dancing with swings, promenades, dos-a-dos, and allemandes. Dunckel said the difference between Contra and Square dancing is that Square dancing is done in a set comprised with four couples where the number of Contra dancers is only limited by the length of the hall.

Contra folklore has it that Henry Ford brought Michigan renewed interest in Contra and Square dance during the 1920s. Ford learned the dances while on vacation at an inn in Massachusetts. They were taught by a dance master named Benjamin

New HUNT commander takes proactive approach, encourages community involvement

By Cheryl Peterson Editor

Happy to have been promoted to a position in northern Michigan, the new commander of the Huron Undercover Narcotics Team (HUNT) is still getting to know the area and members of the team after five months.

Michigan State Police Det. Lt. Frank Keck took over the position on October 1, 2012 after the resignation of former team commander Delmar M. Putnam Jr. His resignation came after a 10-month long state police investigation that found he had taken HUNT funds for personal use.

In December 2012, Putnam, pleaded guilty to willful neglect of duty. Pursuant to a plea agreement, Putnam agreed to pay $1,400 in restitution, resign from the Michigan State Police, surrender his Michigan Commission on Law Enforcement Standards (MCOLES) license/certificate and authorized MCOLES to permanently rescind his license/certificate to serve as a law enforcement officer in the state of Michigan. He was sentenced on February 4.

Even though he's coming into the position on the heels of a scandal, Keck said while the case involved HUNT funds, it did not reflect on the team itself. "It doesn't make it any easier to come into a position where the prior person had issues, but that was that person's issues. They got rid of the part that was bad," Keck said.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor,

Prior to the millage election, my questions to all no voters was: "If the millage fails, what is plan B to properly fund our schools? How do you plan to draw new families to this community when this community can't support our school or our local law enforcement (layoffs due to no vote on HUNT)?"

While each person was quick to preface their no responses with how pro-kid/ pro-education they were, not one person could provide any reasonable/realistic alternative. It seems as if no is as far as people think.

Now local schools face the challenge of providing a quality education while doing it with less staffing, equipment and opportunities. Law enforcement is faced with the same issue. I can't help but wonder if many of the no voters aren't going to be the first to complain when reductions are made. Are no voters actively writing their representatives in Lansing to demand proper funding, or will they silently fade away like the vote no on HUNT advocates?

During the millage election, it was clear that certain individuals relied on conspiracy theories and anti-administration rhetoric in an attempt to flame emotions into a no vote. I certainly hope this type of thinking doesn't become the new norm. We need informed, calm and reasonable discussions to fix issues within our community - including education and law enforcement.

Our community needs to be willing to talk with administrators and get facts without distrust or preconceptions. People need to understand how schools and law enforcement are funded. We need less emotion and more logic and, at the end of the day, we need to remember the importance of schools and law enforcement in our community and for our kids.

For those who can do that, I am officially asking, in writing, "Now what?"

Paul Mancine Jr. Lincoln

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor,

On January 14, the Alcona Community Schools Board of Education ratified the teacher's contract. As of Sunday, March 10, 55 days later, it is still not up on the school's website under the transparency section.

At the board meeting on February 25, I was told that the board had a complete copy to vote on and it needed bolds and miscellaneous items taken out. The superintendent praised the Michigan Teachers Association for taking the contract and updating it to save the school money. Why would the board ever give its contract over to the association to update?

I do not understand how the board has enough money to pay the superintendent $2,500 to negotiate a contract but not enough for the business secretary to take a couple of hours to update the contract. Maybe at the next board meeting they can explain why it is more important to pay the superintendent $2,500 than to have the secretary update the contract so the public can view

Since the school is running out of money maybe the board should look at saving $2,500 by negotiating the contract themselves. This would be the right way to do it anyway. Having the superintendent negotiate the contract is a conflict of interest since she works with the teachers.

The free community dance workshops in Alcona County will be held Saturday, March 16 and Saturday, April 20 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. at the Harrisville Township Hall, 114 South Poor Farm Road. The workshops will be called by Midland's Dancer Sue accompanied with recorded music. Sound equipment is being provided by Bill Miller. Refreshments will be available.

According to Dunckel, Contra dances have a relaxed, family-like atmosphere. Family participation is welcomed, but bringing a partner is not necessary. Quite often we have more ladies than men at the dance, which is okay. Dancers should wear light, comfortable clothing and comfortable shoes. Any age and athletic ability are welcome to attend the dance workshop. As long as you can count to eight and walk, you will most likely be able to Contra," Dunckel said noting he has attended Contra dances where participants were school aged children as well as dances with seniors in their 90s participating.

Additional community plans are in the works for Glen Morningstar, a renowned educator of dance, to teach Alcona elementary students the history of dance, as well as some Contra dancing in May. Funds for the extracurricular activity for the students are being made available through the John Stephenson Dance Memorial. The memorial fund was initiated by Maureen Castern in memory of her late husband, John, who was a musician and Contra dance enthusiast.

Judy MacNeill, a founding member of Inspiration Alcona, said "I've been to a few Contra dances and really just fell in love with it. It's challenging, but not too challenging. There is a good variety of music and steps and it's a fun way to burn calories without even realizing it."

How to diagnose and treat sleep apnea

Dear Savvy Senior,

What can you tell me about sleep apnea? My husband, who's 60, has become such a terrible snorer he wakes himself up at night, and he keeps me up too.

Sleepy Shelly

Dear Shelly,

If your husband is a loud snorer who wakes himself up during sleep, he probably needs to be tested for sleep apnea, a dangerous disorder that affects around 22 million Americans - and most don't even know it.

Sleep apnea is a disorder that causes a person to stop breathing during sleep, dozens and even hundreds of times during the night for up to 30 seconds at a time. Left untreated, it can cause extreme daytime sleepiness, as well as a host of serious health conditions like high blood pressure, heart attack, stroke, congestive heart failure, diabetes, depression and gastroesophageal reflux disease.

In fact, it's estimated that every year, around 38,000 Americans die in their sleep from a heart attack or stroke because of sleep apnea.

But the good news is that sleep apnea is very treatable and most insurance companies, including Medicare, cover it.

There are three types of sleep apnea: obstructive, central and mixed. Of the three, obstructive sleep apnea is by far the most common, and occurs when the throat muscles relax during sleep blocking the airway.

While anyone can have it, sleep apnea is most common in people who are overweight, male, middle-aged and older. For women, the risk rises after menopause.

The symptoms include loud snoring (however, not everyone who snores has apnea), long pauses of breathing, gasping or choking during sleep and daytime drowsiness. But because most of these symptoms happen during sleep, most

It's usually the person they're sleeping with who notices it.

To help you get a handle on your husband's problem, the American Sleep Apnea Association has several quick diagnostic tests he can take at sleepapnea.org - click on "diagnosis and treatment." If you suspect a problem after taking these tests, he should try some self-help measures, including:

- Sleeping on his side or stomach: This will help keep his airways open. To promote side sleeping, there are products available that can help like the Rematee Bumper Belt (antisnoreshirt.com) and Sona Pillow (sonapillow.com).
- Losing weight: Excess body weight, especially around the neck, puts pressure on the airway, causing it to partially collapse. Even a slight weight loss may help.
- Avoiding alcohol and sleeping pills: These can relax the muscles in the back people don't recognize them. of his throat, interfering with breathing.

If his problem persists, make an appointment with his primary care doctor or a sleep specialist who will probably recommend an overnight diagnostic sleep test, which can take place at sleep center (see sleepeducation.com), or at home using a portable de-

If he is diagnosed with apnea, the most commonly prescribed treatment is a continuous positive airway pressure (CPAP) device. This involves sleeping with a snorkel-like mask that's hooked up to a machine that gently blows air up your nose to keep the passages open.

Another less invasive treatment option is Provent therapy (proventtherapy.com). This is a small, disposable patch that fits over each nostril to improve airflow. A 30-day supply of these prescription-only patches cost $65 to $90, but unfortunately, it's not currently covered by insurance or Medi-

If the CPAP or nasal patches aren't an option, an oral appliance that fits into the mouth like a removable mouth guard or retainer may be the solution. Oral appliances work by positioning the lower jaw slightly forward to keep the airway open during sleep.

If these don't work, there are also a variety of surgical options available to help keep the throat open and prevent blockages.

Medical and heating assistance available

By Mary Weber Staff Writer

Residents in need of medical funds or heating assistance are encouraged to contact two local entities to see if they qualify for aid. Medical assistance is available through the State of Michigan Department of Human Services (DHS). Heating assistance is available through TrueNorth Community Services.

John Keller, DHS director for Alpena, Alcona and Montmorency counties, explained that Medicaid for those with dependents is typically readily available. "At one time we were able to offer Medicaid for people without dependents throughout the year, but with budget constraints, we are now only capable of providing applications every few years for adults without dependents," Keller said. The window for applying for the adult Medicaid program will only be available during April of this year.

The assistance is determined through income basis. Applicants must be adults from 21 to 65 years of age with no dependents and no disability and must apply between April 1 and April 30 to be eligible for the adult Medicaid program. Those meeting the income and other criteria may get the application form from the Alpena/ Alcona DHS, 711 W. Chisholm in Alpena. Forms are also available at the county clerk's office or may be accessed via Internet through www.mich.-gov/DHS.

Heating assistance available through TrueNorth Community Services (TRHES) is a service provided to 34 counties in northern Michigan. TRHES, is a nonprofit agency focused to serve primarily low-income families in northern lower Michigan. Funding for heating assistance is still available through its Rural Heat and Energy Solutions fund.

"As long as a household's income falls within our guidelines, we can provide the help they need to keep their home heated, especially since many of our households have young children," said TrueNorth's CEO, Bev Cassidy.

She explained, those who are unable to heat their home properly face safety risks. Some resort to unsafe methods to keep their homes warm. These include the use of fireplaces, stoves, improperly vented portable heaters, barbecue grills or overloading electrical circuits. These methods are not only fire hazards, but also create the risk of carbon monoxide poisoning.

Those wishing heating assistance through TRHES may apply via Internet at www.-truenorthservice.org. Applications are also available at the DHS office in Alpena. TrueNorth Rural Heat and Energy Solutions can answer additional questions by contacting regional manager, Mary Smuda, at (231) 923-3869 or e-mail her at msmuda@trhes.org.

Consumers are also encouraged to visit www.-michigan.gov/bewinterwise to find out more information on additional energy assistance opportunities those counties. Keck said officers assigned to the team come and go on a regular basis - that is the nature of the work because it is undercover. "People rotate in and out... They work here for a year or two then go back on the road (working with their own department). It's not the same people working here for a long time.

"It's always been a benefit to all agencies to put someone here for what they take away (the experience and training) with them when they return to their own department. For example, we do a lot of warrant service for area agencies. It's not every day that you do a search warrant as a uniform officer," Keck said. "Additionally, to have a group of people able to do this - assist area agencies it is cost effective.'

Prior to leading HUNT, Keck was a detective sergeant assigned to the Straits Area Narcotics Enforcement (SANE) team that encompasses a seven county area in the eastern Upper Peninsula.

Keck was born in Kalkaska, Mich, and was raised in Ypsilanti, Mich. He graduated from Chelsea High School in 1987. Having set a career goal to work for the Michigan State Police when he was younger, Keck had to wait for the opportunity to apply because of a hiring freeze. For three years following graduation from Michigan State University with a criminal justice degree in 1992 (he minored in pre-law), Keck made cabinets and counter tops until the MSP started hiring again.

"I wouldn't trade that experience now for anything," Keck said. "It was invaluable... and helpful for home improvement projects now."

He entered MSP cadet training school on January 15, 1995 and four months later, as a trooper, he was assigned to the MSP post in Cadillac, Mich. His next position was as a detective trooper with the Traverse Narcotics Team (TNT) which covered seven counties on the western side of the state. Two and a half years later, he was assigned to the post in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. as a desk sergeant. Seven years later he moved into the position at SANE.

While working with SANE, he was a member of the meth response team and was

The recent HUNT millage request Alcona County residents voted down last fall has left the team short an officer, however, "we are going to do what we have to do. deputized to work in conjunction with the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) task force specializing in narcotics detection.

In the years that Keck has working with multijurisdictional task forces focused on narcotics detection and enforcement, he has seen a continual change in every aspect of the drug industry in northern Michigan as well as a constant change in procedures and techniques for law enforcement officers. "It's gone from marijuana gangs in Traverse City to ecstasy labs to the first methamphetamine lab in Cadillac. Now the method has changed on how to make it (meth) and people are teaching each other.

"If people want to believe there is a magic boarder where these people stop, they are mistaken... They (drug traffickers and dealers) might not be from our community, but they are still bringing drugs into our community. I've been here (five) months and there's already been a meth lab found (in the dictional undercover teams operate and will work to make them more uniform in regard to funding and other operational aspects.

According to Keck, law enforcement needs to be proactive, not reactive. "Like with meth labs — we want people to know that we are going to work to nip it in the bud... We need to stop it before it becomes acceptable in the area and a free for all," he said. "I don't get paid by the number of arrests (we) make. But, I do get paid to arrest people who are breaking the law. If I can educate people so they don't break the law — that will make my job easier."

Keck welcomes questions from community members which is something that he also welcomed while working with SANE. "I'm going to try to bring things (warrant service, parole absconder arrests, surveillance, et cetera for other agencies) we used to do at TNT and SANE here - whether they were done here before or not - but it's a good thing to do... I've spent half of my (career) in uniform and half of my time with undercover narcotics teams. I see the nexus between the two-narcotics sales is linked to a lot of other crimes domestic violence, breaking and entering, assault..."

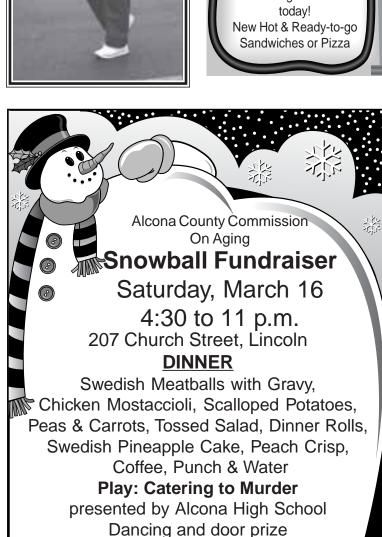

Anyone with questions about the Medical Marijuana Act and other narcotic laws is encouraged to call Keck at the HUNT office. Additionally, anyone who suspects ties HUNT works in is encouraged to call as well. "People don't have to call here and leave their names, they can also get on the website and leave tips... whatever help the public can give us is appreciated. Both asked people from all across Ireland to send in examples of what they considered to be the "true" shamrock, which were then identified botanically. Groups spark restoration for beloved Michigan lights

Although the golden age of Michigan's lighthouses has passed – and most of the towering beacons that once guided many a mariner safely around the Great Lakes have gone dark – the remnants of these "guardians of the lakes" still beckon historians, preservationists and lighthouse buffs fascinated by their beauty, their history and their stories.

It is believed that as many as 370 lighthouses once dotted the Great Lakes during the mid-1800s. According to Dick Moehl, president of the Great Lakes Lighthouse Association Keepers (GLLKA), that number is not surprising considering Michigan has more than 3,200 miles of shoreline. "People take the Great Lakes for granted," Moehl said. "Seventy percent of all goods and services coming into Michigan are touched by the Great Lakes. Without them, how do you keep commerce going?'

An avid boater, Moehl acknowledged that new Global Positioning System (GPS) technology and modern navigational systems have aided in phasing out the Great Lakes lighthouses, but he knows firsthand just how reassuring a thin slice of light beaming across choppy waters on a treacherous night can be

Just over 100 lighthouses still exist on the Great Lakes,

Although the golden age
Michigan's lighthouses ment legislation and the preservation efforts of many volunteers who are slowly bringing these relics from the horse-and-buggy days back to life.

Moehl credited the National Historic Lighthouse Preservation Act of 2000 for bringing about needed policy changes in the way the General Services Administration (the disposal arm of federal properties for the Department of the Interior) transferred the lighthouses to interested groups. "The legislation sparked a new renaissance for historic sites, and in a way, it made us pioneers," Moehl said of his nonprofit GLLKA group.

Pioneer or not, Moehl knows that lighthouse preservation isn't a one-time thing and it doesn't come cheap. The group has to adhere to strict historic standards when working on its five lighthouse restoration projects, including the crown jewel, the St. Helena Lighthouse that sits two miles offshore from Gros Cap and 10 miles west of Mackinac Island in the Straits of Mackinac. They looked for funding through several sources.

Moehl said GLLKA worked through the National Bicentennial Lighthouse Fund, which provides federal assistance for local lighthouse restoration efforts. The 1998 Clean Michigan Initiative added some funding, as did the Michigan Lighthouse Assistance Program, which is funded through the sale of special Michigan lighthouse license plates.

"A lot of good things have happened since the legislation was passed. All the shore lights have been wonderfully cared for," Moehl said. "The next concern is for the offshore lights that are harder to maintain." Moehl said that any type of offshore work is limited to only four or five months out of the year.

The Friends of the Fox Island Lighthouse know what difficulties a short work season can mean to restoration efforts. Sitting 17 miles off Cat's Head Point on the tip of the Leelanau Peninsula, the 1867 South Fox Island lighthouse was transferred to the Michigan Department of Natural Resources as a potential harbor of refuge. A group of individuals interested in preserving the light officially formed the nonprofit Fox Island Lighthouse Association in 2005 and has partnered with the DNR to restore the light.

According to Sandra Bradshaw, of Suttons Bay, Mich. the effort has been a love story. "When we first formed the group we didn't even have a boat to get us out to the island," she said. The group received the gift of a boat they christened The Light-keeper – big and sturdy enough to make the two-hour trip out to the island carrying both materials and volunteers.

The island's remote location and lack of a dock near the work site can make for a logistical nightmare. Many work parties have been marooned by unpredictable weather. Nevertheless, the group has persevered – making the most of its shoestring budget and grateful for the many lighthouse lovers willing to roll up their sleeves and volunteer their time clearing vegetation and stabilizing the structures.

Bradshaw admitted she doesn't know what the future holds for the light that has sat neglected for so many years. "It's a lonely place out there," she said. "But we're working together to save that little light."

Similar efforts are under way on behalf of Copper Harbor Light Station, nestled on the eastern tip of Keweenaw County in the Upper Peninsula. Built in 1848, the first Copper Harbor Light Station operated from 1848 to 1865 and consisted of a keeper's house, separate light tower and landing dock. It was replaced by the current lighthouse in 1866. U.S. Coast Guard crews moved the beacon from the brick lighthouse to an automated steel tower in 1933.

In 1976, the brick lighthouse was opened as a museum, and in 1995 a formal on-site restoration project was initiated by the Michigan Historical Center and Department of Natural Resources' Parks and Recreation Division. That project included work on the 1848 keeper's dwelling, 1866 brick lighthouse and outdoor interpretive trails. The Michigan Historical Center was responsible for the research, interpretive planning and archaeological work funding, while the DNR staff at Ft. Wilkins carried out the hands-on, hammer-andnails restoration work.

Recently, the Copper Harbor Light Station was added to the National Register of Historic Places, protecting it as a significant historic resource. The 1848 keeper's dwelling now serves as the Copper Harbor Light Station's orientation building. The grounds are maintained by DNR staff, and the site is open for tours (weather permitting) from Memorial Day through Labor Day. Visitor access is by a 15-minute boat tour operating from the Copper Harbor Marina.

Whether it's boat tours or bake sales, fundraising is an ongoing concern of any lighthouse preservation group. The Friends of Fox Island partner their fundraising efforts with the Grand Traverse Lighthouse at Leelanau State Park in Northport, Mich.

"People have nicknamed the St. Helena light the 'Miracle of the Straits of Mackinac," Moehl said. "We get calls from across America wanting to know how we've done it. A lot of what we do is by sheer moxie."

Moehl said that one of their biggest sources of funding has been their lighthouse boat tours. The group teams with Shepler Ferry for 42 cruises a year. Each cruise is packed with visitors eager to sightsee and photograph the lighthouses along two separate tour directions through the Straits.

In Moehl's opinion, the trickle-down economics of their preservation efforts are a plus for the Mackinac City area. "We average 80 people per trip, and people come from all over America. Many of them will take one trip and then stay over in Mackinaw City and take the other trip the next day." Moehl said, adding that the dollars visitors spend on lodging, food and sightseeing add up to a positive effect on the area's economic bottom line.

"Lighthouse restoration makes a good all-American story," Moehl said. "But even more so, it's Michigan's story. The lights, their history, their lore – they're all Pure Michigan."

DHS asks commissioners for office space in county building

By Mary Weber Staff Writer

The need for a physical location in the county and the importance of services offered to Alcona residents by the Michigan Department of Human Services (DHS) were presented to the Alcona County Board of Commissioners at its last meeting

Director of the Alpena, Alcona and Montmorency DHS district, John Keller, addressed the board in effort to secure office space for DHS employees who are working out of their vehicles.

"Due to budgetary reasons the DHS closed offices in Alcona County prior to my employment. Two years ago DHS reorganized county administrations creating the tricounty configuration. The office serving the Alcona residents is currently located in Alpena, putting a hardship on residents of Alcona County to either drive to Alpena or incur costs associated with faxing documents to the Alpena office," Keller said

Keller told the commissioners, "We (the DHS) are the primary safety net for impoverished residents needing public assistance in Alcona County." The DHS offers a variety of assistance services including food, cash, child-care, medical and home assistance.

According to Keller, Alcona residents received $254,181 cash assistance for the month of January 2013. DHS helped nearly 2,500 people in the county with some form of assistance the same month. Most needed help obtaining food and were on Medicaid; 30 were receiving help with child development and care and 10 were on state disability.

10 were on state disability. Kellor said the DHS has a heavy work load, in addition to helping with food, cash and housing assistance, the DHS also vigorously pursues investigations of welfare fraud, child abuse and neglect and vulnerable adult abuse and neglect.

"Child abuse and neglect cases are on the rise, if the DHS had a stronger presence within the county, it could help bring those numbers down. Our goal is to keep children with their families, because the separation is traumatic," Keller said. "Currently there are 14 children in licensed foster care in Alcona County. DHS case workers have been working out of their cars and relying on cell phones. Office space, specifically within the county building, would really help assist the residents here."

The DHS is looking for a small office to use on a part-time basis. Keller said possibly down the line DHS could work out some kind of rent payment for the space, but funds were not in the budget at this time.

Commission chairman Kevin Boyat asked Keller if the DHS would be willing to work on contributing to the cost of putting up walls to create the space.

Keller was not sure if construction funds were available, but hoped something could be worked out. Commissioners said they would have a better idea of available space as the reorganic

Leadership program focuses on sustaining boards and organizations

gional Leadership Committee, in cooperation with Michigan State University Extension (MSUE), has offered a variety of leadership training over the past several years. This year is no exception when the second of a trio of mini-sessions --Fifteen Ways to Kindle the Flame and bring your Group, Board or Team to Life -- is being offered Tuesday, March 19 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Alcona Health Center in Lincoln.

The session will focus on building, energizing and maintaining involvement within an organization, governmental unit or community group.

StarWatch By Gary Becker - Comet in the West

I have been waiting several months for this week to arrive because currently there is a comet on the western horizon after sundown. As this article is being written, it has become an easy target to view with the unaided eye from the Southern Hemisphere. It even has a short tail. Now it's headed north for us to see. The interloper's name, PanSTARRS (C2011 L4) comes from the Panoramic Survey Telescope & Rapid Response System, its goal to discover Earthcrossing objects like the meteorite that fell in Russia on February 5. Oops! Actually, no doomsday detection system will be able to discover something that small. PanSTARRS reaches its closest distance from the sun on March 10, just inside the orbit of Mercury, where hopefully solar radiation will sublimate vast quantities of its ices and release copious amounts of dust into space. These are the ingredients that make for a bright comet. The gases glow through a process called fluorescence, while the dust scatters sunlight back in our direction. If there is enough dross, the comet could shine as brightly as the brightest luminary of the night, Sirius, the Dog Star of Canis Major. It should also have a noticeable tail, especially through binoculars. PanSTARRS was becoming brighter as predicated up through December 2012, but since the New Year, the brightening has slowed. Now with its easy views from Down Under, its final brightness may again be up for grabs. Comet PanSTARRS will be low to the western horizon, about eight degrees in altitude, 45 minutes after sundown during the next two weeks. It will be a deep twilight apparition. Very clear skies and a flawless western horizon will be necessary ingredients for a successful observation. If the comet is bright, you'll hear more about PanSTARRS next week. Keep in mind that comets are like cats. They have tails, and they do precisely as they please. www.astronomy.org

VILLAGE OF LINCOLN MINUTES

The Lincoln Village Council met on Monday, March 4 at 7 p.m. at the village hall. The meeting opened with the "Pledge of Allegiance." Those in attendance included: President Jordan, treasurer Kossa, clerk Somers and council members Gauthier, Healy, Naylor and Stutzman. Absent were council members Richard Somers and Kristin Lask. Also present were several guests and attorney Cook. The minutes of the February meeting were approved on a motion from Gauthier with support from Healy. treasurer's report was approved subject to audit on a motion from Gauthier with support from Stutzman.

In public comment time Phil Phillips stated that he would like to be considered for a position on the village council. Teresa Hart asked about having the village help to hold the donations for the Easter egg hunt in the future. It was advised by attorney Cook that a separate account can be set up that will allow the group to secure the funds. It will be held on March 30 from 11 a.m. to noon for the egg hunt. Following the hunt excursion hot dogs and other refreshments will be served and the children will be redeeming their tickets for prizes at the fire hall. Donations can still be made to Teresa Hart or Naomi Potter. Teresa thanked the support from the village and the Downtown Development Authority.

Cora Deller appeared before the council to state that she would like to join the Lincoln fire department/ first responders. Fire chief Leroy Hall and assistant fire chief Scott DuBay both highly recommended that Cora be allowed to join. A motion was made by Healy, with support from Stutzman, to accept Cora as a new firefighter/first responder. Charles Snyder from the Masonic lodge addressed the board. He stated there is a wish list at the lodge and one of the things they have planned is to redo the parking lot. He stated he would like to keep communications open. He will be working with president Jordan to iron out some issues that could be valuable to both groups.

Fire chief stated that they are working on Standard Operating Procedures and he feels they are on the right track. So far it has been fairly quiet. President Jordan stated that he would like to see a policy in place for media issues that have arisen lately. Attorney Cook will work with the group to present something that will work for our local groups.

In old business, Gauthier will be in contact with the ball players regarding the camping issue for their ball tournaments. Healy stated that she has recently attended her first meeting of "Let's Move" and it has been decided to involve the entire county rather than individual towns/municipalities. The group will be trying to work with people to make healthier choices in food and

In new business, Naylor inquired about the issue with Barlow Road Park and the camping that was being done there. President Jordan stated that the District Health Department had notified him regarding the violation of health issues. It would be a very costly venture to develop it into an acceptable campground. Newly sworn council member Naylor thanked the group for accepting him back on the council. Stutzman said he will be planting several of the flower boxes again this year. He will also be working on re-vamping the picnictables for the Flights of Imagination Playground. President Jordan is planning a work bee at the area and everything will be spruced up.

President Jordan gave his report. He said there will be a murder mystery/dinner on March 16 at the senior citizen center. The Alcona High School drama club will be hosting the event. The Alcona County Wide Clean-up will be held in May and a letter was read from the county commissioners. President Jordan addressed the Easter egg hunt and trick or trunk events. He stated that we have never given any monetary support from the village because it is illegal for us to do so. He stated that there is a lot of misinformation and he wants to set the record straight. President Jordan stated that he has received word that the MEDC will not be funding two of the applicants who applied for funds for the façade grant. He said the MEDC will not give funds to Alcona Motors because they have never given funding to a car dealership. Additionally, they will not consider Coles Appliance or Sleep Shop because they are out of the downtown district. They will, however, consider the old bank building and the Cozy Cabin for MEDC funds.

President Jordan stated the closeout letters for the streetscape and ICE grant projects should be received very soon. Data shows childhood poverty rates in Michigan continue to rise

The release of the Kids Count in Michigan Data Book 2012 shows young children living in poverty is on the rise in Michigan. This is a cause for alarm for Alpena Montmorency and Alcona Counties Great Start Collaborative and Parent Coalition.

"Our three county area is rich with great community resources however, we still see gaps in services to families with children," said Stacy Levitt-Ruby, AMA Great Start Collaborative Coordinator. "The AMA Great Start Collaborative is working with our community partners to fill these gaps by creating a movement in our area that involves the entire community in supporting families."

The period covered in the book, 2005 to 2011, saw child poverty rise 28 percent in Michigan and confirmed cases of abuse and neglect increased by 28 percent.

Locally, the report found that poverty in Alpena County has increased 33

The release of the Kids percent, Montmorency ount in Michigan Data County 37 percent and in ook 2012 shows young Alcona County 20 percent.

In addition, in Alpena County the best ranking was number four in the state for mothers receiving less than adequate prenatal care with only 21 percent of mothers receiving less than adequate prenatal care. Montmorency County ranked seven in the state for births to teenagers ages 15-19 which is a rate of roughly 18 births to 1,000 teenagers. Alcona County ranked best in the state for fourth grade MEAP scores, with only 17.3 percent of fourth graders not proficient in reading.

Family income, and racial and ethnic background continue to matter across the state and outcomes are much worse for children in fragile low-income families.

"We clearly see a connection between higher-income communities and better outcomes for kids, but even in more affluent counties, child poverty and the need for food assistance jumped dramatically," said Jane Zehnder-Merrell, Kids Count in Michigan project director at the Michigan League for Public Policy. "No area of the state escaped worsening conditions for children when it comes to economic security."

While a decline in mortality rates for babies, children and youth is noted in the report, too many children suffer from chronic health problems. On a positive note, Michigan has responded by expanding access to health for children giving the state one of the smallest percentages of uninsured children in the nation.

The Kids Count Data Book project is researched and written by the Michigan League for Public Policy. For the first time, the report ranks nearly every county on the overall status of child well-being using 13 out of 15 indicators.
