Alpena County resident declares candidacy for 106th District seat

Scot McKenzie, Democratic candidate for Michigan's 106th House District, kicked off his election bid on April 16 at an event held in Alpena.

McKenzie cited his long-time community involvement, work as an Alpena County commissioner and experience as a small-business owner.

"It is no secret that no matter how hard we continue to work here in northern Michigan, local communities are continuing to struggle under backward Lansing policies," McKenzie said. "I have worked hard as an Alpena County commissioner to make sure that Alpena residents are able to live comfortably.

"Now it's time to take that work to Lansing, where I can do even more for our community and our state. Families need tax relief, and local governments need more funds to keep schools open and police and fire fighters on the streets. I want to keep fighting for our families, and that's why I'm running to be your representative."

McKenzie is a Michigan native and longtime resident of the Alpena area. He graduated from Alpena High School in 1980 and soon after developed a passion for auctioneering.

In 1992, he began an auctioneering and consignment sales business in Alpena. As a small-business owner, McKenzie took every possible opportunity to help his community by holding benefit auctions for countless charities and families in need. He is proud of the work he has done, and said he will continue helping Alpena area residents as their state representative.

"Elected officials are meant to represent the needs and priorities of those who put them into office," McKenzie said. "Sadly, that has not been the case in Lansing in recent years. I want to be your representative so I can give you a voice in the state Legislature. I care about our community and our state, and I am ready to get to work on behalf of Michigan families, seniors and students."

Re-opening on track for My Brother's Hope free store

By Mary Weber
Staff Writer

My Brother's Hope free store is looking forward to being able to open its doors again. However, no date has been set for the store's re-opening.

The free store, which caters to Alcona County's residents in need with free needed items such as used clothing and household items, had to close its operation in Lincoln after the building suffered severe water damage due to frozen pipes during the first week of March.

It is located in the blue house across from the Alcona High School on Barlow Road owned by Alcona Community Schools. The school leased the building to the nonprofit organization several months ago for its mission operation. In return for not paying rent to the school, My Brother's Hope was in the process of fixing up the house and mentoring youth. Then the water baseboard heating system failed and subsequently, the pipes froze.

The entire first floor of the building suffered damage and all of the inventory on the first floor was ruined. Seasonal items waiting to go on the racks and shelves for spring and summer were stored on the second floor in plastic totes which were not damaged.

Meg Nisbet, mission volunteer with My Brother's Hope, said the community has been phenomenal with their prayers, best wishes, offers to help and with providing financial donations to help the mission get back on its feet.

"We have been, and are so blessed by this community. Through God's grace in action, our insurance company waived our deductible. The school has been absolutely amazing. They paid their deductible and their insurance is getting the work done," Nisbet said.

According to Nisbet, ServPro has gotten the house dried out. A few of the two-by-fours in the walls, which were damaged and twisted by the flooding, have been replaced and an electrician has started the rewiring.

She said new plumbing lines will be run below the ceiling and all zones from the heating system are being replaced in the free store side of the building. She added there is still some discussion about whether or not the boiler will be replaced.

When My Brother's Hope has a reopening date set, Nisbet said they will let everyone know. In the meantime they are still asking people to hold their item donations. They are still seeking additional financial donations and are asking for volunteers to help get the store set up again.

My Brother's Hope was founded by Susan Armstrong and an ecumenical group representing various churches and organizations. The mission provides meals at the Pot Luck Café which is still operating at the United Methodist Church in Harrisville.

The free store served about 120 underprivileged people a month in attempt to help ease daily life for residents.

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor:

I have enjoyed Kathryn Kniep's "Puttin' on the Fritz" columns in the past. She is a good writer, and I usually agree with her. However, her "Doing Shots" column on April 16 was dead wrong on a very serious issue – vaccinations.

Kathryn has accepted the propaganda from doctors, drug companies, the CDC and mainstream media, who want us to believe that dangerous outbreaks of disease are caused by parents refusing to vaccinate their children. Consequently, parents who do vaccinate are becoming alarmed and angry. This makes no sense, because if vaccines work as advertised, their kids are safe, regardless.

However, long-suppressed scientific evidence is now showing very clearly that the mercury and aluminum in vaccines do, in fact, cause autism (and asthma, diabetes, epilepsy, ADHD, et cetera). The CDC has steadfastly refused to fund any study of the long-term health of vaccinated vs. unvaccinated children, saying it would be "unethical," but such studies have been done in New Zealand, Africa, Germany, and other lands, and they all show the same result: Children who are not vaccinated are far healthier than those who are. Vaccines, in addition to the neurological damage they do, may actually compromise the immune system of the recipients, leaving them vulnerable to other problems.

These "outbreaks," in every case I have seen, turn out to consist mostly of vaccinated people who were infected by other vaccinated people, so the vaccines are not very effective anyway. Research also shows that the more education a mother has had, the more likely she is to refuse to vaccinate her children. On April 16, 2014 Congressman Bill Posey called for an investigation of "the incestuous relationship between the public health community and the vaccine makers and public officials."

On Stage

The Shoreline Players is set to open its spring comedy "Never Too Late" this weekend. The show is a comedy built around the relationships of the core group of characters. The story centers on middle-aged Harry Lambert who lives comfortably with his wife Edith, his daughter and son-in-law. Though rather sour and a bit mean, he is, in fact, very content. So when Edith makes a life altering announcement he is anything but overjoyed.

The comedy, which does contain adult themes and content, is set to open Friday, April 25 at 7:30 p.m. with additional performances April 26, 27 and May 2, 3 and 4. Friday and Saturday show times are 7:30 p.m. and Sunday matinee begins at 2 p.m.

Tickets are $10 for general admission and $5 for students with I.D. Advance tickets are available at Gilbert's Drug Store in Oscoda. "Never Too Late" was added to the schedule as a replacement for the musical "Godspell." If anyone is holding "Godspell" tickets they will be honored for this production.

All performances are presented at the Shoreline Players Theater located next to the Robert Parks Library on the former Wurtsmith Air Force Base in Oscoda. For more information on this production or any upcoming events go to www.shorelineplayers.org or call (989) 739-3586.

AAACU Raises Funds

Through the hard work and dedication of its employees and the generosity of its membership Alpena Alcona Area Credit Union (AAACU) was able to raise $728.82 in monetary donations for Habitat for Humanity of Northeast Michigan. Habitat for Humanity homes provide affordable, safe and healthy places for families to live, grow and thrive.

AAACU was also able to raise $1,200 in monetary donations along with $100 in donated items for the Oscoda Backpack Program. This volunteer based program is an undertaking of the Food Bank of Eastern Michigan, which attempts to reduce child hunger and promote nutrition and healthy eating habits. They provide backpacks with enough food for the weekends when children are not receiving meals at school.

AAACU employees select four community or charity organizations to raise money for during each quarter of the year. AAACU serves members primarily in Alpena, Alcona, Montmorency and Iosco counties with eight locations - a main office located in Alpena, with branch offices in Atlanta, Lincoln, Oscoda, Ossineke, Tawas

Resale store benefits abandoned animals

By Mary Weber
Staff Writer

A resale shop benefitting homeless and abandoned animals in Alcona County has opened in the Harbortown Marketplace in Harrisville.

Precious Paws Resale Shoppe opened its doors last week offering new and gently used home décor, antiques, gift items, jewelry, accessories, one of a kind art pieces and more. The best part of making a purchase at the resale shop is that 100 per cent of the proceeds will go to help the animals at the Alcona Humane Society.

The store was the idea of Connie Sysak, owner of Blue Bear Jewelry which opened at the Harbortown Marketplace several years ago and has since moved to East Tawas.

Sysak has been an advocate for Alcona Humane Society for many years -- ever since finding an abandoned kitten on the side of the road in Alcona County, which ignited her passion for animals. She has served on the Alcona Humane Society Board of Directors and has assisted with many fund-raising events for the cause. "Even when I opened my store in Tawas, I raised money for Alcona's humane society," Sysak said.

Sysak was inspired by Shelter, Inc., to open the resale store in Harrisville. "Shelter, Inc., resale stores in Oscoda and Rogers City have been operating for a number of years. Resale shopping is huge and is a good way for non-profits to gain much needed funding without having to rely on donations which fluctuate with economy and monthly fundraisers. People love resale in general and this way we are not just asking for a hand-out, they are getting something they will like and use in return," Sysak said.

In order for the humane society to profit as much as possible from the store, Sysak offered her marketing ability in exchange for partial rent supplementation and pitched her idea to both the Alcona County Board of Commissioners and the Economic Development Commission (EDC).

The EDC oversees Harbortown Marketplace which was built and developed as a business incubator for new businesses to get a good start and thrive in the Alcona area. Despite efforts by the EDC, the Harbortown Marketplace, like many store fronts in downtown Harrisville, has struggled to keep all units in the store rented.

Sysak explained she is a licensed real estate professional and spoke to the board

Alcona Humane Society volunteer Karen Briggs, Connie Sysak and acting president Diane Rea hold furry friends at the Precious Paws Resale Shoppe which recently opened in the Harbortown Marketplace to benefit the homeless and abandoned animals of Alcona County. The resale store offers new and gently used donated gift items, antiques, art, home decor, jewelry, accessories and useful items at greatly reduced prices with all proceeds to benefit the shelter. about her many years of strong marketing background and ideas to help raise interest in the vacant units. It didn't take long for the EDC board to agree Sysak's ability could greatly improve the vacancy issues at Harbortown and an agreement was made.

Sysak will provide in-kind services for the Alcona EDC for the reduced rent such as developing a formal marketing plan and implementation timeline. She will also develop a marketing brochure for the Harbortown Marketplace.

There are four units in Harbortown Marketplace available. The units provide flexible leases which include utilities, off street parking, tourist center and public restrooms. "It's an ideal place for people who are just opening a business to start with a reasonable financial commitment," Sysak said.

The Precious Paws Resale Shoppe will be run by Alcona Humane Society volunteers and plans to be open a minimum of three days a week - Thursday, Friday and Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. until summer when the plans are to be open additional days.

The store will not be selling clothing but is accepting donations of new and gently used accessories, household items, antiques, and more. The store will occasionally hold pet adoptions, but won't normally have pets available for customers to see and hold.

"Anyone wishing to donate items may call me to arrange drop off," Sysak said. She explained the store may not have room for everything, but if anyone has larger items they wish to donate there will be a book of photos of the items available at the store.

Diane Rea, acting president of the Alcona Humane Society Board of Directors said, "We are very excited about the idea. Connie brought us information about Shelter, Inc. and how fantastic they were doing. I've had experience shopping at resale stores and love them, it's fun looking for bargains.

"We thought it would be a fantastic opportunity for the shelter and something different for the community. The store offers a lot of great gift ideas."

To volunteer, donate gently used or new items or to find out more about leasing space from Harbortown Marketplace, contact Connie Sysak at (989) 724-8171. The Harbortown Marketplace is located at 410 E. Main Street in downtown Harrisville.

Soil testing at home

Scoop some soil into a container, then add 1/2-cup of vinegar. If the soil bubbles or fizzes, it's alkaline. If there's no reaction, scoop a fresh soil sample into a second container and add a 1/2-cup of water and mix. Then add a 1/2-cup of baking soda. If the soil bubbles or fizzes, the soil is acidic. Add wood ash or lime to your soil if it's acidic, or sulfur or pine needles if alkaline.

SENIOR LIFESTYLES

Walk your way to better health

Dear Savvy Senior,
Can you give me some tips on starting a walking program? I need to lose weight and get my blood pressure under control, but I hate to exercise.

Unfit at 59

Dear Unfit,
More than 25 years of research has shown that walking may be the single best exercise you can do to improve your health. It burns calories (about 100 for every mile you walk) which will help you lose weight, it builds endurance, enhances muscle tone and it doesn't pound your joints.

It also helps improve or prevent many age-related health problems including high blood pressure, diabetes, heart disease, arthritis, osteoporosis and dementia.

But walking is not only good for what ails you. It's also one of the easiest and most convenient exercises you can do, and is completely free. All you need is a good pair of walking shoes that fit well and a little desire.

Here are a few tips to help you get started.

- Start walking: Start out slow if you need to. For many people this means head out the door, walk for 10 minutes, and walk back. Do it every day for a week. If that seems easy, add five minutes to your walks next week and keep adding five minutes until you are walking as long as you desire.

It's also a smart idea to start and finish your walk with a few simple warm up and cool down stretches. Stretching will make you feel better and help prevent injury.

- How far: Any walking is better than none, but most fitness professionals recommend walking about 30 minutes, five days a week. Research has shown that the 30 minutes can be broken up throughout the day - 10 minutes here, 10 minutes there. Or, for optimal health benefits aim for 10,000 steps per day, which is the equivalent of about five miles.

- How fast: The right walking speed depends on your fitness level. Ideally, you should walk at a brisk pace that has you breathing heavily, but you are still able to carry on a conversation.

While starting a walking program takes initiative, sticking with it takes commitment. Here are some tips to help you stay motivated:

- Find some walking buddies: They can provide motivation and support along with companionship and security.

- Use a pedometer: These nifty little gadgets - available in sporting goods stores for around $25 - measure how far you've walked in steps and miles, providing motivation by spurring you to meet a particular goal and showing you if you've met it. Or, if you're a smartphone user, consider downloading a pedometer app like accupedo.com or runtastic.com.

- Join a walking club: To find one in your community

call your local medical center, mall, health clubs, YMCA, running shoe stores or Area Agency on Aging to see if they sponsor or know of any clubs or groups. Or try the American Volkssport Association (ava.org) and American Heart Association Walking Club (mywalkingclub.org), which let you search for non-competitive walking clubs in your area, or start one.

- Keep a journal: Use it to keep track of your walking minutes, steps, or mileage and total it up at the end of each week to see how you're progressing.

- Get a dog: Studies have shown that dog owners are much more likely to take regular walks than non-dog owners.

- Listen to music: An iPod or MP3 player can also make a nice walking companion. Check out walk.jog.fm to find great walking songs that will match your pace.

- Have a backup plan: If bad weather, allergies or other factors limit your outdoor walking have a backup plan like walking at your local mall, buying a home treadmill or joining a health club.

The hour of the flower

By Kathryn Fritz Kniep
Columnist

It's been fascinating, these past five months, to watch our granddaughter Phee grow from a tiny infant, largely concerned with eating and sleeping, to a tiny child, interacting with the world. Kind of like those time-lapse photographs of a flower blooming.

She's a happy baby, arriving on mornings of her days with us with a big ol' smile, sometimes bouncing in her excitement. Recently, she's begun to throw her arms out, which almost guarantees that she'll get picked up and hugged by one doting grandparent or another.

Like her Nana, Phee likes her routine. We start out our mornings with a few minutes of cuddling, during which I usually rest my cheek against hers and whisper a tiny prayer. Then, because she's discovered she'd much rather be vertical than horizontal these days, I prop her up in a sitting position on the corner of the couch, protected from falls by a bolster, the footstool (usually with Henri, the hound, upon it) and her play gym, heavy enough to keep the whole thing from sliding.

I stack up a few of her toys around her and sip a cup of coffee while she plays. Among her favorites is Mr. Moose, a spindly-legged creature with nice chewable purple plastic antlers. She usually picks him up first, then pauses to look over at me expectantly. As I launch into the Mr. Moose song ("Oh, Mr. Moose, he's on the loose, he's gonna' come along and drink up all your moose juice...") she rewards me with a happy chuckle. By the time I reach the big finish ("...and if we had a great big sluice, well we could fill it up with juice and Mr. Moose would come and drink up all the moooose, juuuuuice") she's bouncing him about to the rhythm.

If she picks up her stuffed lamb first, she wants to hear the Beach Boys. ("Bah-bah-bah, bah-bah-bah lamb"). As an experiment one day I tried singing the lamb song for Mr. Moose. Her eyebrows drew together and her little mouth puckered up. Once I switched to Mr. Moose, she relaxed. Okay, Nana just got things mixed up for a minute.

Next comes some time with her play gym. While she's occupied with its spinning monkey, giraffe, lion and other critters, I sometimes slip to the kitchen to rinse up some dishes. Lately, though, she's taken to calling out from time to time. "Bah?"

"I'm right here," I tell her, which seems to make her happy. She just wants to be sure Bah hasn't wandered off somewhere.

Last Saturday evening, we gathered on the couch for family movie night (a thinly veiled excuse for Nana and her mom to watch Disney's "Frozen"). Phee sat on Papa's lap and Kai chose a spot between Papa and me. As we waited for the film to start, I watched a scene I suspect will be repeated hundreds of times. Kai reached over and idly picked up Phee's favorite teething ring, which has a half-dozen faces dangling from it.

Phee didn't fuss, she's not a fussy. She did, however, lean forward from Papa's lap, her worried look and clasped hands expressing her distress. "Why does brother have my toy? It's mine. Will he break it? And most importantly, will he give it back? It's mine."

When Kai handed it to her, her relief was palpable. She gave it a test gnaw, approved, and placed it with her other toys. Okay.

The world outside her crib becomes more and more interesting as spring allows us to strap her into her stroller for a stretch outside in the sunshine. The dogs trot along beside her on clickety-clack toenails, cars and machines make noises, birds sing. There's so much to absorb.

My favorite interaction occurred recently at nap time. Most of the time, Phee considers Papa her rocker of choice. He's warm, he wears soft flannel shirts to rest her cheek on and he's willing to participate for long periods of time. But the 3 o'clock afternoon rock is Phee and my time. Papa and the dogs are already taking their own nap and the house is quiet as we settle down into our chair.

Although we talk all the time, this is a quiet time. Since the day she was born, Phee has had a laser-like stare. Once she's done a couple of tests to see if I'm going to relent and let her sit up, she snuggles in and focuses her gray-green eyes on mine. As she has since infancy, she curls her tiny fingers around mine. Sometimes, if it's been a particularly active day, I sing to her, but most often we maintain silence and just look at each other.

And on occasion, in hopes of prompting imitation, I close my eyes for a moment. As I did that the other day, I felt a tiny hand pat my cheek. Phee wanted to show me her latest trick. She's developed sufficient hand-eye coordination to remove her pacifier from her mouth and then pop it back in. I smiled at this achievement, then closed my eyes again.

A second later, something tapped my mouth. I opened my eyes to see a little hand holding up her pacifier. Carefully, I opened my mouth and closed my teeth on the edge of its rim. Phee let go, watched me for a moment, then reached to take it back and place it back in her own mouth.

I'd think this first attempt to reach out and give was a muscle fluke, except that she repeated it four times, each time I closed my eyes. It was as if she was saying, "Here, Nana. You're tired. Try this. Sometimes it helps." I think sharing warmed her as much as it did me. At any rate, a minute later - in that instant off way that babies have -- she dropped off to sleep, with the binkey twitching rhythmically in her mouth.

I don't know what she was thinking, as she offered me her beloved binkey. I'm certain she won't remember that moment. But I will. As I watch this little flower unfold, I'll remember that like the nursery rhyme, this child was loving and giving from the very beginning. And I'll remember, every day, how very blessed I was to be there at the hour of the flower.

Because of all you wonderful and caring individuals you made it possible for the Egg Hunt to continue for the children of Alcona County. We had an incredible Easter Egg Hunt for the children, 255 children turned out for the event and every child left with a wonderful gift. Due to rising cost of prizes that we purchased for the children we regret that next year we will not be able to give every child a gift. But we will be giving away 20 bikes for the children, in 4 different age brackets, 5 bikes per bracket. We thank you so much for supporting this wonderful event.

As we have told you before, we are very proud to belong to such a caring and generous community, without you we would not have been able to put on such a successful event. Just the smiles on all of the children's faces said it all; they enjoyed visiting with the Easter Bunny as he stopped in to visit at our event.

A Big Thank You also goes out to those individuals that volunteered their time to help out at this event, and our families we couldn't have done it without all of you. Thank you again, Harrisville Harbor (above) was the site of an electro shocking fish survey by Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) Fisheries Division employees on Monday. The spring survey is part of an ongoing study where steelhead that have been implanted by the DNR -- through direct plants and pond/pen release are collected and samples are sent to a lab for various study. The main focus of the study is to determine which release method is effective in letting the steelhead - a cousin of the Chinook salmon -- imprint better so that they will return in the spring to spawn.

This is the third (and possibly final) year of the survey in which fisheries personnel (left) Bill Wallenkamp and Emmett Susseney (in orange) and Tim Cwalinski (bottom photo) have visited the harbor, Van Ettan Lake and the AuSable River to take samples from planted steelhead. According to Cwalinski, electro shocking is done in shallow waters where it temporarily stuns the fish, they are netted and placed in a holding tank (left). Collected steelhead missing the adipose fin are measured, scales are collected and then the nose of the fish is removed. Everything is recorded and sent to a lab for study. Inside the nose of the fish is a microscopic wire tag that will tell technicians where the fish was planted and whether it was a direct release fish or one that was held in pens for a couple of weeks prior to release.

Roughly 70 fish were captured during the course of the study on Monday with 47 steelhead from the DNR fisheries captured. Other fish collected (and released) included carp, brown trout, northern pike, walleye, bow fish, white suckers, Menominee and Atlantic salmon. "The most exciting thing we saw today was the Atlantic salmon," Cwalinski said. "Lake Superior State University (LSSU) has been releasing 30,000 Atlantic salmon a year into the St. Mary's River since the mid 1980s. They filter down into Lake Huron. We saw 18-22 inch Atlantics that were two years old." Cwalinski explained that fishermen should adapt to the fish that are available now. "I don't think people realize how many steelhead come back here. The steelhead run in the spring are just as powerful as the salmon run in the fall used to be," Cwalinski said.

"We stock a lot of steelhead in Harrisville," Cwalinski said, citing the direct plants (released from a large tanker into the harbor and the holding ponds manned each spring by the Lincoln Lions Club until the fish are released close to the time of the direct plants). He explained the DNR and LSSU are working to replace the loss of the Chinook (due to an invasive species) with steelhead and Atlantic salmon because they eat a variety of food which makes them more sustainable. "Even though we are DNR employees who work with fish, we are fishermen," Cwalinski said. "And, we were surprised that no one seems to be fishing here. We would be. This is an easy spot to fish -- steelhead come in the spring to spawn, but unlike Chinook they don't die after they spawn. This is an easy spot to get to -- you can shore fish, wade out, or use a canoe." Photos by Cheryl Peterson.

Recall on car seats

The Evenflo Company is recalling a number of car seat harnesses and the Michigan State Police from the Alpena post have distributed some of the same seats.

"A number of seats matching the model numbers of the recalled seats have been distributed throughout the Alpena post area," said community service trooper Ashley Simpson. "These seats were distributed at the car seat event held at the Alpena Mall in 2013 and also at the post, as seats were inspected and found to be in need of replacement."

"The affected seats that were handed out at the Alpena post are the Evenflo Titan, model number 3712198 and the Maestro, model number 3102198. To determine if your seat is one of the seats affected by this recall you can visit Evenflo's website, safety.evenflo.com and click on the heading 'Harness Buckle Recall.'"

According to Evenflo's website, "These select models use a harness crotch buckle which may become resistant to unlatching over time, due to exposure to various contaminants (like food and drinks) that are present in everyday use of the convertible car seat or harnessed booster by toddlers. This condition may make it difficult to remove a child from the vehicle."

"There is no such risk if the buckle is functioning normally. These convertible car seats and harnessed boosters meet all requirements for crash worthiness under the federal FMVSS 213 safety standard and continue to be used to transport your child safely, if you are not experiencing difficulty unlatching the buckle. Importantly, Evenflo has received no reports of injuries to children in connection with the use of this buckle on the seats that are subject to this recall."

Evenflo Company is providing consumers who own affected seats a remedy kit, free of charge, that includes a replacement buckle and instructions for installing the new buckle. The remedy kit is available by calling Evenflo at (800) 490-7592 or visiting the website safety.evenflo.com and clicking on the heading "Harness Buckle Recall."

Replacement kits will not be available at the Alpena post. "I apologize for any inconveniences this may cause," Simpson stated. "However, this is a recall from the company, so if there are any issues with the harness not functioning or being in need of replacement, it must be handled with Evenflo."

For additional information, call Simpson at (989) 354-4101.

Birding BITS BY Cindy Brook

A Warbler Affair
The other day I came home to a yard filled with warblers. There were three black and white warblers chasing each other around some pine trees. And my tray feeder had yellow-rumps, yellow-throated and pine warblers all eating sunflower chips. It was quite the sight!

Catch-and-Release bass season approaches

The eagerly awaited catch-and-immediate-release bass season is quickly approaching (April 26 on Lower Peninsula waters and May 15 on Upper Peninsula waters) and with it the opportunity to catch one of the country's top game fish.

Bass can be caught with a wide range of artificial lures, as well as live bait.

There are numerous locations across the state that provide prime smallmouth and largemouth bass fishing. Get ready to head out this April and May for some excellent bass fishing. Additional information on angling for this species can be found on their Michigan Fish and How to Catch Them website.

Northeast Lower Peninsula April 17

• Rogers City: The marina still had some ice but hopefully it will be open by the end of the week. The rocks still had ice but the end of the marina where the boats go out is one area where anglers could cast a line.

• Alpena: Anglers are starting to come out however ice was still preventing access to the Lake Huron.

Northeast Michigan Fishing Report

• Thunder Bay River: Is open, all the ice is gone. The water was high, muddy and had debris coming down after the rain. The access site on Fletcher Street is open and a dock is in. The marina was still iced up but the ice is going fast. Steelhead are being caught but anglers are waiting for some fresh fish to come in.

• Harrisville: The harbor has opened up enough to get small boats out. It will be hard to launch larger boats because the docks are not in yet. Steelhead and walleye should be in and around the harbor. The water level is up and there is a nice flow from the creek which seems to bring fish in.

• Oscoda: A few walleye have been caught off the pier.

• AuSable River: Water levels are up and the current was fast. The bite was a bit on the slow side as it appears the fish seem to be holding out for something more appealing. Those in drift boats seem to have better luck. Anglers are using spawn, body baits, flies, spinners, spoons and wax worms.

• Higgins Lake: The remaining ice is no longer safe. The shoreline has opened up.

• Houghton Lake: Still has ice however it is no longer safe. The East Bay and the canals have opened up but no one is fishing as water temperatures are too cold.

• Rifle River: Continues to produce a fair to good number of suckers.

Fish stocking creates abundant fishing opportunities throughout Michigan

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) is in the middle of its new fish-stocking season. This spring, DNR trucks will be spotted pulling up to hundreds of lakes and streams throughout the state to release prized, recreational cargo.

Fish stocking is a valuable tool used by fisheries managers to restore, enhance and create new fishing opportunities in Michigan's inland lakes and streams and the Great Lakes. The DNR's Fisheries Division accomplishes this task by rearing fish at its six fish-production facilities located throughout the state, cooperatively managing up to 50 rearing ponds and 12 Great Lakes net pen locations, and maintaining a fleet of 17 specialized fish-stocking vehicles.

Over the course of the year, the DNR will stock roughly 26 million fish weighing nearly 370 tons, including eight species of trout and salmon and four coolwater species such as walleye and muskellunge. DNR fish-stocking vehicles will travel nearly 137,000 miles to stock more than 1,100 locations.

Michigan anglers have access to four Great Lakes, 3,000 miles of Great Lakes shoreline, more than 11,000 inland lakes and tens of thousands of miles of rivers and streams. That puts residents and visitors no more than 10 minutes away from great angling opportunities and world-class fisheries.

Visit the DNR's website at www.michigandnr.com/fishstock for information on local fish-stocking locations.

StarWatch By Gary Becker - Speechless in Suffern

It is difficult to explain what it's like to pivot on the gymnasium floor of Rockland Community College in Suffern, NY, not with a basketball ready to make that big three pointer which will win the conference title, but with hundreds of astronomy vendors surrounding you, ready to promote their products and solve your every astronomical wish. It is the ultimate show-and-tell experience of the star world; and it is not held in Hollywood, but right here on the East Coast, north of NYC. My first Northeast Astronomical Forum (NEAF) was so overwhelming that I simply wandered from booth to booth encumbered by an advanced stage of speechlessness. Now I come with a list of ideas and usually formulate some type of solution along the way. And then there is the unexpected. I walked up to an exhibit of antique telescopes. Okay, they were from the 1960s, but they were beautiful Unitron refractors, the crème de la crème of instrumentation back then and still as good as today's refractors. Their disadvantage with current lensed instruments is that they were very bulky and difficult to transport. I examined the five-inch refractor mounted on a massive equatorial head and realized that I had "one of those mounts" sitting in my shed. A gentleman who was moving to Maryland had offered it to me, and said that if I didn't take it, he was going to throw it away. It's been in "storage" ever since. I began a conversation with the owner, and before I could tell him that I possessed one of these behemoths, he confessed that there were only 25 of these mounts ever built and only three that were still known to be in existence. We obviously struck up an intense dialogue which will continue into the future. Sometimes it is the unexpected that make these shows so exciting; however, if someone in the community is ready to give me 100 grand, no lie, I'll build Moravian College the best small astronomical observatory in the world. www.astronomy.org

Moments In Time

By The History Channel

- On May 10, 1749, the 10th and final volume of Henry Fielding's novel "Tom Jones" is printed. The serialized novel told the humorous story of the attempts of the illegitimate but charming Tom Jones to win his neighbor's daughter.
- On May 5, 1904, Boston Red Sox pitcher Cy Young (born Denton True Young) throws a perfect game against the Detroit Tigers. It was the first perfect game of the modern era; the last had been thrown by John Montgomery Ward in 1880. It was the second of three no-hitters that Young would throw, and the only perfect game.
- On May 9, 1926, according to their claims, polar explorer Richard E. Byrd and co-pilot Floyd Bennett fly over the North Pole in a triple-engine Fokker monoplane, the Josephine Ford. However, the discovery in 1996 of the diary that Byrd kept seemed to suggest that he and Bennett may have turned back 150 miles short of the pole because of an oil leak.
- On May 6, 1940, John Steinbeck is awarded the Pulitzer Prize for his novel "The Grapes of Wrath." The book traces the fictional Joad family of Oklahoma as they lose their family farm and move to California in search of a better life.
- On May 7, 1965, in a Clearwater, Fla., motel room, a bleary-eyed Keith Richards awoke, grabbed a tape recorder and laid down one of the greatest pop hooks of all time: The opening riff of "(I Can't Get No) Satisfaction." He then promptly fell back to sleep.
- On May 8, 1984, claiming that its athletes will not be safe from protests and possible physical attacks, the Soviet Union announces that it will not compete in the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles. The boycott was a response to the decision of the United States to boycott the 1980 games held in Moscow.
- On May 11, 1997, IBM's supercomputer Deep Blue makes chess history by defeating chess champion Gary Kasparov. The Russian master conceded defeat after 19 moves in the sixth game of the tournament. It was the first defeat of a reigning world champion by a machine in tournament play.

Strange But True

By Samantha Weaver

- It was noted Democratic politician Adlai Stevenson who made the following sage observation: "In America, anybody can be president. That's one of the risks you take."
- You might be surprised to learn that notorious FBI director J. Edgar Hoover at one time had presidential aspirations. He reportedly believed he would be able to defeat president Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1936, though nothing came of his ambition.
- Those who study such things say that a lion and a leopard can successfully interbreed. The resulting offspring is called a leopon.
- The first pocket calculator was introduced by Texas Instruments in 1961, intended originally for use by the Air Force. Weighing 10 ounces and being only slightly larger than a pack of cigarettes, the company claimed that it could perform the same calculations as a computer 150 times its size.
- The sex organ of a male spider can be found at the end of one of its legs.
- As most health-care workers could tell you, emergency rooms are busier and more mental patients are admitted during the full moon than at any other time of the month. The time of the new moon is only slightly less busy, however.
- The next time you're drizzling honey on your biscuit, consider this tidbit: Bees must visit up to 2 million flowers just to produce a single pound of the sweetener.
- One might think that an event as momentous as the Wright Brothers' first successful airplane flight in 1903 would have received widespread coverage in the media. One would be wrong. The only newspaper to carry an account of the historic flight was the Virginian Pilot, based in Norfolk.
