Harrisville grocery store to open soon under new owner

By Cheryl Peterson

Editor

The doors of Mr. Ed's IGA in Harrisville were closed less than a month only to be opening again as the Harrisville Harbor Grocery.

The new owner of the grocery store, Steve Arens, attended the City of Harrisville Council meeting Monday evening. "Last Wednesday I signed a purchase agreement with Grant Hampton," Arens said. "We've been coming here for years... We love the community, we love the area... Even though I own several businesses, this is my first retail venture... My wife, who owned a retail business for five years, suggested it."

Arens, and his wife, Sandra, live in Commerce, Mich. (near Novi, Mich.) They have 10 children and have owned hunting property in Alcona County since 1996.

They purchased a cabin in 2000, quickly out grew it and purchased a home in 2005 and added on to it in 2009.

Arens plans to open the grocery store before the Fourth of July weekend, and will officially own the business when the liquor license is transferred into his name. For the last several days, he and a crew of employees from his downstate business have been working inside the grocery store on several remodeling projects.

"We are doing maintenance and a light remodel," Arens said. "I'm focusing on the foyer right now. I would like to do it (remodel the entire store) all at once but I can't. I don't have the time right now. It's very important to open the store as soon as possible... I will open without the liquor license if I have to."

Arens explained that later this winter he plans to replace the four free-standing coolers, "do whatever is needed with the floor," replace the ceiling and do whatever is necessary in the meat/ deli area. He is in the process of installing a new register upgrade or point of sales (POS) system in order to streamline the checkout process and upgrade purchasing/inventory and store records. He also plans on remodeling the exterior of the building.

"It's going to be like new," Arens said. "This is the town's

Food programs help area seniors and youth

There are many who fight an unending battle to make ends and provide nourishment to their families. Although hunger does not discriminate by age, young children and elderly citizens tend to be the most vulnerable for malnutri-

Alcona County residents have a few resources which specifically contribute food to just seniors and young children.

• Senior citizens age 60 and older in need of food can participate in the Senior Commodities Supplemental Food Program (CSFP).

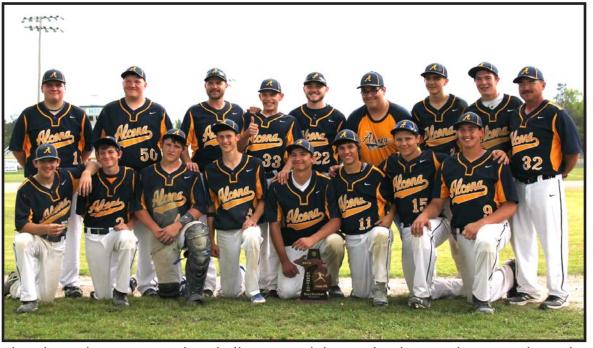

The CSFP is a year around program designed to aid low income seniors. The program provides nutritious food supplements to eligible participants once a month.

Seniors qualifying for low income status must meet the program's Federal Income Guidelines. Deborah Wilds, food program coordinator at Northeast Michigan Commu-Service nitv Agency (NEMCSA), said the guidelines are based on 130 percent of the federal poverty income.

"Right now that means a single person household maximum income would be $1,276 per month. Maximum for a two person household, over the age of 60, would be $1,726. We typically serve about 200 senior citizens in Alcona (county) and we have the ability to serve more if they qualify," Wilds said. She advised anyone who is not sure if they qualify to call the NEMCSA office.

store... it's part of the community. I want to revive the community... I believe in people, process and product.

Arens owns two manufacturing and production businesses in Commerce Township - Michigan Roll Form, Inc. which makes machinery and tools and Land Case Urethane, Inc. which makes rubber parts. Sandra Arens has been an au pair coordinator for roughly 15 years.

Moving into retail from manufacturing is giving Arens diversity - which is what he finds challenging and stimulating. "I like the diversity and action... even in bad times, people have to eat."

He also has experience in purchasing properties, remodeling them and then selling them. However, he is eventually planning on retiring in Harrisville and will keep the business. "This is not a flip... That's not why I'm doing this... I like the community...

I like the area... I like coming here. I can't imagine a town this size without a grocery store. I am willing to put in the money and effort for us to have that.

"This is the town's store; it is part of the community. I'm here to help. I look forward to earning the town's business. I want people to shop there because they want to shop there. I want to be responsive to the community," Arens proof of income to fill out an application to receive commodity supplements.

Each qualifying participant receives about 14 items which include shelf stable milk products, cereal, pasta or rice, canned vegetables and fruit, a meat product in a can or pouch, a two pound block of cheese and juice.

Wilds said the box of food is only a supplement and not intended to meet the nutrition needs for an entire month, but should help stretch a senior's budget.

The next available commodity days for this summer will be July 13 and August 10 from 9 to 10 a.m. at the Alcona County Commission on Aging (Lincoln Senior Center).

There is also a quarterly surplus delivery available to everyone in need, no matter what their age. No application is necessary for the quarterly surplus. Identification is still required and participants must sign a paper of self declaration stating they are in need. The next quarterly surplus will run in August.

 Alcona Elementary School and the Alcona Health Center (AHC) Tiger Extension staff are offering a few new ways to fight children's hunger. They are offering a Meet Up and Eat Up free lunch geared toward elementary age children for three weeks in the summer.

The program is available to any child in Alcona County, no matter where they attend school, and it coincides with the Summer Safari Day Camp. Free lunch begins at 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Monday identification is needed with through Thursday, June 22 through 26, July 6 through July 10 and July 20 through

> Kristin Benghauser, behavior health consultant with AHC Tiger Extension, said there is no registration necessary for the lunch program. "We just hope the children who need this program will be able to get to the school. We really have no idea who will be able to take advantage of it and how many to expect, but we are, hopefully, ready to feed all who are able to get here," she Benghauser explained that about 125 children are given lunch every year during the three weeks of day camp.

In addition to free lunches, the Tiger Extension will be offering a summer food pantry for children who are part of the weekend back pack food program during the school year.

The weekend backpack program provides children at risk of hunger easy access to nutritious, nonperishable food items to meet their needs when they are off from school on Saturday and Sunday during the school year.

Benghauser said there are about 60 students at the school who receive weekend back packs. "Unfortunately, in June when the kids get out of school for the summer, the back pack program stops,' Benghauser said.

She and many others were concerned about how students fare without receiving free school lunches during the week and the additional aid on the weekends, so for the first time they will operate a summer food pantry.

The summer pantry was made possible by a $1,200 grant from United Way with the food coming from the Food Bank of Eastern Michigan (FBEM).

The particulars of when the summer pantry will be open at the school are still being decided. Benghauser believes it will be available near the end of the month for each month during the summer

Monetary donations for the Food Bank of Eastern Michigan can be sent to Kathleen Payton, Food Bank of Eastern Michigan, 2312 Lapeer Road, Flint, Mich., 48503. Checks should be noted in the memo line Alcona Elementary School BP 1359, for credit to go to Alcona County students.

All Alcona Elementary earmarked funds sent to FBEM during the months of June, July and August will be used for the summer food pantry at the school. Funds received from September through May will be used for the weekend back pack program.

Choosing a home blood pressure monitor

Dear Savvy Senior,

Can you offer me any tips on choosing a home blood pressure monitor? I just found out I have high blood pressure, and my doctor told me I need a monitor for the house so I can keep an eye on

Shopping Around

Dear Shopping,

Almost everyone with high blood pressure or prehypertension should have a home blood pressure monitor. Home monitoring can help you keep tabs on your blood pressure in a comfortable setting. Plus, if you're taking medication it will make certain it's working, and alert you to a health problem if it arises.

The two most popular types of home blood pressure monitors on the market today are (electric and/or battery powered) automatic arm monitors, and automatic wrist monitors.

With an automatic arm monitor, you simply wrap the cuff around your bicep and with the push of one button the cuff inflates and deflates automatically giving you your blood pressure reading on the display window in a matter of seconds.

Wrist monitors work similarly, except they attach to the wrist. Wrist monitors are also smaller in size and a bit more comfortable to use than the arm monitors, but they tend to be a little less accu-

To help you choose the best monitor for you, here are several things you need to check

- Fit: Using a cuff that's the wrong size can result in a bad reading. Most arm models have two sizes or an adjustable cuff that fits most people. Make sure your choice fits the circumference of your upper arm.
- Accuracy: Check the packaging to make sure the monitor has been independently tested and validated for accuracy and reliability. You can see a list of validated monitors at dableducational.org.

- Ease of use: Be sure the display on the monitor is easy to read and understand, and that the buttons are big enough. The directions for applying the cuff and operating the monitor should be
- Extra features: Many monitors come with additional features such as irregular heartbeat detection that checks for arrhythmias and other abnormalities; a risk category indicator that tells you whether your blood pressure is in the high range; a data-averaging function that allows you to take multiple readings and get an overall average; multiple user memory that allows two or more users to save previous readings; and computer connections so you can download the data to your com-
- Portability: If you plan to take your monitor with you while traveling, look for one with a carrying case.

You can find blood pressure monitors at pharmacies, medical supply stores or online, and you don't need a prescription to buy one.

The price will typically range anywhere from $30 to $120 or more. Unfortunately, original Medicare does not pay for home blood pressure monitors unless you're receiving dialysis at home. But if you have a Medicare Advantage plan or a private health insurance policy it's worth checking into, because some plans may provide covports include the Rite Aid Deluxe Automatic BP3AR1-4DRITE; iHealth Dock BP3 (requires an Apple iOS device); Omron 10 Series BP786; A&D Medical UA767F; and the ReliOn BP200. And the top recommended wrist monitor is the Omron 7 Series BP652.

After you buy a monitor, it's a good idea to take it to your doctor's office so they can check its accuracy and teach you the proper techniques of how and when to use it.

The Sunrise Gardening Club has chosen Melanie Goll's cottage garden at 5180 E. Alcona Road, Harrisville, where she has lived since 1999, as garden of the month for June. Goll, pictured with her husband David Bastion and dog Cheyenne, has been gardening since she was five years old, when her mother couldn't keep her out of the garden. She loves the feel of the dirt on her hands and even gardens barefooted. The peacefulness of her garden, which is perched on the hill at the top of Alcona Road, is what inspires her. Fair weather big turn out

Memorial Day observance was very successful

The people took advantage of the beautiful weather Monday and turned out in large numbers for the Memorial Day exercises at Court House Park and at the various cemeteries.

The program was carried out nearly as previously announced. The various schools contributed to the program, which was delivered from the speaker's stand and received good attention. Pupils from six schools participated, namely: Spencer, Killmaster, Wilson, Fisher, Dean and Harrisville. Four old veterans—W.B. Hogue, Jos. Sovey,

The people took advantage the beautiful weather Monay and turned out in large L. H. Dunn and James E. Smith, occupied seats on the platform.

Following the program the procession formed with the veterans and the decorating committee in the lead and proceeded to the three cemeteries. At each soldier's grave Chairman Colwoll of the decorating committee announced the name of the deceased and the company and regiment to which he belonged; and the lady members, Mrs. Helen Emerson and Mrs. J. E. Henderson, placed the wreaths and flags. Solemn and patriotic music was played by the band at each cemetery.

Many of those from a distance came prepared for a basket dinner, which they enjoyed in the park. Killmaster school came in a pretty evergreen-covered wagon drawn by four horses driven abreast, and attracted considerable attention.

The crowd at the park during the exercises was one of the largest ever held here on a similiar occasion and the observance as a whole was one of the most successful ever held in Harrisville.

Spring stocking effort keeps fisheries staffers on the road

Steve VanDerLaan is a busy guy this time of year.

As the Michigan Department of Natural Resources' (DNR) statewide fish-stocking biologist, it's VanDer-Laan's job to get the annual hatchery production – in the vicinity of 18 million fish weighing 395 tons – out to the state's lakes and streams during a roughly eight-week window.

He has plenty of help. Ed Eisch, who works out of the Platte River State Fish Hatchery and supervises the sixhatchery system, is in charge of raising the fish. Christian LeSage, a fisheries biologist who works out of Lansing, Mich. is in charge of allocating them. And a handful of workers load and drive the trucks. But VanDerLaan is in charge of getting them where they belong.

The DNR maintains a fleet of 18 fish-stocking vehicles. They range in size from a 300-gallon-capacity truck that's small enough to negotiate two tracks to a 3,500-gallon, single-compartment truck used largely to transport salmon to Great Lakes ports.

"Our mainstay is a 1,200-gallon 'Peterson' unit with four 300-gallon tanks," said VanDerLaan. "We have 10 of those. And we have four intermediate-class trucks, 2,000 gallons. Three of them are four-compartment units, and one is a single-compartment unit – it basically discharges the entire tank in one shot."

Multiple compartment vehicles are the way to go, Van-DerLaan said. This is something he recognized since taking over this responsibility nearly 15 years ago. "The larger units of the past were mostly single-compartments because they were for big plants in the Great Lakes," he said.

"They had the capacity to carry a large load for one stocking site, but they weren't very versatile. In most cases, one stocking trip from the hatchery has multiple different stocking sites. So we're getting away from single-compartment, hatchery-specific units and going to multiple-compartment vehicles that all the facilities can easily use. That's the wave of the future."

The DNR recently added two new stocking trucks, a pair of 3,200-gallon units each with four 800-gallon compartments. The trucks have bottom discharges as well as an additional side-discharge port for each compartment, just in case of a valve failure.

The trucks cost around $300,000 apiece. "The last truck we turned in, we had for 20 years," said VanDer-Laan. "We baby those trucks. They're very valuable."

Stocking events often turn into a show as interested anglers arrive at stocking sites to see their future quarry. One of the trucks recently brought 32,000 steelhead to the Huron River in Monroe County, one of two deliveries made to the site. About two dozen spectators – several who pitched in to help DNR personnel hook up the discharge tubes – were on hand. Many were members of area fishing clubs, several of whom brought shotguns and cracker shells to haze any cormorants or gulls that might have come by looking for easy pickings.

The trucks are equipped with liquid oxygen tanks to saturate the water and make sure the fish are in a healthy condition when they arrive.

"Depending on the fish we're hauling, each species behaves very differently on the truck during transport," VanDerLaan said. "Brown trout tend to stack up on each other and if the water is not circulated uniformly, they'll suffocate themselves in the corners of the tanks. Lake trout tend to congregate near the bottom of the tanks. Steelhead and domestic-strain rainbow trout tend to be all over the tank."

By the end of stocking season, the vehicles will have totaled close to 120,000 miles. Fish stocking usually begins in late March, at ice out, VanDerLaan said, but at times he can't be held to the calendar. "If a hatchery is really jammed up with fish and they don't have the room in the hatchery to hold them, we have to stock them out. We're not above cutting holes in the ice to plant those fish if we have to."

The work begins much earlier in the year when field biologists request fish for stocking. The biologists suggest three stocking levels per stocking site – what they would like (what the fish heads at the DNR call "Level 2"), the minimum they could live with, and the maximum number of fish they feel a site can take.

"We always shoot for Level 2," VanDerLaan said, "but occasionally mistakes are made. A site might get double-planted for instance. It happens. So, if someone double-plants a site, how do we handle that? How do we make up those fish? Do we cut one site or do we take a small cut across the board? That decision becomes especially difficult when you get toward the end of the fish inventory. In cases like that, we solicit a variety of inputs so everyone knows what's going on and why.

"It can get crazy. Vehicles break down – that can happen any hour, day or night, anywhere in the state – and we've got to get a mechanic or somebody out there to help them. It drives you a little bit nuts at times," he said. As the DNR's stocking bi-

When the annual stocking is completed, VanDerLaan, who divides his time between the Wolf Lake State Fish Hatchery and the Platte River facility, maintains the fleet, including design and purchase of new vehicles and disposal of retired ones. He makes sure his drivers are trained, tested and certified, and he handles all the neces-

Catching a flathead catfish in Michigan

Fishing for catfish can be a fun experience. There are two common types of catfish in Michigan - channel and flathead. There's one main difference with fishing for the flathead than other catfish species - anglers often use live baitfish when pursuing them, unlike the various earthworms, shrimp or various stink-bait concoctions many catfish anglers use.

Summer is the most popular season to fish for flatheads; they tend to live in slow-flowing rivers where they typically inhabit deep holes. Veteran flathead anglers often pursue them at night, fishing on the bottom in the leading edge of the hole or on the flats upstream. Large minnows, small sunfish or cut suckers are preferred baits.

Northeastern Lower Peninsula June 4

- Rogers City: Lake trout fishing is great. Anglers may have to spend time finding the fish but once they do its good fishing. Try 10 feet off the bottom in 25 to 60 feet with cowbells or dodgers and spin-glos. Look for Chinook and Atlantic salmon as the water warms up. Walleye were caught at night off the breakwall by those casting body
- East and West Twin Lakes: Fishing was slow as both lakes will need to rebound after the cold temperatures, rain and strong winds. One angler did catch a 26inch pike and a 16-inch walleye in West Twin.
- Alpena: Lake trout have been center stage. Hot spots were Northshore and Thunder Bay Island when the weather permits. Fish were caught on cowbells, dodgers and hoochie mammas with spin-glos, squid or plain spoons. Good colors were green, blue and orange up high for a stray steelhead or Chinook.

Walleye are finally starting to hit. Not consistent but getting better. Northshore was the hot spot when trolling green, purple and orange body baits in 10 to 20 feet.

 Thunder Bay River: The steelhead are pretty much done except for the occasional fish caught by those drifting spawn bags or putting artificial eggs on the bottom. Smallmouth bass have been caught when casting body baits or tube baits or spinners up at the dam and around structure.

· Harrisville: Dredging is still going. The pumping hose is in the channel leading out of the harbor but is clearly marked with orange buoys. Anglers need to be cautious. It seems the sediment being churned up is bringing baitfish into the harbor and the large fish are following.

Walleye are in the area in good numbers. The cold front slowed the bite however, it should be back on by the end of the week. Crawler harnesses, body baits and stick baits have caught fish. Chinook, lake trout and steelhead were caught in 80 to 120 feet. The fish are scattered from top to bottom so spread baits out. Most fish are coming on spoons but cut bait, squid and flies were also working.

- Oscoda: Walleye are still trickling in and the fish are decent size. Pier anglers are drifting crawlers with slip bobbers, casting body baits or jigging. Trout and salmon were caught in 80 to 100 feet. Lake trout seem to be the most abundant but a few Chinook were also caught. Steelhead were running near the top of the water column and hitting on spoons, cut bait, body baits and wobble glows.
- Houghton Lake: Shore anglers are catching a few walleye and bass in the canals. Boat anglers are taking walleye in eight to nine feet around the Middle Grounds with leeches and crank baits. Walleye chasing minnows at night were caught by shore anglers. For bluegills, boat anglers caught some nice fish one to four feet down in six feet of water. Bass fishing has been good. Carp were taken by those bow fishing.

- Tawas: Pier fishing was slow with only a few catfish, pike and smallmouth bass caught in the bay. Night anglers might be getting a few walleye. Those trolling spoons in 35 to 50 feet did find some lake trout.
- AuGres: Some walleyes were caught right off the river mouth in 25 to 35 feet but most boats were running south of Pointe AuGres to fish around Buoys No. 1 and No. 2 and along the "humps" northeast of the buoys.
- AuGres River: Was slow except for a few catfish, carp and freshwater drum caught on crawlers or cut bait. On the East Branch, a few anglers were surfcasting for walleye at night.

Anglers, bait dealers reminded of minnow use regulations

Anglers and retail minnow dealers should be aware of the baitfish regulations that need to be followed in Michi-

According to the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) the requirement for state licensed bait retailers to provide customers with receipts upon purchasing live minnows no longer exists, however, all other regulations with respect to minnow use continue to be enforced.

Baitfish regulations were enacted in 2006 to reduce the potential for baitfish to move fish diseases as the state saw multiple fish dieoffs in lakes Erie and Huron from viral hemorrhagic septicemia virus (VHSv).

"While fish kills from VHSv have become less common, we do not want this fish pathogen to spread across Michigan," said Tom Goniea, DNR fisheries biologist. "Our regulations are designed to prevent this from occurring."

The following are some of the key requirements anglers and retail bait dealers should be aware of when selling and using live minnows as bait in Michigan:

- Fathead minnows and golden shiners are the most common minnows imported and sold in Michigan and they are not on the VHSv susceptible species list so the VHSv regulations do not apply to these species.
- Spottail shiners (blues), emerald shiner (grays), and white suckers (sucker or pike minnows) are the most common minnows sold in Michigan that are susceptible to VHSv and the baitfish regulations apply to these species. They are commonly harvested from Michigan waters for use as bait.

- · Bait retailers must verbally inform their customers where they can use the bait.
- Minnows not on the VHSv susceptible species list as well as those that have been certified as "disease free" can be used anywhere in the
- Uncertified minnows harvested in Michigan from VHSv free-waters can be used anywhere. Waters currently classified as VHSv-free include Lake Superior and its Michigan tributary streams above the first fish barrier and all inland lakes in the Michigan and Superior ba-
- Uncertified minnows harvested in Michigan from VHSv surveillance waters can only be used in waters designated as surveillance or positive. Water classified as VHSv surveillance waters include Lake Michigan and its tributaries up to the first fish barrier and all Lake Huron, St. Clair and Erie tributary streams (including the St. Mary's, St. Clair and Detroit rivers) above the first fish barrier. All inland lakes in the Huron and Erie basins.

Motocross racing offers thrills, chills, dust and mud to riders and spectators

By Mary Weber Staff Writer

pumping speed, twists, turns, bumps and jumps on a dirt track is what motocross racing is all about.

Those who participate in this extreme sport say there isn't another sport more physically or mentally taxing. Those who watch from the sidelines say there is nothing that compares to the sight of a bike and its rider hitting a jump, sailing through the air and landing safely with just enough time to make the next corner.

Alcona County has one of Revving engines, heart the only operating motocross track race courses left in northern Michigan, bringing motocross enthusiasts from all over the tip of the mitten and beyond to race there eight times each summer.

The clay and sand track was built over a dozen years ago inside the Alcona County Fairgrounds, across from the soccer fields in Lincoln. Dirt, Incorporated, a nonprofit group, runs the track and has done so since March 2006. Craig Schram, presi-corner and how you are going to set it up. Trying to pass somebody, you have to anticipate what they are going to do so you can get around them. It's one of the most demanding sports out there," Shram said.

Brian Travis, 52, of Spruce said his dad, cousins and uncles all ride and have for years. Brian said it is a great way to keep in shape. He survived a heart attack about 12 years ago and since then has increased exercise and reduces stress by riding, "When you are on the track, dent of Dirt, Inc., said a group called the Northern Berm Bandits first built the track, which still offers racers the perfect environment for their Schram explained motocross racing is a sport which teaches discipline, preparation, goal setting, the satisfaction of winning and sometimes dealing with disappointment. "It's different than most sports because it's an individual sport. It's just the rider and their machine," Schram said.

Both dirt motorcycles and quad all terrain vehicles are raced on the track, however, Dirt, Inc. may do away with the quad racing since the interest has dropped.

Schram said racers four years and up participate in motocross which doesn't appeal to just males. Many females enjoy the thrill of racing. He said families race together and, sometimes, even three generations of families participate.

"Once it's in your blood it stays forever. It's physically demanding but there is a lot of mental work that goes into it too. You have to anticipate the next jump or the next you forget about your troubles," he said.

Both Brian and his cousin, Mike Travis, said they enjoy racing, but also enjoy the time they get to spend socially with family and friends which makes for a great weekend. Mike has been riding since he was four and said his dad, Kelvin Travis, is still a pretty good racer at 62.

Schram explained they typically have about 100 racers participating in two or three races and many of them bring their families to watch the races. He said since the racers and their families make a weekend of the events by camping and socializing, there is a lot of money which is spent locally buying food, fuel and other supplies bringing in additional income to the area.

Schram said motocross is a great spectator sport and watching younger racers is just as exciting as watching the older, experienced ones. He downplayed the dangers of the sport saying there were very few injuries on the race track, but an ambulance stands by during the races

Ten reasons to support local businesses Buy local to support your community

- 1) Buy local -- support yourself: Several studies have shown that when you buy from an independent, locally owned business, rather than a nationally owned businesses, significantly more of your money is used to make purchases from other local businesses, service providers and farms -- continuing to strengthen the economic base of the community.
- 2) Support community groups: Non-profit organizations receive an average 250% more support from smaller business owners than they do from large businesses.
- 3) Keep our community unique: Where we shop, where we eat and have fun -- all of it makes our community home. Our one-of-a-kind businesses are an integral part of the distinctive character of this place. Our tourism businesses also benefit. "When people go on vacation they generally seek out destinations that offer them the sense of being someplace, not just anyplace." ~ Richard Moe, President, National Historic Preservation Trust
- 4) Reduce environmental impact: Locally owned businesses can make more local purchases requiring less transportation and generally set up shop in town or city centers as opposed to developing on the fringe. This generally means contributing less to sprawl, congestion, habitat loss and pollution.
- 5) Create more good jobs: Small local businesses are the - largest employer nationally and in our community, provide the most jobs to residents.

- 6) Get better service: Local businesses often hire people with a better understanding of the products they are selling and take more time to get to know customers.
- 7) Invest in community: Local businesses are owned by people who live in this community, are less likely to leave, and are more invested in the community's future.
- 8) Put your taxes to good use: Local businesses in town centers require comparatively little infrastructure investment and make more efficient use of public services as compared to nationally owned stores entering the community.
- 9) Buy what you want, not what someone wants you to buy: A marketplace of tens of thousands of small businesses is the best way to ensure innovation and low prices over the long-term. A multitude of small businesses, each selecting products based not on a national sales plan but on their own interests and the needs of their local customers, guarantees a much broader range of product choices.
- 10) Encourage local prosperity: A growing body of economic research shows that in an increasingly homogenized world, entrepreneurs and skilled workers are more likely to invest and settle in communities that preserve their one-of-a-kind businesses and distinctive character.

just in case. He said his son, Jeff, did suffer one light concussion, but nothing else in the 13 years he has been racing.

Of course, with any extreme sport, the older the rider the more tolls it takes on the body. Mike Travis has had injuries to both knees and had some broken ribs, but "nothing too bad." He laughed and said, "Ribs don't really count as broken bones... It's just a part of the sport. Heck, you can get injured just lying on your couch; you might as well have fun. It's an adrenaline rush.

"A young racer gets addicted to winning but as you get older you just race because you love it. There is a lot of thinking involved, 90 percent of the race is mental - - you can beat people before you even leave the start line. There's just no other sport like it."

Each racer is responsible for their own bike or quad, all maintenance, parts and equipment, including the safety equipment they must wear. Helmets, goggles and boots covering the ankles are mandatory. Chest and back protection, also known as body armor, is recommended.

Mike said his boots alone cost $600, but Schram explained a lot of times people can get used equipment and clothing from people they talk to at the races or at swaps.

According to Schram the cost for a good used bike is about $2,000 and they go up from there. Serious racers can spend tens of thousands a year just on their bikes and maintenance.

Dirt, Inc. is not affiliated with the American Motocross Association (AMA) because of the additional expense involved with the membership. "We charge our racers $15 a class to race and charge $5 per person five years and up to watch. That money goes to insurance, maintaining the track, a banquet at the end of the year, trophies, and a scholarship for an Alcona County student. Costs for the AMA can be upwards from $30 a class to even $50 a class race," Schram said.

Races began Memorial Day weekend and will continue during the summer on June 20 and 21, July 18 and 19, August 22 during the fair and the end of season race on September 12 with a trophy presentation. Registration opens at 8 a.m. on the day of the race. Practice begins at 10 a.m. Races start at 11 a.m.

on the ground, waders in the water and eyes in the field thanks to an extra $8 million earned from restructuring sales of hunting and fishing

The Department of Natural Resources (DNR) did away with restricted species fishing licenses and instead began offering all-species licenses for $26 last March. A change was also made to hunting licenses, requiring the purchase of an $11 base license for small game before additional licenses for other species can be purchased.

In eight months, an additional $8 million was produced through the restructured license sales, according to Ed Golder, DNR public information officer.

The license revenue pays for many DNR efforts to manage natural resources. "We needed some kind of change to the structure to increase revenue," Golder said.

take was $58.4 million for 2014.

The new money will be put to use as soon as possible. Around $3 million has already gone toward habitat grants, Golder said. And more money will go toward hiring biologists and conservation officers.

Outdoor enthusiasts like Molly Good appreciate the extra waders around. "I've noticed that many of my friends, colleagues and coworkers like to recreationally fish, but don't think to purchase licenses," said Good, a graduate student in fisheries and wildlife at Michigan State University. The presence of more conservation officers will help remind any forgetful anglers to purchase the necessary license or two, she

Reducing the types of licenses from more than 200 to a little more than 40 was a big change for Michigan, and not every angler and hunter was thrilled with it.

There was a definite shift in buying patterns, Golder said. The DNR expected a drop in the numbers of people buying licenses to be around seven percent, but the drop was slightly less than expected.

According to Golder, the number of fishing licenses sold went down by 5.8 percent, but it's hard to know if the decrease is related to price or due to a number of other factors including winter storms and a late spring.

Nonresident annual license sales also took a hit, dropping by 41 percent. DNR Director Keith Creagh will discount them March 1 to $68 instead of $76, with the intention of reengaging out-ofstate anglers, Golder said.

The number of licenses sold to nonresidents was lower than expected which resulted in a lower revenue than expected. But the $8 million total extra gain has those losses already factored in. Golder explained.

Michigan United Conser-

Michigan's total license vation Clubs, the state's largest coalition of outdoor groups, supported the license restructure, said Amy Trotter, the organization's resource policy manager.

The group worked with the DNR on deciding where the additional money would go and how to report that information to keep anglers and hunters in the loop, she said.

In general, "the revenue wasn't as high as was expected," Trotter said. But they are working to figure out how to get the revenue that they

According to Goniea, it is very important that anglers and bait dealers remain vigilant in their efforts to follow the regulations involving bait use in order to prevent the spread of VHSv to additional waters in Michigan.

StarWatch By Gary Becker - How the Crow Got His Caw

* One of my favorite springtime star patterns is Corvus the Crow, and the instructive mythology associated with it. To find Corvus, start with the Big Dipper about an hour after sundown. The bowl will be high in the north and upside-down. Observe how the handle arcs, and follow this curve across the sky to orangey * Arcturus. Continuing southward, the arc swoops lower, reaching blue supergiant Spica which is the alpha star of Virgo the Virgin. You are almost there. Lower and to Spica's right is the quadrilateral of four faint stars which outlines the crow's body. There is an additional luminary directly below the lower right hand star and one above the upper left star of the main grouping which completes the pattern. "A crow you say. No way," but the curvature of the stars mimics the hunched back of a crow. Sipping a glass of wine may help, but using binoculars will be a little more persuasive in revealing all six stars. In the past, crows were light feathered and sang melodiously, but that all changed with Corvus, who was Apollo's most trusted messenger. One hot, summer's day, Corvus was dispatched to bring his master a cup of cool water from Apollo's favorite spring. At once Corvus flew off to complete his appointed task, but upon arriving by the water, he noticed some ripening figs, his favorite food. Dallying by the spring for several days, he gorged himself on the figs, and then flew back to Apollo with the water. Troubled by the delay, Apollo demanded an excuse, and Corvus insisted that a water snake had prevented him from retrieving his drink in a timely manner. Apollo quickly realized that the crow was lying, for as Corvus spoke, pieces of regurgitated fig leaves fell from his beak. Enraged by the crow's deceit, Apollo darkened his feathers and changed Corvus' voice to a caw, then banished him to the sky to be placed on a slithering water snake (Hydra) with his back to a cup (Crater) of clear, cool water just beyond his reach. And that's no crow! www.astronomy.org
