Mikado man faces terrorism charges

By Cheryl Peterson
Editor

With European countries on high alert in the wake of two violent terrorists attacks in the last week, many residents may think these type of incidents play out in large cities far away from rural northeast Michigan.

However, with Internet access globalizing the world, disenchanted individuals can live anywhere and threats, planning and organizing can take place wherever these dissidents reside.

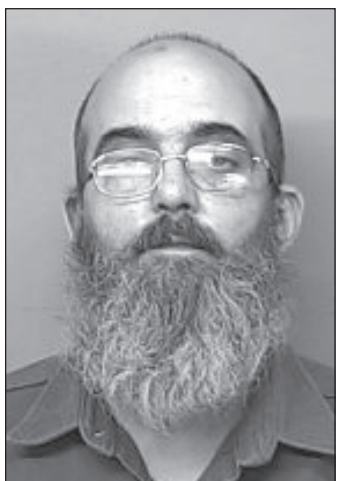

This is the case in a recent incident under investigation by the Alcona County Sheriff's Department.

According to Sgt. James McGuire, a Mikado man has been charged with making threats to commit an act of terrorism.

Christopher Kaczmarek, 42, was charged for making "racist threats over the Internet and threatening to commit acts of terrorism," McGuire said. He explained this case was originally reported to the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) in the early morning hours of Friday, March 25.

By 11 a.m. that day the FBI had contacted the sheriff's department. McGuire obtained a search warrant for Kaczmarek's residence on Hubbard Lake Road. Of-

New website targets northeast Michigan businesses, job seekers and community

The northeast Michigan community, as well as employers considering moving to the region, now have a new resource available to them: www.DiscoverNortheastMichigan.org.

The new collaborative site was created by Northeast Michigan Council of Governments (NEMCOG) and Michigan Works! Northeast Consortium to provide information for local businesses, area job seekers, community members, and those looking to learn more about the region, whether it be businesses looking for a location to grow or the general public looking for regional information.

The new site also features Regional Prosperity Initiative information, as well as a detailed regional profile, demographic data, business data and map data.

Businesses can learn more about northeast Michigan opportunities, B2B opportunities, government contracting, coastal tourism development, site selection, and more. The "Employer Solutions" section includes in depth information about free services available to employers, such as recruitment assistance, free online job postings, and information on wage reimbursement and training/funding opportunities to increase the skills of existing workers.

Job seekers can learn more about free employment and training services, where to go for assistance, how to look for jobs, information on upcoming career fairs and events, and more. There is also specialized information for youth, veterans, and those seeking advanced education opportunities, tuition assistance or GED/adult education.

Under the "Community" section there is a variety of helpful information about area communities, including recycling information, tourism, transportation, planning and community development, economic development, GIS mapping, local foods, housing, community corrections, and environmental and natural resources.

DiscoverNortheastMichigan.org is a consolidation of four websites: nemcog.org, necworks.org, northeastprosperity.org and northeastmichigan.biz. Information that was previously found at these websites will now be housed under the DiscoverNortheastMichigan.org site.

Statewide unemployment drops below five percent but northern counties still struggle

By Josh Bender
Capital News Service

The percent of unemployed Michigan workers dropped below five percent in January for the first time since 2001, according to the Department of Technology, Management and Budget.

But many workers in the northern part of the state didn't fare as well as the rest of the state.

Montmorency, Presque Isle and Schoolcraft counties all have double the state's unemployment rate. Cheboygan and Mackinac counties have triple, according to the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

That may be due to which industries are leading the state's economic growth. "The recovery we've had was stronger in Michigan than in many other states because the auto industry bounced back," said Charles Ballard, a Michigan State University economist and expert on Michigan's economy.

The northern counties are less able to take advantage of the resurgence of the auto industry, which is based in the southern part of the state, said Jim Stansell, senior economist for the House Fiscal Agency.

Since the mining industry's decline, many Upper Peninsula workers have sought work elsewhere, Ballard explained. Many U.P. workers rely on tourism. Statewide, tourism provides about 214,000 jobs, according to a 2015 state report.

The seasonal nature of Michigan tourism means counties that are not traditional winter tourism destinations can suffer substantial unemployment in the winter months, according to Jim Rhein, an economic analyst for the Department of Technology, Management and Budget. "Mackinac and Cheboygan are the most seasonal counties in the state," he said. "In the winter time there isn't much tourism in those areas."

But in the summer, those counties have high tourism and low unemployment. This dramatic difference in employment rates throughout the year can have consequences for workers, Rhein said. "There is a slowdown across most employment sectors," he said. "Unemployment claims always rise there in the winter, far higher than they are in the summer."

Crown of thorns (euphorbia milii) is an evergreen, succulent plant native to Madagascar. It does well in sunny outdoor beds in warm climates, and in cooler regions it does well as a houseplant in a sunny window, blooming from spring into late summer. It prefers a location in full sun but will tolerate some shade for a portion of the day. A tough plant, crown of thorns is a good choice for a seaside location with salt spray or soil with a high salt content. — Brenda Weaver

Planting Pinwheels

April is Child Abuse and Neglect Prevention month and to bring awareness to the community Child Abuse and Neglect Prevention of Alcona County (CANPAC) is inviting community members to help plant a blue pinwheel garden on the courthouse lawn in Harrisville on Friday, April 1 at 11 a.m.

According to Kids Count data for 2014 there were 22 confirmed victims of abuse and/or neglect of children ages 0 to 17 in Alcona County, according to Kids County data for 2014. Tamara Quick, coordinator for the CANPAC council said, "That was a lot as even one is too many." She explained poverty is a main indicator of abuse and neglect.

The blue pinwheel is a symbol of the Prevent Child Abuse America (PCAA) organization. Pinwheels represent a happy childhood and hope which is why PCAA chose it for their national signature campaign of blue pinwheel gardens across America in April. Quick is hoping to plant about 100 pinwheels with the help of many community members, which will help to raise awareness. For more information, contact CANPAC at (989) 370-0239.

Grant Saves Program

Child & Family Services of Northeast Michigan has received funding for the Day One Alcona program. An award notification letter from Laurie Solotorow, senior program officer for the Michigan Health Endowment Fund, it stated "We are pleased to inform you that your grant application has been approved by the Michigan Health Endowment Fund Board of Directors for funding of the full requested amount of $90,000."

This means families in Alcona County can continue to receive the services that Day One provides, which include parenting skills education, child health assessments, connecting families to needed services, advocacy to remove barriers to effective parenting, health resources, housing, education and more. Families enrolled in Day One Alcona receive ongoing assessments and their service plans are designed specifically for the needs that each family has. Since Day One has been providing services in Alcona County, numbers of Child Protective Services (CPS) investigations for child abuse have dropped dramatically, and no child has been removed and placed in foster care from any family enrolled in the program, according to Meg Nisbet, development director for Child & Family Services of Northeast Michigan "This is a huge victory for Alcona County families, and we are so grateful for the support that Alcona County has shown for this program, Nisbet said.

Shoreline Players to open spring comedy

The Shoreline Players spring production, "A Community of Two," opens this weekend. The play, which is written by Jerome Chodorov and provided by Samuel French, is described as a charming off-beat comedy.

"A Community of Two" is the story of Alix Carpenter, a divorcee of only a month, played by Jeannette Klein. Alix finds herself locked out of her apartment and is rescued by her neighbor, Michael Jardeen. Michael is thrice divorced and portrayed by Jay Wells. As the evening unfolds the visitors include Alix's stuffed shirt ex-husband, played by Alan Dalton; her son, who has run away from prep school, played by Wade Sydenstricker; and his girlfriend, played by both Taylor Host; and Michael's current girlfriend played by Jaden Gardyszewski; Olga, a lady anthropologist, portrayed by Tina Wells; and Mr. Greenberg, a philosopher-locksmith, played by Keith Smith. This hilarious story takes place while a blizzard rages outside of the building affecting everyone's lives in unexpected ways.

The Shoreline production is directed by Diana Smith with assistants Renee Diener and Crystal Peters. The show is being produced by Sue Miller. Eric Joseph is the stage manager.

2015 unemployment rate was nearly 15 percent lower than its January 2016 rate, while Cheboygan County experienced a 10 percent differential in the same period, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. "This is sort of a roller coaster ride folks have to deal with," Rhein said.

While the two counties' winter unemployment rates continue to be much higher than the state average, they are shrinking, according to the bureau.

The January unemployment rate dropped by nearly 10 percent between 2009 and 2016 in Mackinac County. It dropped by slightly more than five percent in Cheboygan County during the same period.

The seasonal nature of working in the most tourist-dependent parts of the state creates two basic options for workers, said Deborah Doyle, executive director of the Upward Talent Council-Michigan Works, an organization that helps unemployed residents find jobs.

"There are some folks that may work different seasonal jobs, but there is a population that during that non-peak season may live off savings and unemployment benefits knowing they will be called back to work again next season," Doyle said.

That population, dependent on unemployment benefits and savings, earns less than they would if more stable employment were available, she said.

Legislation passed in 2012 further hinders the ability of such workers to survive, said Peter Ruark, senior policy analyst for the Michigan League for Public Policy. It blocks families with over $5,000 in savings from receiving food assistance.

"We don't want to force people to deplete their savings and punish them for doing the right thing," he said.

Car seat safety is easier for residents

By Mary Weber
Staff writer

A parent makes millions of decisions when it comes to raising a child. Most of them involve keeping their child as safe as possible and one of the first decisions many new parents make is choosing a car seat.

Infant and child car seats come in a variety of makes and models, almost as many as there are different vehicles in which the seat must be used. While each design is somewhat similar, they vary in detail. Often this makes putting a seat in the safest location and attaching it somewhat confusing.

Alcona County now has a car seat safety technician to help with installation and more. Melissa Reames, president of the Alcona County Baby Pantry and a mother of six children, received certification last fall to be Alcona County's first car seat safety technician.

Prior to Reames' certification, Alcona County parents had to set an appointment with Michigan State Police Trooper Ashley Simpson in Alpena to have car seats inspected for safety. It was Simpson who suggested Reames take the training so Alcona citizens didn't have to drive to Alpena.

Most hospitals want to know that parents have received a car seat inspection prior to taking a newborn home from the hospital. Although Reames said the inspection is not absolutely mandatory, it was a good idea and that any car seat should be inspected by a car seat safety technician prior to the child riding in it.

The training Reames took was a week-long intensive look at car seat safety. The class tuition, which ran over $1,000, was paid for by Child Abuse and Neglect Protection of Alcona County (CANPAC). Reames said she learned a lot during the training and found out things she had done incorrectly when putting her own children into car seats.

One of the more common mistakes is not reading the manuals which come from both the auto manufacturer and the manufacturer of the car seat. Reames advised reading both manuals and registering the car seat, so if there is a recall on the seat, parents can be notified. Reames has a list of recalled seats and a book of recommended installation guidelines from different auto manufacturers.

Melissa Reames, Alcona County's car seat safety technician, makes sure three-year-old Taylor Laube of Lincoln fits properly in her new car seat before anchoring it into the back seat of the vehicle. Laube received a new car seat from Reames because the seat her mother had expired in 2007 and was no longer safe for the child to ride in. Photo by Mary Weber.

Another mistake parents make is using both the seat buckle and the anchor tethers when anchoring a car seat in. "Use one or the other, not both. The seat hasn't been tested for both and could cause an issue. It may seem like it's an extra measure of safety, but it's not. Cars made after 2000 all have a tether system for the seat," Reames said.

Where to place the chest clip is an issue for some parents. Many don't get the clip high enough and instead of clipping it across the child's chest bone just under their armpits they are clipping it across the child's stomach. If an accident occurred the clip across their stomach could cause life threatening injuries.

Reames explained the law when it comes to child seats and how a child under the age of two should be in a rear facing seat. "A lot of parents think the child is uncomfortable because their legs are hunched up, but the longer a child can be kept rear facing the safer he will be," Reames said.

Also no child under four years of age should advance to a booster seat. Children old enough to use a booster seat must do so until they are age eight or four feet nine inches tall. "Some parents want to put their two and three year olds into booster seats because it is easier to get them in and out. But it's just not safe," Reames said. She explained there are many different kinds of booster seats -- some with backs and some without. Booster seats should never be used in the middle of the back seat unless there is a middle shoulder strap to restrain the child.

There are many other issues parents might not think about when using car seats. One is using an expired seat. Kim Laube from Lincoln found this out when seeing Reames about a car seat her three and a half year old daughter, Taylor, was using.

"I don't really know where this car seat came from. My mother had it, but I don't know where she got it from," Laube said as Reames first inspected the seat with Taylor in it.

Reames pointed out several issues with straps being loose, worn and twisted. Upon removing Taylor and the seat from the car Reames gazed at the back of the car seat and told Laube the seat expired in 2007. Reames said she couldn't give back a car seat that was past its expiration date and instead issued a brand new car seat to Laube. To date Reames has given nine new car seats away since being certified.

Another issue Reames often runs into is parents purchasing used car seats. Used car seats can be problematic because the new purchaser doesn't always know the full history of it. "You don't know who or how many children have been in that seat, if the straps had been washed, or if the car the seat was installed in was ever in an accident. Washing fabric is okay but washing straps can break them down as can being involved in an accident. Expiration dates can be found on the back but that doesn't give you its history," Reames said.

Reames said she has seen used seats which parents just purchased with missing straps which the parents didn't realize were needed. "They get used seats because car seats are expensive and there are a lot of people living here who just can't afford it. But no one should be without a safe car seat because of that. There are a lot of resources which can help," she said.

One other thing she sees quite a bit of is parents, especially grandparents, who put a sheet between the child and the car seat to try and keep the seat clean. Reames warned that, just like a bulky coat could cause an issue with restraint in an accident, so can a sheet or towel.

"A lightweight fleece coat is fine for a child to wear in a car seat, but nothing puffy, and nothing between the child and the seat. Read the manual for the seat and follow those guidelines because that's how the seat has been tested," Reames said.

SENIOR LIFESTYLES

The consequences of dying without a will

Dear Savvy Senior,
What will happen to my money and possessions if I die without a will?

Getting Old

Dear Getting,

If you die without a will, what happens to your assets will be determined by the state you reside in. Every state has intestacy laws in place that parcel out property and assets to a deceased person's closest relatives when there's no will or trust. But these laws vary from state-to-state.

A good resource to help you find out how your state works is About.com's Wills and Estate Planning site, which provides a state-by-state breakdown of how your estate would be distributed if you die without a will. See StateIntestacy-Laws.com for a direct link to this page.

In the meantime, here is a general (not state specific) breakdown of what can happen to a person's assets, depending on whom they leave behind.

• Married with children: When a married person with children dies without a will, all property, investments and financial accounts that are "jointly owned" automatically goes to the surviving co-owner (typically the spouse or child), without going through probate, which is the legal process that distributes a deceased person's assets.

But for all other separately owned property or individual financial accounts, the laws of most states award one-third to one-half to the surviving spouse, while the rest goes to the children.

• Married with no children or grandchildren: Some states award the entire estate to the surviving spouse, or everything up to a certain amount (for example the first $100,000). But many other states award only one-third to one-half of the decedent's separately owned assets to the surviving spouse, with the remainder generally going to the deceased person's parents, or if the parents are dead, to brothers and sisters.

Jointly owned property, investments, financial accounts, or community property automatically goes to the surviving co-owner.

• Single with children: All state laws provide that the entire estate goes to the children, in equal shares. If an adult child of the decedent has died, then that child's children (the decedent's grandchildren) split their parent's share.

• Single with no children or grandchildren: In this situation, most state laws favor the deceased person's parents. If both parents are deceased, many states divide the property among the brothers and sisters, or if they are not living, their children (your nieces and nephews). If there are none of them, it goes to the next of kin, and if there is no living family, the state takes it.

To ensure your assets go to those you want to receive them, you need to create a will. If you have a simple estate and an uncomplicated family situation, there are several good do-it-yourself resources that can help you for very little money.

One of the best is the Quicken WillMaker Plus 2016 software (available at nolo.com) that costs $55, works with Windows personal computers and is valid in every state except Louisiana.

If you use a Mac, they offer an online will maker for $35.

If, however, you want or need assistance or if you have a complicated financial situation, blended family or have considerable assets, you should hire an attorney. An experienced attorney can make sure you cover all your bases, which can help avoid family confusion and squabbles after you're gone.

Costs will vary depending on where you reside, but you can expect to pay anywhere between $200 and $1,000 for a will.

Creel clerks collect angler information on inland water bodies

As the spring fishing season approaches, the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) reminds anglers that fisheries staff will be interviewing them about their fishing trips on several inland lakes located throughout the state.

Locations include Mullett Lake (Cheboygan County), Cass and Union lakes (Oakland County), Big Manistee River including a component on Manistee Lake (Manistee County), Deer Lake Basin (Marquette County) and Lake Gogebic (Gogebic County). At each of these water bodies a DNR creel clerk will, through brief interviews, ask anglers how long they fished, what species they targeted, what they caught and where they live.

In some instances, the clerks will ask to measure or weigh fish and take scale samples to gather key biological information on anglers' catches.

These efforts are part of the DNR's Statewide Angler Survey Program, a monitoring program designed to track recreational fisheries across Michigan waters of the Great Lakes and select inland waters. Fisheries managers use the data to determine future management actions that include developing appropriate regulations, addressing habitat improvements and identifying fish stocking needs.

Inland creel efforts will begin on various dates this spring and extend, in some cases, into 2017. Anglers are asked to cooperate with the DNR creel clerks during the study.

To see past creel results, visit michigan.gov/fishing and click on Fishing in Michigan in the left toolbar.

• AuSable River: Water levels came down. Steelhead fishing has been good from the dam to the mouth for those using spawn, wax worms or wigglers. A few lake trout were caught near the mouth.

• Higgins Lake: Still has ice that blew up along the shoreline. The boat launches on the west side of the lake were still iced in.

• Houghton Lake: Is now open water. Not much in the way of boat activity except for a couple of small boats fishing the canals for crappie. Catch rates have been slow as water temperatures are still cold.

• Tawas: Had quite a few boats out trolling in Tawas Bay where they were taking a good number of lake trout including some limit catches. A couple of brown trout were also taken. Pier anglers casting or still-fishing large minnows from the state harbor have also caught lake trout. A good number of minnows were present inside the harbor but the perch have not shown up in any numbers yet. Small boats trolling off the mouth of the Tawas River caught some walleye on crank baits.

• Tawas River: A few suckers are being taken in the lower river.

• AuGres: Had some boats

going out. They managed to catch a few walleye when trolling crank baits. Shore anglers casting near the mouth of the river picked up a few walleye and lake trout.

• AuGres River: The water has been pretty muddy in Whitney Drain and the steelhead fishing has been slow. It should pick up as the water comes down and clears up.

• Rifle River: The sucker run was starting to get underway. Dip-netting for suckers and other non-game species on the river is now open.

4-H Archery Club teaches safe, fun discipline

By Mary Weber
Staff Writer

Historically, archery has been used for hunting and combat, but in today's world, archery is mainly a competitive sport and recreational activity.

The 4-H Alcona Archery Club has been teaching youth from age nine to 19 the art of archery for nearly 10 years. Although the group's popularity has dwindled some from the first year, it still has quite a draw for Alcona County youth.

With the objective of having a safe environment, youth learn quickly to follow and obey all rules. Whistles are used to let archers know when to line up, shoot arrows and when it is safe to enter the field to retrieve arrows.

Tom Keerl, 4-H leader, and Chad Kamischke, assistant leader, stress safety and have enjoyed a good safety record.

When Kamischke blows two whistles youth immediately line up and place the bottom of their bow on the toes of their shoes. "Bows on toes, that tells us everyone is paying attention and is doing what they are supposed to be doing. They do very well with the rules, two whistles means line up, one whistle means they can shoot and three whistles means the field is clear and it is safe to retrieve their bows," Keerl said.

Children are fitted with the proper equipment for their height and strength. Although some archers prefer to bring their own equipment, everything a young bowman would need is available at the sessions.

Keerl explained that today's archery is just as much mental discipline as it is physical discipline, much like playing golf. Youth are instructed in technique and working on their anchor point, which is one of the most difficult aspects of archery. "If you don't do everything the same, your arrow doesn't go in the same spot. You have to do everything consistently, you have to use your brain," Keerl said.

Les Thomas, 4-H coordinator for Alcona County, said there are about 26 kids in the archery program which is a bit lower than normal. He explained the program started in 2007 by Steve Kitzman, a Lost Lake Woods resident who thought it would make a great after school program for kids in Alcona County.

Kitzman went to many local civic groups and raised about $12,000 which not only bought equipment for the 4-H program but also enough equipment for the school to have an identical set. He then found training for physical education teachers and anyone who wanted to teach the sport to youth in the county. The training specifically blended youth development and shooting sport safety with archery specific content.

"We were able to host a training program with about a half a dozen people who would be delivering the program," Thomas said.

Cost per session is $2 which basically covers the end of season banquet and awards given, such as t-shirts and a grand award of a compound bow with is given based on attendance.

"We don't compete with other shooting groups although there are competitions available through 4-H, instead we have the banquet and awards," Thomas said.

Keerl said he enjoys being a 4-H leader, "It's cool to see their progress. Many of the younger kids will come with an older sibling to sessions and can't wait until their ninth birthday to be able to get behind the bow and shoot. Some have used their skills to hunt with bows but a lot of these kids don't hunt at all. They just like the discipline of archery."

The 4-H Archery Club meets weekly on Thursdays from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Lincoln Senior Center. The season begins in January and runs until mid April, which means there is still some time for youth to have a chance to see if it's something they would enjoy.

For more information, call Les Thomas at (989) 335-0398.

Anglers beware: Help prevent spread of invasive mudsnail

In 2015 the Michigan departments of Environmental Quality and Natural Resources confirmed the presence of the invasive New Zealand mudsnail in the Pere Marquette River near Baldwin, Mich. which is a popular destination for trout and salmon anglers.

New Zealand mudsnails are only about 1/8 inch long and can be difficult to see. However, these snails can significantly change the aquatic habitats they live in by reaching extremely high densities. When that happens, they can out-compete native species that are important food sources for trout. They also have no nutritional value for trout species that may feed upon them, which can negatively affect the overall condition of the trout.

The threat of New Zealand mudsnail spreading to new waters is high because they are easily transported via recreational users, such as anglers, due to their ability to attach to fishing equipment, wading gear and other hard surfaces. Once attached, they can hitch a ride to a new river or lake and begin the invasive process again since a single snail can reproduce once transported.

New Zealand mudsnails are very resilient and have been known to survive in damp environments for up to 26 days.

As the spring fishing season gears up, anglers are anxiously awaiting the opportunity to target steelhead on the Pere Marquette and other popular Michigan rivers. It is important for anglers to clean, drain and dry their equipment to help prevent the spread of these invasive snails, as well as all types of aquatic invasive species.

Anglers are encouraged to clean boats and equipment (including waders) with hot water or a diluted bleach solution, and, when possible, allow the equipment to dry for at least five days before reusing.

Additional information about the New Zealand mudsnail and other aquatic invasive species can be found at michigan.gov/invasives.

Outdoor Skills Academy offers opportunities for hunters and anglers to learn from experts

Those who want to learn more about fishing and hunting can link up with expert instructors at the Michigan Department of Natural Resources' (DNR) Outdoor Skills Academy.

"It's like Michael Jordan coming to help us teach basketball," said DNR park interpreter and academy director Ed Shaw. "These guys are the Michael Jordans of the fishing world."

Shaw runs the academy out of the Carl T. Johnson Hunt and Fish Center at Mitchell State Park in Cadillac, Mich. Instructors include seven seasonal interpreters and seven pros, with the list continuing to grow.

Shaw has enlisted pro staff from fishing gear companies like Fish Bones Custom Lures, Clam Outdoors, Vexilar and HT Enterprises, who team up with DNR instructors to present hands-on clinics for newbies and experienced anglers and hunters who want to brush up on their skills.

"They're professionals who know how to teach this stuff," Shaw said. "It's pretty cool to have a staff of experts. I've learned a lot from them."

The first Outdoor Skills Academy professional was Steve Berry, former fishing charter captain and member of the pro staff for several fishing equipment companies. Berry said he started out by helping with a kids' ice fishing clinic at the Hunt and Fish Center. He enjoyed it and liked Shaw's programs and future vision for the academy.

"It's not just children but adults who want to learn how to do these things," said Berry, who has more than 30 years of Michigan walleye fishing experience. "I've been living the outdoor life my whole life. I'm able to help out not only with my knowledge but with products."

Because of his relationship with companies like Clam Outdoors and Vexilar, which both have donated equipment for programs, Berry can bring the gear that helps make these classes possible. In fact, support from dozens of sponsors and partners helps keep the Outdoor Skills Academy running.

Shaw said that while many people in the outdoor industry know about the academy and "people are coming out of the woodwork wanting to sponsor us," there are many hunters and anglers who still don't know about it.

Some of the pro staffers said the same thing. Berry grew up in the Grand Rapids area and didn't know about the Hunt and Fish Center until recently.

"A lot of outdoor folks don't even know it's there," Berry said. "A lot of people don't know that the DNR isn't just a law enforcement or state park agency, but is also there to teach people outdoor skills."

Norm Smith, an Outdoor Skills Academy pro staffer who is also on the pro staff at HT Enterprises, said he too wants to get the word out about programs like the academy's that help get people involved in outdoor recreation. "We're interested in helping people learn what we've learned over the years," Smith said.

Smith has won many fishing tournaments and uses a technique called "tight-lining" that tends to pique people's curiosity. Smith said tight-liners do well in tournaments and catch a lot of fish.

One big reason Smith got involved at the academy is his interest in "getting kids and more women out on the ice." That includes his wife, Teri, now in her second year of ice fishing. "We always cater to children when we're out fishing, and often give them a pole to help keep their interest," Berry said.

Fellow academy pro staffer, and Fish Bones Custom Lures owner, Matt Peterson agreed. "We love the opportunity to teach older people our techniques and tricks, but most of all it's about getting kids out and showing them how easy it is if you have the right equipment," Peterson said. "Get them off these Xboxes and out in the field."

In addition to the expertise of the academy pro staff, the DNR's own instructors bring considerable knowledge to the table. "I give my staff a lot of credit. Without them, the academy wouldn't have happened," said Shaw, who cited park interpreter and instructor Kevin Perry as an example. "Kevin knows the Manistee River as well as

Heavy rains cause floods

Northern Michigan cut off from rest of the state, flood conditions worst in history of this section

March 30, 1916 - Harrisville, in common with all other points on the D. & M. north of Omer has been cut off from the outside world since Monday, the last train to get through from the south being at 1:53 Monday morning. A severe rain storm prevailed with a downfall of between 2 and 3 inches. Melting snow added to this caused flood conditions that have never before been known in this section.

A big wash-out a mile and a half south of Omer is the chief cause of the interruption to traffic. Fifteen miles further south a bridge over Kawkalin river went out and Wednesday this was the nearest that a train from the north could meet a train from the south and conditions were such that no effort was made to transfer either passengers or mail over the intervening track. The railroad people are working hard and at great disadvantage to repair their tracks and resume service, but do not expect to get trains running again before the latter part of the week. It is also stated that flood conditions exist on the Michigan Central north of Bay City, and through traffic on that line is at a stand still.

The damage at Omer consists of a thousand yards of main line track and embankment washed away. The fill near the bridge over Rifle river was blown out in an effort to release the pressure of water and save the bridge. The bridge still stands but the workmen are having a hard fight to stop the rush of water released by the dynamite, and which continues to wear away the track bed.

Such meager news as this section has from the outside world is gleaned from the Alpena daily papers. The press service of these papers was interrupted by broken wires caused by the flooded conditions which seem to prevail over Southern Michigan.

Black River, March 29 — Never in the history of Black River has there been such high water as there is at present. The ice blocked up the river and over two feet of water covered the village. One of the township's new bridges built last summer was taken out by the ice. Tuesday the track men dynamited the ice in the river and this morning (Wednesday) the river has gone down a foot and the water in the town is a good deal lower. Had the rain been warm there would have been a much worse flood, as it was the rain was cold and the snow didn't melt much.

The bridge over Pine River at D. F. McDonald's corner washed out and he was forced to turn back a mile before he could get on the south leg of his route. Van Ettan Creek near W. R. Cumming's and D. McMaster's went on the rampage and Mr. McMaster especially had a very disagreeable time. Water drove the family from the lower floor of the house some of them going to the neighbors for shelter and those who remained on the premises found refuge in the second story rooms.

In town a stream thirty feet wide cut across the corner of Church and State streets and ran down against the D. & M. embankment, which turned it north into Mill creek, swelling that stream to a turbulent body.

The basement of the Huron View hotel was flooded for a time, and the furnace fire extinguished, but this condition did not last long. All the low places about town became small lakes and ponds. One of the worst of these was in the rear of St. Anne's rectory and Mrs. E. Chappelle's house.

Here there was a good sized sheet of water several hundred feet in size and three feet deep. The Chappelle chicken house was flooded out and the rising water just raised the barn flooring.

Fr. Houle's garage was surrounded and he had to elevate his car and other contents of the building to keep them out of the water. A big sheet of water also formed near T. W. Green's barn and came uncomfortably close to

John Dube's house nearby.

A SMALL PAPER

The Review goes to its readers this week at half its usual size because the regular supply of paper failed to arrive on account of the big wash-out on the railroad. It is also short on a large part of its regular news, especially the correspondence, because the mails have not arrived.

StarWatch By Gary Becker - Jupiter Ascending

There is no question that the planet Jupiter is reigning supreme as the brightest wanderer in the sky until the middle of summer when Venus will begin to enter the celestial stage. The king of the gods, Jupiter, is below the king of the beasts, Leo the Lion. They are already leaping over the treetops by dark. By 10:30 p.m. Jupiter is nearly due south on the meridian and as high as it can get in the sky. Fast forward a month to the end of April, and Jupiter will be in the south by 8:30 p.m. before it is fully dark. Telescopically, Jupiter probably offers the easiest planetary detail to witness through small scopes. Don't expect to see the Red Spot, but Jupiter's two equatorial belts are easily visible. Look for these dark bands straddling the equator, and you'll be witnessing Jovian meteorology in action. Jupiter is very hot inside, and its weather is created by this leftover heat that accumulated from Jove's birth 4.5 billion years ago. As heat rises from Jupiter's turbulent interior, it pushes small amounts of ammonia gas to higher altitudes where it cools and condenses to form ammonia snow. These bright areas are called zones on Jupiter. The ammonia and other gases, now cooler and denser, move back downward and liquefy into the darker belts. The zebra patterns of alternating zones and belts result from Jupiter's rapid rotation which stretches and regiments these areas of uplift and downdraft to specific regions north and south of Jupiter's equator. Perhaps even more enjoyable is watching the interplay of Jupiter's four bright Galilean satellites, Io, Europa, Ganymede, and Callisto. They orbit the planet in periods of 1.8, 3.6, 7.2, and 16.7 days, and because they are positioned in Jupiter's equatorial plane, they stretch out like tiny dancers engaged in a complicated routine, sometimes all to one side, or two and two, or tucked close to their giant parent world. Their ever changing patterns which are easy to discern make Jupiter the most changeable of the eight planets to observe. www.astronomy.org

Moments In Time

By The History Channel

- On April 13, 1742, Handel's "Messiah," one of the world's most beloved musical works, premieres in Ireland. Although now associated with Christmas, "Messiah" made its world premiere during the Christian season of Lent.
- On April 12, 1861, Confederate Gen. P.G.T. Beauregard opens fire on Union-held Fort Sumter in South Carolina, launching more than 4,000 rounds. Two days later, President Abraham Lincoln issued a proclamation calling for 75,000 volunteer soldiers to quell the Southern "insurrection."
- On April 17, 1882, several copies of Sheriff Pat Garrett's wildly inauthentic, fictionalized biography, "An Authentic Life of Billy the Kid," arrive at the Library of Congress. The first full, realistic biography of William Bonney (the Kid's principle alias) was not published until 1989.
- On April 14, 1818, Noah Webster, a Yale-educated lawyer with an avid interest in language and education, publishes his American Dictionary of the English Language. The dictionary, which took him more than two decades to complete, introduced more than 10,000 "Americanisms."
- On April 15, 1912, the ocean liner Titanic sinks into the North Atlantic about 400 miles south of Newfoundland. It was later discovered that the liner Californian had been less than 20 miles away but had failed to hear the Titanic's distress signals because its radio operator was off duty.
- On April 16, 1947, a giant explosion occurs during the loading of ammonium nitrate fertilizer onto the freighter Grandcamp at a pier in Texas City, Texas. Nearly 600 people were killed and thousands injured when the ship was literally blown to bits. Its 3,000 pound anchor was found 2 miles away.
- On April 11, 1988, actress and singer Cher collects the Academy Award for Best Actress for her performance in "Moonstruck." Cherilyn Sarkasian first became famous as the taller, female half of the 1960s singing duo Sonny and Cher.

Strange But True

By Samantha Weaver

- It was 19th-century Russian playwright and short story writer Anton Chekhov who made the following sage observation: "Love, friendship, respect, do not unite people as much as a common hatred for something."
- If you suffer from galeophobia you're certainly not alone; Steven Spielberg's 1975 film "Jaws" may have popularized the fear of sharks, but it certainly didn't start it. Logically, though, swinophobia makes more sense -- pigs kill more people every year than sharks do.
- You might be surprised to learn that Harriet Tubman - famous for her work as a conductor on the Underground Railroad -- also served as a Union spy during the Civil War, providing key intelligence that aided in the capture of Jacksonville, Florida. She also was the first woman to lead an armed assault during the Civil War; the Combahee River Raid freed 750 South Carolina slaves. She even continued her humanitarian work after the war, opening the Harriet Tubman Home for the Aged and Indigent in Albany, New York.
- According to the nuns who worked with her, Mother Teresa's last words were, "Jesus, I love you. Jesus, I love you." According to her doctor, the last thing she said was actually, "I can't breathe."
- If you wanted to erect a building in Colonial times, you'd go to an undertaker; that's what building contractors were called back then.
- Ancient Romans recognized three distinct forms of kissing: The word "basium" denoted a kiss between acquaintances, "osculum" was used for a kiss between close friends, and "suavium" described a kiss between lovers.

Thought for the Day: "Catch-and-release -- that's like running down pedestrians in your car and then, when they get up and limp away, saying, 'Off you go! That's fine. I just wanted to see if I could hit you.'" -- Ellen DeGeneres anybody. He can teach people what he's learned in living here and fishing here for 30 years."

DNR wildlife biologists and conservation officers are also part of the team that teaches students skills needed for outdoor pursuits like bear hunting.

The Hunt and Fish Center had been offering classes on outdoor activities for several years. However, in 2014, Shaw and his staff – including Kevin Perry, John Zakrajsek, Chuck Fales, Dennis Hewitt and Ed Cieslinski – originated the academy.

More than 150 students – many of them new to hunting for bears – attended the academy's most recent bear hunting clinics in August, the same month the academy held its opening ribbon-cutting ceremony.

One of those students, Eric Lardi, ended up shooting a bear weighing over 300 pounds during a subsequent bear hunt in Canada. Lardi called the bear hunting clinic "an excellent introduction to hunting for my grandkids."

"The guides in Canada reinforced everything said and I would not change the class," Lardi said. "The conservation officer's experience was invaluable to us, as to bear behavior and what to expect."

Roger Kremers, a hunter and angler from Rapid River, Mich. who also attended the bear hunting clinic, said he considers his day in the class well spent, even though he didn't harvest a bear last fall.

"Very good information from the biologist," Kremers said. "He explained very well how the bear population is managed, how (the) DNR determines the allotment of licenses, et cetera."

He also enjoyed the information provided by a DNR conservation officer who explained how to take care of a bear quickly following a successful hunt and what to do with the bear hide.

Shaw said the Outdoor Skills Academy's unique brand of instruction is bringing people from around the state to Wexford County to attend classes. In turn, the academy provides a boost to the local economy.

The academy's most recent Hard Water School – an ice fishing clinic held in early January 2016 – was filled to capacity, with about half of the participants driving to Cadillac, Mich. from locations as far away as Farmington Hills, Mich., which is just about 200 miles away in Oakland County.

"People are travelling in from other parts of the state for classes, spending $400 or $500," Shaw said. "We're putting heads in beds – people attending our programs are customers at local hotels, restaurants and gas stations."

The next scheduled programs at the Outdoor Skills Academy include steelhead clinics on April 2 and 9 and June 25; an open-water wall-eye clinic April 16; a turkey hunting class April 23; a beginners fly fishing clinic May 21; a beginners bass fishing clinic June 5; and bear hunting courses July 30 and August 7 and 13.

Peterson, who is also a duck and goose hunting guide, said a late-summer waterfowl clinic is in the works as well.

Students who take five Outdoor Skills Academy classes get a graduation certificate and their name listed on the academy website. There is no age limit for the class, but Shaw recommended students be at least eight years old. There is a cost for most of the classes ranging between $25 and $40; others are free.
