Fire fighters were called to an early morning fire on Lake Street in Lincoln Sunday where they found smoke coming from the Iron Skillet Family Restaurant.

First responders were called out at approximately 2:40 a.m. on August 27. First to arrive on the scene were fire fighters from the Lincoln Fire Department and deputies from the Alcona County Sheriff's Office. Mutual aid assistance was requested and received from the Mikado, Harrisville, Barton City and South Shore fire departments.

According to Billy Cordes, assistant fire chief for Lincoln, flames appeared when fire fighters entered the building. He explained the building was large and had many "add ons, which made fighting the fire difficult... we had good water supply - Viking Energy provided water - we had about two tankers per pumper," Cordes said.

The business was closed and no one was in the building, according to the sheriff's office. No one was injured while fighting the fire, Cordes said of the approximately 20 fire fighters who responded.

"I think it's a total loss," Cordes said. "The roof is pretty much gone, the kitchen is destroyed and there is smoke and water damage in the dining area... The fire was mainly contained to the kitchen area and upstairs - which was an old apartment that hasn't been used in a long time... mainly used now for storage."

Fire fighters cleared the scene at approximately 7 a.m. and that is when the investigation by Deputy Robert Clink, fire investigator for the sheriff's office, began. According to Clink, the fire may have started in the kitchen. He is being assisted by Sgt. Dan Drew of the Michigan State Police (MSP) Fire Marshal's office in Traverse City, Mich., MSP trooper Ryan Aper, a K9 handler from St. Ignace, Mich., and MSP trooper Jeff Mercer, an unmanned aircraft operator from Gaylord, Mich., who were on the scene with Clink on Monday afternoon.

The business has been owned by Julie Lecuyer and Heidi Morang since 2003. The

Utilizing local foods priority of cooking demo and dinner

A kitchen demonstration with a renowned Michigan fermenter followed by a gourmet meal featuring foods grown in Alcona County is the first Farm to Fork Alcona event, with plans for many more to come.

The demonstration and locally grown "Taste the Local Difference" dinner, which is the first of its kind in the county, will be held Saturday, Sept. 30.

David Klingenberg, chief financial officer and owner of The Brinery in Ann Arbor, Mich., will be demonstrating the ancient art of fermentation for kimchi, sauerkraut and pickles during the natural fermentation workshop portion of the event at 2 p.m.

According to Judy MacNeill, chairperson for the event, Klingenberg is revolutionizing the art of Lactofermentation by taking it back to its roots, which predates refrigeration. He uses salt, not vinegar, for fermenting vegetables and lets them sit in a chilly spot until they are pickled.

"David is a really fun person. The beauty of eating the types of foods he makes is they provide a high amount of probiotics which helps aid digestion. It's a healthy thing," MacNeill said. She also sits on board of directors for Inspiration Alcona -- the sponsor of the event -- and is a nutrition consultant and registered dietitian.

Klingenberg attended the ARA Farmers Market over the weekend and said he was looking forward to the demonstration and dinner.

Following the demonstration, at 4 p.m. there will be appetizers, a cash bar and a mini-farmers market.

The dinner will be served at 5:30 p.m. It will be made by The Brinery's chef and head of production in research, Andrew Stevick. The menu, which contains mostly locally grown products, includes hors d'oeuvres of cheese and homemade crackers, sauer-kraut, pickles, and cabbage rolls with lamb. The main course will include herb-crusted sirloin platter with meat from Leeseberg Farms in Harrisville, braised beans with pork, carrots and onions, warm tempeh salad with dried cranberries, roughage salad with Parmesan and homemade vinaigrette dressing, roasted spaghetti salad, dinner rolls with herbed butter and caramel apple tartine. Also planned is homemade maple ice cream with ingredients from the Sunrise Sugarhouse of Harrisville. A vegan menu is also planned.

MacNeill, and Billie Thompson, Farm to Fork committee member, owner of White Barn Farm and vendor for the ARA Farmers Market, want participants to see how good food tastes when its locally grown and harvested as opposed to food transported by trucks over hundreds of miles.

They hope a result of this type of event will be people and restaurants purchasing more locally grown and pro-

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor,

I offer no apology for what I'm (writing), for this truly is how I feel -- gonna vent here.

I have lived through presidents Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon, Ford, Reagan, George H. Bush, Clinton, George W. Bush and Obama. In my lifetime, I have never seen or heard of a president being scrutinized over every word he speaks, humiliated by the public to the point of wanting to hurt someone, slandered, ridiculed, insulted, lied to, threatened to murdered, threatened to rape our First Lady and have his children also insulted and humiliated.

I'm truly ashamed of the people of this country. I'm ashamed of the ruthlessness, hating and cruelty. I am ashamed of the Trump haters who have no morals and the news reporters who feel they have the right to purposely lie and do the things they are doing.

Every other president, after they were elected and took the oath of office, were left alone. They were not on the news 24/7 being disrespected by every word out of their mouth, always being pressured to do this or that, never given the support to do the important work that needs to be done. Enough is enough is enough. Leave the man alone and let him do his job for God's sake.

The kiku, or chrysanthemum, is highly symbolic in Japanese culture. In general it represents longevity and rejuvenation, and its motif is found everywhere. The monarchy is referred to as the Chrysanthemum Throne. The Imperial crest is a stylized mum blossom, and that seal is embossed on Japanese passports. The flower is common in art, and it is depicted on the ¥50 coin. The chrysanthemum is known as a symbol of autumn, as it blooms in September.

Alcona steamrolls Tawas in football

By Ben Murphy
Opener

It was close early. It was a blowout by the end. The Alcona varsity football team, playing at Tawas in both team's football season openers Thursday night, picked up steam as the game went on and rolled to a 46-13 win.

"Anytime you can get a win it's nice, but going on the road and beating a tough Tawas team is really nice and it sets the tone for the rest of the season," said head coach Jason Somers. "(Tawas beating us last year) served as motivation for the off-season work outs, but once we got into the season it was all about us and our ability to get better each week."

The Braves stunned the Tigers with a win in week one last year. The Tigers looked up to the task early, as they scored two of the games' touchdowns to give them a 13-6 lead. Tim Hutchinson scored on a short run for the Tigers.

Alcona took its first lead on a tough, two-yard run by Jack Hutchinson. The two-point conversion by T. Hutchinson made it 14-13 midway through the second quarter.

From there it was all Alcona.

Kyle Haeger scored a touchdown before the half to make it 22-13 at the break and the Tigers punched in a score on their first possession of the second half, with T. Hutchinson finding the end-zone on a seven yard run for a 30-13 lead.

Quarterback Alex Stephenson broke free for a big 55-yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter, with Haeger following that with another score for the 46-13 final.

"I believe the success in running the ball comes from the experience on the offensive line," Somers said. "It took them a series to get things figured out, but they were able to adapt and create some running lanes for the running backs who ran with good patience and aggression," Somers said. "The defensive line played well as a unit too, making it difficult for Tawas to run the ball."

T. Hutchinson led the way on offense with 173 yards and two touchdowns on 21 carries. J. Hutchinson ran 12 times for 71 yards and a score. Stephenson had six carries for 66 yards and a score; and Haeger finished with two touchdown runs.

On the defense, Devon Mills and Cody Schram had nine tackles apiece. Stephenson had seven tackles and one interception.

"I thought overall this was a great way to start," Somers said. "I think that the team, who got down early, was able to believe in themselves, not flinch and get the job done. This is a testament to who they are becoming as a football team."

Alcona (1-0 overall) hosts Hillman (0-1) in a rare Wednesday game this week. Hillman is coming off a 35-6 loss to Gaylord St. Mary in its opener. Alcona topped Hillman 46-0 last year.

"I think the keys to winning will be to contain their offense and then execute on offense and be better than week one," Somers said.

partners and members of their families were at the scene, outside of the taped off area, Monday afternoon watching the investigation unfold and answering questions from law enforcement officials.

In addition to the fire, the business had a break in on August 17. According to the sheriff's office, between the hours of 8 p.m. on August 17 and 6:30 a.m. on August 18 one or more suspects entered the Iron Skillet through a side door and removed the night drop cash bag which contained $225.

Both incidents are under investigation. If anyone has any information regarding either incident, they are asked to contact the Alcona County Sheriff's office at (989) 724-6271.

cured foods. "This will eventually grow the economy because we are helping each other," Thompson said.

Farm to Fork Alcona is also looking for certification by Taste the Local Difference (TLD), a full-service local food marketing communications firm which offers a broad range of services including website designs and development, logo designs, media buying and planning, search engine marketing, social media management, video production, photography and more.

Approximately 100,000 copies of the TLD annual guide to local food in northern Michigan is distributed across Michigan to draw attention to locally grown products from locations like Leeseberg Farms, Cedarbrook Trout Farm and the ARA Farmers Market, according to Thompson.

"If you are certified by TLD it means 20 percent of the food at your event is locally obtained. At this event, 86 percent of the food will be obtained locally. Our goal is 100 percent, but some things are tricky to obtain here, such as lemons," MacNeill said.

The Farm to Fork Alcona event is sponsored by Inspiration Alcona, a nonprofit organization formed to make Alcona County a destination spot for artists of all kinds to learn, be inspired and unleash their creativity, and hopes its events will build a new economic base for Alcona County through cultural tourism.

The event is a fundraiser for other endeavors of Inspiration Alcona and the Farm to Fork Alcona movement, specifically the upcoming Alcona Regional Farm Conference which is scheduled for February 10, 2018.

The Farm to Fork committee is also having a locally grown spaghetti dinner fundraiser scheduled for September 18 at Lost Lake Woods Club in Lincoln which will kick off its Patronicity.com campaign, a kick-starter like campaign, only with 100 percent of funds donated going to the select cause. The Patronicity.com campaign will run from September 18 to October 29.

MacNeill said future Farm to Fork events are being considered such as beer making or a beer and food pairing event, because hops is a crop which could grow well in northeast Michigan, and a knife throw-down event with two chefs competing against each other using locally grown food.

The events can be attended separately or together. Cost to attend the fermentation demonstration and dinner is $50. Cost to attend the workshop or dinner is $30. After September 10 prices go up to $75 for workshop and dinner or $45 for either. The demonstration and dinner will be held at Loggers Trace, Springport Golf Course in Harrisville.

Registration deadline is September 15 at www.InspirationAlcona.org, by mail at P.O. Box 506, Lincoln, Mich. 48742, or call (989) 736-3000.

Free book program for local children

By Mary Weber
Staff Writer

Free books, through Dolly Parton's Imagination Library, will be coming to children under five years of age who live in Alcona and Iosco counties.

The Imagination Library, which Parton started in 1995, is a nonprofit organization promoting literacy to children from birth to age five. Children registered in the program receive a free, age appropriate book every month delivered to their home.

To register, three kickoff events will be held on Saturday, September 9. The Harrisville branch of the Alcona County Library and the Curtis Township Library in Glenie will hold a kickoff from 1 to 2 p.m. with a children's author as a guest speaker. The Iosco-Arenac District Library in East Tawas, will have its kickoff from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. with Clifford, the big red dog, as a guest.

The program is brought to the two counties through collaborative efforts of the libraries, Great Start Collaborative of Crawford, Oscoda, Ogemaw, Roscommon and Iosco counties, and Iosco Regional Educational Services Agency.

According to Denise Bearre, library director for Alcona County Library, the program is made available through donations. The expense is roughly $4,200 a year, depending on how many children register.

"That comes out to about $2 a book delivered. You can't get a book of this quality on Amazon for this price, and they are age-appropriate subject matter, so a baby would get a board book to fit their age and attention span. A four-year-old would get a soft cover book on topics which would interest them," Bearre said.

By having the books delivered to the child's home, Parton's program hopes parents and children spend time reading together, promoting literacy.

A committee consisting of members of Early Head Start, Great Start Collaborative, Alcona County, Curtis Township and Iosco Arenac District libraries called "Your Child Reads," promotes early literacy and raises funding for the program.

Donations are welcome. Check are payable to Iosco RESA, 27 N. Rempert Road, Tawas, Mich., 48763 with a notation for Imagination Library. Call, Phyllis Rhodes at (989) 362-3006 ext. 163, or Denise Bearre (989) 724-6796, for more information.

Scientists team up to track fish

By Max Johnston
Capital News Service

Biologists and scientists have teamed up to track fish across the Great Lakes using sound—a literal Great Lakes echo.

It's like the world's biggest game of Marco Polo, but with fish.

The Great Lakes Acoustic Telemetry Observation Systems (GLATOS) is a network of researchers sharing fish-tracking data from across the Great Lakes basin.

Acoustic telemetry tracks fish by surgically inserting a tracker into them before releasing them back into the water. As the fish travels, it emits an audible ping that can be picked up by markers placed in bodies of water across the region.

The problem for some researchers is that tracking a fish relies upon the placement of their markers, according to Chris Holbrook, GLATOS technical coordinator. He's based at the U.S. Geological Service's Hammond Bay Biological Station in Millersburg, Mich., near Lake Huron.

"The most general and popular method: you put out an individual receiver and tracker and you determine what fish were present at that point," Holbrook said.

The GLATOS system is different because of its range. In most cases, if a researcher releases a tagged fish that finds its way out of the range of that researcher's own receivers, that information would be lost. GLATOS has hundreds of stationary receivers placed throughout the Great Lakes. A researcher who is a member of GLATOS has access to data picked up by all receivers across the Great Lakes.

Tracking can be imprecise and affected by many variables, said Carl Ruetz, a researcher from Grand Valley State University's Annis Water Resources Institute who tracks lake sturgeon with sound. Ruetz is not a member of GLATOS.

"With our array, the only thing we can tell you is whether or not (a sturgeon) was picked up by a particu-

Forest tent caterpillar feeding is over, follow step to keep trees healthy

The forest tent caterpillar made life miserable for homeowners and woodlot owners across much of Michigan's northern Lower Peninsula this spring as it fed on oak, aspen and sugar maple trees. The good news is that caterpillar feeding has come to an end for this season.

Widespread outbreaks occur in Michigan every 10 to 15 years. Past outbreaks peaked in 1922, 1937, 1952, 1967, 1978, 1990, 2002 and 2010. While caterpillar activity statewide can remain high for up to five years, outbreaks in any one locale normally last for two or three years. Outbreaks decline suddenly once parasites and other natural enemies become active.

"Trees rarely die from forest tent caterpillar defoliation unless they've been seriously weakened by drought, late spring frost or other stressors," said Roger Mech, a forest health specialist with the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR). "Heavily defoliated trees will develop a second set of leaves a few weeks after being stripped. These new leaves are often smaller than normal."

Once caterpillar feeding stops, mass flights of forest tent caterpillar moths can occur in late June and early July. Adult moths do not feed. They will mate and die over the course of a few weeks.

Adult moths have a wingspan of around an inch, are buff-colored and have a broad brown band across the front wings. They are night fliers and often attracted to lights in large numbers.

The forest tent caterpillar is native to Michigan, where it has evolved with the state's forests over the centuries. Fortunately, natural controls also have evolved, helping to prevent widespread damage following outbreaks.

One insect in particular, commonly known as the 'friendly fly,' is an effective parasite that lays its eggs on forest tent caterpillar cocoons, preventing them from developing into adult moths.

"These large, slow-moving flies do not bite, although they can be a nuisance for a few weeks when their numbers are high," said Mech.

Forest tent caterpillars, abundant in the area this spring and early summer, have stopped feeding this year, but will come back every year for several years. Photo courtesy of Michigan DNR.

"Just remember, they're one of the good guys."

Homeowners with trees that have been heavily defoliated should make sure those trees receive at least one inch of water per week during the growing season. Applying a slow-release tree fertilizer in the fall also will help trees recover quickly and prepare them for any defoliation that might occur next summer.

Now that caterpillar feeding is over, spraying insecticides is not an effective method of control. When caterpillars are small, spraying Bt - a biological insecticide - on the leaves can help protect foliage without affecting natural enemies of the forest tent caterpillar.

Woodlot owners should focus on keeping their forest healthy by periodically removing trees that are dead or in poor condition. This increases the amount of sunlight available to remaining trees and reduces competition for water and nutrients.

A professional forester or consultant can help develop a management plan that will ensure your woodlot is healthy and thriving. Contact your local conservation district or extension office for a list of area foresters.

For more information on forest pests and diseases, visit www.michigan.gov/foresthealth.

The cyclamen plant is often given as a gift during the holidays, as it flowers beautifully during the cooler months. It naturally becomes dormant during the summer, and flowering ceases. Keep this plant out of full sun, as it prefers indirect light and cooler day temperatures.

Julie Stevens of Lincoln stands next to her family heirloom 1926 Ford Model T Stake truck. Her grandfather had one like it and when her father found this truck and got it running, he gave it to him. The last time the vehicle was titled was in 1953. The truck still has original spoke wheels and to fill the gas tank the seat must be lifted. It was the oldest vehicle at the Lincoln Lions Classic Car and Antique Show held last Saturday. Photos by Mary Weber.

How to stop unwanted junk mail and guard against mail fraud

Dear Savvy Senior,
My elderly father gets over 100 pieces of junk mail every week, and I just discovered that he's given away nearly $5,000 over the past few months to many of the solicitors that mail him this junk. Can you offer any tips on how can I stop this?

Irritated Son

Dear Irritated,
Millions of older Americans get bombarded with unwanted junk mail these days, including "mail fraud" schemes that you and your dad need to be particularly careful of. Here's are some tips that may help.

While junk mail comes in many different forms - credit card applications, sweepstakes entries, magazine offers, coupon mailers, donation requests, political fliers, catalogs and more - the most troublesome type is mail fraud, which comes from con artists who are only trying to take your money.

Mail fraud can be tricky to detect because there are many different types of schemes out there that may seem legitimate. Some of the most common mail scams targeting seniors today are phony sweepstakes, foreign lotteries, free prize or vacation scams, fake checks (see FakeChecks.org), donation requests from charities or government agencies that don't exist, get-rich chain letters, work-at-home schemes, inheritance and investment scams, and many more.

If your dad is getting any type of junk mail that is asking for money in exchange for free gifts or winnings, or if he's receiving checks that require him to wire money, you need to call the U.S. Postal Inspector Service at (877) 876-2455 and report it, and then throw it away.

Unfortunately, once a person gets on these mail fraud lists, also known as "suckers lists," it's very difficult to get off. That's because these criminals regularly trade and sell mailing lists of people who they believe to be susceptible to fraud, and they won't remove a name when you request it.

Knowing this, a good first step to help protect your dad is to alert him to the different kinds of mail fraud and what to watch for. The U.S. Postal Inspection Service can help you with this. They offer a list of the different mail fraud schemes at PostalInspectors.uspis.gov.

Another option is to see if your dad would be willing to let you sort through his mail before he opens it so you can weed out the junk. You may want to have the post office forward his mail directly to you to ensure this.

If your dad feels compelled to donate to certain charities, ask him to let you check them out first to make sure they're legitimate. You can do this at charity watchdog sites like CharityNavigator.org and Give.org.

While scam artists aren't likely to take your dad's name off their mailing lists, most legitimate mail-order businesses will. To do this, start with the Direct Marketing

Savvy Senior

Association, which offers a consumer opt-out service at DMAchoice.org. This won't eliminate all his junk mail, but it will reduce it. The opt-out service is $2 for 10 years if you register online, or $3 by mail.

Then, to put a stop to the credit card and insurance offers he gets, call the consumer credit reporting industry opt-out service at (888) 567-8688, and follow the au-lar receiver," Ruetz said. Detection "also depends on if it's a windy day. Is it stormy? Is there a lot of boat traffic? There are lots of things to consider."

If a signal from a tracked fish is picked up, the GLATOS database can provide specific information, like a timestamp on a fish's arrival and departure, that researchers couldn't get otherwise, said GLATOS Director Charles Krueger.

"They're able to get that date, the time and place, so it expands their receiver coverage well beyond the few receivers they might be able to purchase," said Krueger, a professor of aquatic ecology and conservation at Michigan State University.

Holbrook said that what distinguishes GLATOS are its resources and dense network of receivers.

"We're essentially using the receivers in a way that's analogous to GPS satellites," Holbrook said. "If you have a grid of receivers that are close together enough that one signal is detected on multiple receivers, you can use the timing of that detection to get a precise position on that fish."

The idea of a data network for tracking fish stemmed from a 2001 project tracking walleye in Lake Erie, Krueger explained. He and his team had difficulty tracking walleye that move long distances across multiple research jurisdictions. They brainstormed a way to track fish across the Great Lakes.

"We actually envisioned we could wire Lake Erie and find out where the walleyes went," Krueger said. "We had never conceived of being able to do something like that. Now we have the technology to do it."

Membership to GLATOS is free and open to anyone working on an acoustic telemetry project in the Great Lakes. In return, GLATOS asks members to upload their tag detection data to the database on its website for other researchers to track their own fish, Holbrook said.

"The database really just streamlines that whole process," Holbrook said.

While static trackers are in use now, Holbrook said GLATOS is trying to develop mobile methods of tracking.

The biggest development in mobile tracking has been the "robofish" Gliding Robot ACE, or GRACE, developed by Xiaobo Tan, director of the smart microsystems lab at Michigan State.

The robofish is an about-a-yard long, green fish lookalike outfitted with fins and a tail. An operator pumps water in and out of GRACE to ascend and descend, while shifting water around the hull to glide through water. GRACE is essentially a mobile receiver and the goal is to have a "sea" of robofish to track fish in and across any body of water, Tan said.

"It will allow robots to do underwater communication, between each other or between the robot and the base station," Tan said.

Holbrook said GRACE is the future of fish tracking. "The first big goal for GRACE is to put the receiver on and make it a mobile platform," Holbrook said. "That is advancing the field as a whole because now we don't have to guess where a fish could be."

Wild blackberries for the troops

Demand for Jam Offers Chance for Children to Practice Patriotism and Earn Money

August 30, 1917 ~ Washington, D. C., AUP. 29—Wild blackberries picked by children will help the Army and Navy to get the eleven million pounds of blackberry jam they must have. In view of the shortage of cultivated blackberries, the United States Department of Agriculture urges the women and girls and boys to gather all the wild blackberries they can find, to supply commercial canning establishments.

Blackberry jam is particularly desirable because it has medicinal qualities which counteract certain intestinal troubles, in addition to its welcome place in the diet as a sweet.

The wild fruit is not as pulpy and is likely to be more seedy than the cultivated varieties, but there is an abundance in many of the Northern States. The difficulty of getting help on a commercial scale has prevented the gathering of the wild berries, but if the children can be enlisted to do their patriotic part, it will give the packers a chance to supply what the military authorities need. It is also pointed out that at the prevailing prices they may get good money return for their time and labor.

In each community some local grocer should be able to learn the name of a manufacturer who may be willing to buy the berries. In New York, for example, the canneries are so numerous throughout the State that little trouble should be experienced in finding a market

Fine entertainment

August 30, 1917 ~ High praise is heard of the work done by Miss Irene VanHorn at the dramatic recital given by her Friday evening for the benefit of the Women's Civic League. It is said that the young lady is fitting herself to go on the Chautauqua platform and her work on this occasion would indicate that she is bound to attain a high degree of success as a reader and impersonator.

The musical numbers by home talent were furnished by Miss Edith Sanborn and J. E. Yockey, with Miss Sadie Yockey as pianist.

John N. Haley, Champion Wrestler of Four U. S. Companies

August 30, 1917 ~ Arthur Kelly received the following letter from John N. Haley, son of Geo. Haley, who is with Co. A. of the North Dakota Infantry.

Well Art, you will no doubt be surprised to hear from me, but I have I been pretty busy lately. Well Art, how is old Harrisville any how? I would like to come home but we leave soon for California to put the finishing touch on our training.

I am doing some wrestling Art. There are seven hundred men in this bunch and I have not been thrown yet. In my class I have the championship of four companies—A., F., K. and H. We have some fine boys here that are going to spend Christmas with the Kaiser and I am going to be the first one served. We all have a three day pass now and then we make a seven day hike. Then I think we leave.

How is Dad Beaver? Tell him hello for me. We drill from five to seven hours a day, play poker, shoot crap and several other amusements.

Well Art, I will close. Tell all the boys hello for me. When I come back, if I do, I'll have some souvenirs of Germany.

Yours as ever,
John D. Haley.

StarWatch By Gary Becker - The Other Einstein: Too Much Speculation

Reading the jacket reviews for Marie Benedicts, The Other Einstein, Sourcebooks Landmarks, 2016, you get the impression that this work may be truly a significant contribution to the history of science. Its not! Benedict traces the university life of Mileva Maric and her romantic relationship with classmate, Albert Einstein, in a mainly fictional account. Maric was a mathematics and physics major attending Zurich's (Switzerland) Polytechnic, who finished her coursework, but failed to pass one of the mathematics components of her exams. Sadly, she never graduated. I think Benedict provides an excellent portrayal of the mental turbulence surrounding an intelligent and forward-thinking woman during the early 20th century, who is cloistered by a male-dominated discipline and society. Maric was against marriage, knowing full well that it would ruin her scientific aspirations and relegate her to being caretaker of her husband and their children. As the narrative proceeds, the stalwart Maric slowly succumbs to the amorous attentions that Albert is displaying. They eventually consummate their relationship, with Mileva becoming pregnant as a result. Retreating to her family in Serbia, she gives birth to Lieserl in early 1902, but Albert seems to be indifferent to Milevas suffering. The infant dies, possibly of scarlet fever, in September of 1903, but before that, she returns without Lieserl to Bern where Albert is working in the Swiss patent office. He and Mileva marry in January 1903. As the book continues, it becomes more fantasy than historical fiction. Benedict allows Albert to take the rap for Mileva not graduating from the Polytechnic. Later, in an aha moment, Mileva, not Albert, is responsible for conceiving some of the major concepts of special relativity, such as time dilation. Benedict also has Mileva playing a pivotal role in Einsteins annus mirabilis (miracle year 1905) where Albert publishes four groundbreaking papers, including his treatise on special relativity. Albert fails to include Milevas name as a co-author of special relativity or cite her as a contributor in the other manuscripts because she had not graduated from the Polytechnic. Here the facts are simply lacking. As time passes, Albert becomes more distant and is distracted by other women (true), but he also becomes physically abusive toward Mileva. Her only recourse is separation (1914) and divorce (1919). To Benedicts credit, she does admit that Certainly, speculation exists in The Other Einstein the book is, first and foremost, fiction, but in this era of fake news, misinterpretations, and bias tone, why make up a story which diminishes one of the great minds and personalities of the 20th century? Mileva Maric and The Other Einstein would make a superb focal point in a womens study course, if only everyone just stuck to the facts. www.astronomy.org

Moments In Time

By The History Channel

- On Sept. 13, 1814, Francis Scott Key pens a poem that is later set to music and in 1931 becomes America's national anthem, "The Star-Spangled Banner." The poem, originally titled "The Defence of Fort McHenry," was written after Key witnessed the Maryland fort being bombarded by the British during the War of 1812.
  - On Sept. 15, 1858, the new Overland Mail Company sends out its first two stages, inaugurating government mail service to the western U.S. In 1857, Congress had authorized a $600,000 yearly subsidy for whatever company could transport the mail twice a week from St. Louis to San Francisco in less than 25 days.
  - On Sept. 17, 1923, a fire threatening the University of California at Berkeley kills two people and destroys nearly 1,000 houses, including half of the fraternity and sorority houses. The National Guard was quickly called in to stop the looting.

Trying to fire bad VA employees

The Department of Veterans Affairs doesn't typically air its dirty laundry in public, but a recent press release included the headline "MSPB forces VA to take back fired official" -- just when we thought they were able to unload bad employees.

In April 2017, the director of a VA medical center was demoted. The center kept running out of critical supplies because it had no inventory system, and the surgical supplies they did have were frequently kept in dirty storage areas. The VA Office of the Inspector General report used the phrase "the highest level of chaos." In three years there had been over 190 reports of compromised patient safety. Multiple serious surgeries had to be canceled due to lack of equipment. In short, the place was a mess. The VA demoted the medical director within hours.

speeds the process of getting rid of rotten employees.

Enter the VAOIG, which found another reason to fire the guy: As part of yet another investigation of this employee, it discovered he had been sending VA emails to his personal accounts as well as to his wife, emails that contained sensitive personnel info as far back as 2012. He refused to give her email address, claiming spousal privilege (which didn't stop the VAOIG from finding it, of course). The guy was fired.

One day later, the Merit Systems Protection Board issued a stay order: The VA couldn't fire the guy until the MSPB waded through his claim of a wrongful termination. The former director is back at work, on the payroll, but in a role that keeps him away from patient care. The Office of Special Counsel will assess the information in light of the act the president signed in June.

A Sporting View

By Mark Vasto

No more evel empire

As I sit here burning the retinas out of my eyes trying to see the total eclipse occur (if only that darn cloud would move out of the way), my mind shifts to thoughts of Evel Knievel.

Millennials do not know the man, and if any remember some of his cameos on assorted reality TV or talk shows, they saw a hobbling old man with a cane. Well, guess what, kids? That cane was filled with Wild Turkey 101. That's Evel Knievel, a guy who used to fling himself on a motorcycle over stadiums for our amusement. You know ... a real role model.

I'm thinking about this as I watch the folks who filled the Southern Illinois Saluki's stadium, with every person rooting for the same thing -- the complete blotting out of the Sun from our skies. It shows us our place in the universe.

Well, guess what? Evel was universally beloved, or at least looked upon with a high level of bemusement. The guy would, for little or no apparent reason, jump his motorcycle over long lines of cars and through hoops of fire. He was a true "daredevil" in every sense of the word. Sometimes he would complete the jump, and people would applaud. Most other times, he would crash in spectacular fashion and the crowd would go completely berserk. He is the guy that invented the term "broke every bone in his body."

But then came Snake Canyon and the "Rocket Cycle." See, he was going to jump a canyon, but what happened was that he flew halfway across said canyon -- clearly not going to make it -- and as luck would have it, his bike "malfunctioned" and shot out his parachutes, and the world watched as Evel floated around the canyon and into obscurity. It was over for him. To this day he doesn't exist in your spell check, which just shows you how fickle fame can be.

Back in Atlantic City, New Jersey, I find the city under siege in the form of an "annual air show." Wave after wave of fighter planes fly sorties over the boardwalk, and PTSD-inducing jets are buzzing the famed resort's tall buildings. Throngs of people are looking up in awe, some in fear. I scan the crowd. Some look like they're having an adrenaline rush because they keep saying how dangerous every maneuver was, as if they wanted to see an air disaster. (Others contend it was Donald Trump's show of force to this former rebel enclave, perhaps a message to the Seminoles who were dismantling the Trump Taj Mahal.)

Some fans attend baseball games hoping to see nobody do anything, because that's "perfect." And then there are those who go to see hockey players fight, race-car drivers crash, quarterbacks get their legs cracked in half, and motorcyclists plunge into deep ravines filled with sharks. As for me, I prefer the sun to not be blocked by the moon, that our Air Force stays strong, motorcyclists to obey the rules of the road, but more than anything, hope to see most of next year's battles on the field of play only.

Did you know?

Of the 29 projects it studied for its 2017 "Cost vs. Value Report," Remodeling magazine found that the average payback in resale value was 64.3 cents. The lone project in the 2017 report to return a higher value than its cost was the installation of loose-fill insulation in an attic, which provided a return of 107.7 percent. Homeowners who replaced an existing entry door with a 20-gauge steel unit recouped 90.7 percent of their investment at resale, placing that project second on the list. What helps homeowners who finance such projects recoup their associated costs is the relatively low sticker price of the projects, which both rank among the five least expensive projects examined in the 2017 report. But a recovering real estate market has helped homeowners recoup more of their investments on some expensive projects as well. For example, the 2017 report saw the biggest year-over-year percentage increases in value on expensive projects like upscale bathroom remodels, upscale master suites, two-story additions, grand entrance installations, and family room additions. The increase in value on those projects ranged from 5.6 percent to 7.4 percent from a year earlier. FH178235
