Reading programs help parents, students avoid the summer "slide"

By Mary Weber

Staff Writer

"You can find magic where ever you look. Sit back, relax all you need is a book."

~ Dr. Seuss

For kids, summer is a time to learn how to ride a bike, take trips to the beach and indulge in a refreshing ice cream cone. It's also a great time for children to discover new people, places, hobbies or take wild adventures through the joy of reading.

In Alcona County, there are two children's summer reading programs already underway. The Alcona County Library summer reading program, "Libraries Rock," is a free program offering prizes to pre-readers through the age of 18.

Alcona Elementary school is also offering a summer reading program, but only for students entering kindergarten or the first grade.

The elementary school's program is a way of preparing those two grades for the full implementation of a relatively new law in Michigan stating that a child must be able to read at grade level by the end of third grade.

The law came into effect in Michigan in 2016 with the understanding the law would be a gradual process. "It impacts children from kindergarten through third grade. Parents play a huge part in this law. The intention is for teachers and parents to work together to improve reading achievements of Michigan children," said Valerie Hanekow, Title One teacher at Alcona Elementary.

"The obligation of the schools is to offer extra reading support for students who are not at reading level. The obligation for the parent is they be a part of this process. Any child who is a year or more behind in reading at the end of the third grade can and may be retained at the third-grade level," she said.

It is the second year for the elementary summer reading program. It began when a grant was awarded to the

Longtime resident celebrates a life well lived

By Cheryl Peterson

Editor

Enjoying summer in Harrisville is the annual goal for a lifelong resident who has contributed her time and attention to numerous aspects of the community for more than 50 years.

Walking the tree-lined streets through quiet neighborhoods in Harrisville is one of Marlene Conklin's favorite pastimes. One of her passions, creating and sharing art, has benefited the city for 50 years and then some.

She was born in Black River, one of seven children of Wilson and Laura Teeple. Her dad was a mail carrier for the U.S. Postal Service and worked out of Black River. When that office was temporarily closed, the family moved to the Teeple farm. He was hired to work in Mikado for the postal service and the family eventually moved to Mikado and rented from the Kahn family.

Marlene grew up in Mikado. She remembered walking to the "old ball diamond" and to the three-room school (where the hall is located today) which had a full basement. She attended Oscoda Area Schools and graduated in 1950.

"I loved school. I loved the teachers. I did very well without half trying. I loved everything about it," Marlene said. "I always wanted to go to art school. I had a natural talent - my dad did too. I knew my life was going to be full of art."

A pleasant encounter one summer evening at the bowling alley in Harrisville helped

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor,
 Yes, Alcona County! Surely for many reasons a precious segment of Michigan's sunrise side.
 I'm not a year-round, permanent resident, rather am a southern Michigan resident who, with brother and sister, has been "goin' north" since 1954.
 And yes, our trips north all these years always ending up in our paradise in Alcona County had many memories.

Our Dad would tell us boys and girls, "Hey, if you're not behaving, you're not goin' north."
 And yes, Dad had a sense of humor! When we reached ole Alabaster he would say with a grin, "well we've reached Alawasterd!"
 Our memories included that special grocery store in Black River, the red painted log cabin bakery in Ossineke where Dad always stopped to get our homemade bread.

Oh yes, Paul Bunyan's Babe the Blue Ox in its original location and later taking our own kids to the Dinosaur Gardens in Ossineke. And yes, all that Negwegon State Park has to offer everyone.
 God Bless you, Alcona County and all your people who live in one of God's best places!

school which supplied enough summer books for kindergartners last year. When school resumed last September, those students brought their books back and another grant was applied for. This doubled the number of books allowing students from first grade to be included in the program.

The hope is next year a third grant will give them enough books so that kindergarten through second grade students can take advantage of taking 15 to 20 books home to read in the summer.

For students to become involved in the elementary program parents attended an informational meeting which explained the law, talked about the "summer slide," where students without access to books fall farther and farther behind and gave the parents tools to help their young readers.

The library program, which has been going on for many years, is a little easier to join for all readers and pre-readers by going to any branch of the Alcona County Library and signing up. Sign up can be done anytime throughout the summer until the program ends. Reading times are then logged, whether the child is read to or reads alone.

Tickets for readers to enter prize buckets are given after 10 and 20 hours of reading time until the end of summer reading party where drawings for those prizes are held on August 10.

"The reading program opened last week and already we have 93 readers who have joined just at the Harrisville branch, but there are other readers who have joined through the other three branches," said Denise Bearre, director of the Alcona County Library.

She explained all the prizes have been donated from anonymous donors and there are about 12 bikes which readers can try to win, or they can choose to put their tickets in other buckets offering scooters, Bluetooth speakers, tablets, Lego and Duplo sets, blocks and more.

While the elementary program is not offering such grand prizes, what it does offer to parents is some great information on how to encourage reading with a young reader and how to build vocabulary and comprehension while reading. The goal is by the time the child returns to

Alcona graduate goes after military career during high school

By Mary Weber
Staff Writer

Graduating high school students have a variety of options available to continue their education or point them on the right path for personal success. There are so many options that quite often the decisions can be overwhelming for a student entering their junior and senior years of high school.

One 2018 Alcona High School graduate, however, made a decision nearly two years ago which put him on track to complete nearly year and a half of military service prior to graduation and he hasn't regretted his decision for a second.

ceived his diploma he was off again for 14 weeks of National Guard Advanced Individual Training (AIT) in Virginia. He will return in September and will have a few more options available to him than when he left -- either seek employment in Alcona County, accept a job waiting for him downstate or, possibly, seek active duty with the National Guard.

The Army National Guard is an element of the U.S. military that serves both community and country. The Guard responds to domestic emergencies, overseas combat missions, counterdrug efforts, reconstruction missions and more. Any state

Jacob Robbins, a 2018 Alcona graduate, has a year and a half of military training through the National Guard's Recruitment Sustainment Program. He is now in Virginia working on his advanced individual training. Courtesy photo.

"It teaches responsibility, respect, and leadership skills. I've learned about taking on different roles and time management. It gives me a lot of pride because of what I'm working towards,"

Jacob Robbins,
Class of 2018

Jacob Robbins, an average student with above average ambition, made the decision to join the Army National Guard's Recruit Sustainment Program in December of 2016. Through this program Jacob attended drills which were held one weekend per month beginning in January his junior year.

During summer break of 2017, while many of his peers worked part time jobs or spent time having fun, Jacob was in basic combat training.

"This is a great program. What I did was a split option where you attend drills during the school year and after your junior year attend basic training. There really isn't a title that comes after basic training, but you are held to a higher standard," Jacob said.

During his senior year at Alcona High School, Jacob continued his military service by attending drills one weekend a month.

Not long after Jacob re-governor or the President of the United States can call on the Guard in a moment's notice. Guard soldiers hold civilian jobs or attend college while maintaining their military training part time. Their primary area of operation is their home state, although training is often a distance away from home.

Jacob said he learned about the Recruit Sustainment Program through a National Guard recruiter who visited the school. His grandfather, Doug Dunn, was in the National Guard which appealed to Jacob and helped to make his decision.

Jacob recommended this avenue to other high school students as he feels a lot of pride in serving his country and thinks they would too. "I know I am serving for a good cause and people look up to those serving in the military. This also allows many more opportunities and job openings, plus I receive military benefits and a guaranteed monthly income," Jacob said.

He said the drills and basic training were not easy and he missed friends, family and his dog, Remington, which was a Christmas gift nine years ago. "It wasn't too bad. I just wasn't used to being away. I've lived my whole life in Alcona County, it was a big change, but they give you all you need to succeed in the program. They set it up for your success and build you up to where you need to be.

Jacob signed up for an eight-year commitment to the National Guard. His mother, DaNina Griffin, said she was hoping it wouldn't have been for so long but is proud of her

SENIOR LIFESTYLES

What's the difference between Alzheimer's and dementia?

Dear Savvy Senior,
 What's the difference between Alzheimer's disease and dementia? My aunt has dementia, but they don't know if she has Alzheimer's disease, which is very confusing to me.

Trying To Understand

Dear Trying,
 Many people use the words "Alzheimer's disease" and "dementia" interchangeably, but they are not the same thing. In fact, you can have a form of dementia that is completely unrelated to Alzheimer's disease.

Dementia is a general term for a set of symptoms that includes memory loss, impaired communication skills, a decline in reasoning and changes in behavior. It most commonly strikes elderly people and used to be referred to as senility.

Alzheimer's disease is a specific illness that is the most common cause of dementia. Though many diseases can cause dementia, Alzheimer's - which affects 5.7 million Americans today - accounts for 60 to 80 percent of dementia cases, which is why you often hear the terms used interchangeably.

But there are many other conditions that can cause symptoms of dementia like vascular dementia, which is the second most common cause, accounting for about 10 percent of dementia cases. Vascular dementia is caused by a stroke or poor blood flow to the brain.

Other degenerative disorders that can cause dementia include Lewy body dementia, Parkinson's disease, Frontotemporal dementia, Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease, Chronic Traumatic Encephalopathy (CTE), Hunting-ton's disease and Korsakoff Syndrome. Some patients may also have more than one form of dementia known as mixed dementia.

Dementia is caused by damage to brain cells, but the symptoms can vary depending on the cause. In the case of Alzheimer's disease, protein fragments or plaques that accumulate in the space between nerve cells and twisted tangles of another protein that build up inside cells cause the damage.

In Alzheimer's disease, dementia gets progressively worse to the point where patients cannot carry out daily activities and cannot speak, respond to their environment, swallow or walk. Although some treatments may temporarily ease symptoms, the downward progression of disease continues and it is not curable.

But some forms of dementia are reversible, which is why it's important to be evaluated by a physician early on. Vitamin deficiencies, thyroid problems, brain tumors, depression, excessive alcohol use, medication side effects and certain infectious diseases can cause reversible forms of dementia.

Another treatable form of dementia is a condition known as normal pressure hydrocephalus, which is caused by a buildup of cerebrospinal fluid in the brain that can be relieved by surgically implanting a shunt to drain off excess fluid. This type of dementia is often preceded or accompanied by difficulty walking and incontinence.

son. Jacob is the youngest of a blended family of five sisters and three brothers.

DaNina said she saw little difference between the boy who went off to basic training and the man who returned to begin his senior year, "He spent his summer vacation last year in basic combat training. To me, just graduating from high school and already having a year and a half (invested) in the military, takes dedication as a young adult." She explained Jacob was always a respectful, hard-working, good kid and she wasn't surprised he chose this path.

Craig Johnston, local farmer and Alcona County Commissioner, agreed with Jacob's mother, saying Jacob was a very hard worker and had worked for him quite a lot on his farm and other local farms. "Jacob has a great heart and has always cared about others more than he does himself. He's considerate, compassionate and very dependable. I've never seen him in a bad mood or upset.

"He may not have been the strongest kid, but he always had a good work ethic and could lift bales way heavier than he was. He is someone who will probably always do the right thing and would help anyone. This will be a good fit for him, I'm proud of him. I think we all are," Johnston said.

Jacob said he may possibly want to make a career out of being in the Guard and become a recruiter to explain programs like this to interested high school students. He is excited about his future and looks forward to whatever it holds for him.

American Life In Poetry

By Ted Kooser

U.S. Poet Laureate, 2004-2006

Nancy Willard, who died in February, was one of my favorite poets, with an enviable gift for inventive description. She published poetry, fiction, essays and children's books, one of which, A Visit to William Blake's Inn, was a winner of the prestigious Newbery Award. For those of you who don't have time to read our archive at www.americanlifeinpoetry.org, here's a poem we used with her permission several years ago.

The Vanity of the Dragonfly

The dragonfly at rest on the doorbell — too weak to ring and glad of it, but well mannered and cautious, thinking it best to observe us quietly before flying in, and who knows if he will find the way out? Cautious of traps, this one. A winged cross, plain, the body straight as a thermometer, the old glass kind that could kill us with mercury if our teeth did not respect its brittle body. Slim as an eel but a solitary glider, a pilot without bombs or weapons, and wings clear and small as a wish to see over our heads, to see the whole picture. And when our gaze grazes over it and moves on, the dragonfly changes its clothes, sheds its old skin, shriveled like laundry and steps forth, polished black, with two circles buttoned like epaulettes taking the last space at the edge of its eyes.

American Life in Poetry is made possible by The Poetry Foundation (www.poetryfoundation.org), publisher of Poetry magazine.

bring her future into view. She was waiting for someone else when in walked Everett John "Jack" Conklin. "He was really friendly and always happy," Marlene said. They chatted for awhile and the next day he showed up at Big Paw Resort where Marlene worked. When she took a break, they talked some more.

Jack was the son of Everett Conklin and Adelaide Vivian Douglas. "He liked visiting my family. He was so ready to settle down. I was too. I never thought I'd do anything else," Marlene said. They married in 1951 and a year later their first child, Jaqueline, was born. Jack worked for EJ Etkin & Company – the construction company that was building Wurtsmith Air Force Base – as a curb and gutter inspector. Eventually, he worked in a civil service position as a bookkeeper in supply and then became the deputy finance officer, which, according to Marlene, was a stressful job.

"I knew he was unhappy," Marlene said. After they discussed the situation, Jack decided to change career paths. He became a mail carrier for the U.S. Postal Service working in Harrisville. During that time, two more additions joined the family – Barbara Ellen was born in 1954 and Patricia Jean was born in 1957.

Because of his job, Jack met and talked with a lot of people in the community and often introduced Marlene to people he thought she would like. One introduction turned into a lifelong friendship. "Jack introduced me to Kelly Kruttlin – she has been my friend ever since," she said.

Friendly chats eventually became a Wednesday morning coffee group which turned into a Lady Lions group in 1966. Marlene explained that all the husbands of the women in the coffee group were members of the Harrisville Lions Club, so forming a ladies group seemed logical. She served as president for two years.

"We had garage sales and all kinds of money making ideas... Around that same time Jackie was taking art classes from Bruce Hartman (of Harrisville). KiAnn (Kelly's daughter) was taking them too," Marlene said. "He was interested in getting more kids involved (in art programs in the summer). So, we decided to advertise (art classes for kids) and see who would come."

The art event was held at the Harrisville Harbor on the first part of August. "It was cold. Even in the first of August. Nancy Cook and I sold sloppy joes," Marlene said. "We decided to hold the next one at the courthouse lawn."

They did and, the Harrisville Arts and Craft Show was born. Official formation of the Harrisville Arts Council was not far behind.

Initially, the group designed the show in a circle and the informal event grew each year. She remembered Jim Elmer, Jim Kelly, Ed Schroder, and Jack Foster who helped put the event on each year. "Those guys stuck with me for years," Marlene said. "They were the nicest guys. Good guys. They put up the tent, marked the show area with flour (where each booth would be) ... the city was good too."

Eventually, the art show grew, and some changes were made to accommodate the popular event. Her son-in-law, Mike Drewett, was the head civil engineer at Wurtsmith Air Force Base and "he wanted to set up a plan, so he sent his survey crew up and they designed a plan that was used for more than 30 years," she said. For many years he sent a crew from the base to help set up the event.

The burgeoning event needed more help. According to Marlene, the Lady Lions group helped with paperwork for show applicants, the purchase of a computer, opening of a bank account and articles of incorporation, drawn up by James Cook, an attorney at the time. "We had to collect sales tax from the artists," Marlene said. "It was a pain in the butt... because we had gotten so big the state wanted its share."

She was president of the Harrisville Arts Council for 10 or more years, and she enjoyed it even though it turned into a year-round project. "I had all of my friends and family involved... It was over 40 years that I was a member... It was perfect. I loved Harrisville. The money that was brought into the community – that was the best part. It was great to help local youth activities. We very seldom said 'no.'"

Jack passed away in 1981. After his death, Marlene decided to downsize from the large home where they raised their family. In 1982 she purchased a cabin west of Lincoln in which she spends winters in the woods and spends summers in Harrisville. "Last year was the first in my life where I have a mail carrier who I wasn't related too. My dad was my first mail carrier, then Jack and then my niece, Kay Lovelace, delivered my mail."

Marlene was also involved in other areas of the community. She was a member of the Alpena Savings Bank Board of Directors, the Alcona Health Center Board of Directors and was involved with a couple of other groups as well. She has taken many art classes over the years and was involved in the forming of the long-running annual Antiques and Collectibles Show, which disbanded last year after more than 25 years.

"I decided in the late 1980s that I was flung all over the place and I quit everything but the arts council," Marlene said. "At one time I knew more people/artists (from out of town) than people living in the city. It gave me something to do that I enjoyed. I loved opening the letters and seeing the pictures of the art."

Art was not Marlene's only passion. She also enjoyed athletic pursuits. She played in a lady's softball league. "I was a catcher. I didn't last long at that... I helped form the girls softball team – Harrisville Honey's – my kids were involved in that. I was raised at the ball field. My dad played and so did my brothers.”

 She also enjoyed running and playing golf with her best friend, Kelly. Her golf clubs were a hand-me-down wood handled set from a lady Jack met in town who thought they might fit her. “We took golf classes together and I golfed forever after that,” Marlene said. “I helped start three leagues... sometimes I golfed three times a week.”
 Marlene’s physical pursuits were curtailed after a breast cancer diagnosis came in 2011. Walking two miles or so a day help keeps her fit and she loves sewing. “I’ve sewed a lot over the years. I’ve made quilts, dresses — including one of her daughter’s wedding dress and dresses for the bride’s maids, my children’s clothes, my clothes... When you get done you’ve got something that no one else has got,” she said.

 A quiet, uncomplicated life is Marlene’s pursuit at this point. She has traveled to England, Ireland and Scotland to follow her roots, been involved in and given back to a community she loves and enjoys keeping in touch with her family made up of seven grandchildren with careers in engineering, law and business and four great-grandchildren, the newest of which was born in Bristol, England.
 “You name it, I’ve done it. I don’t mind staying here... I really don’t mind it at all.”

school they are as strong or stronger readers than when they left, avoiding the summer slide backwards.
 Haneckow explained that the “summer slide effect” has been around for many years. Slide studies have shown children without access to books, which tends to go hand-in-hand with many low-income families, show the students dropping in reading levels significantly from the time they leave school in June until they return in late August.
 Students without access to books, whose levels have decreased have a much harder time trying to keep up with the rest of the class. With each summer they continue to fall farther and farther behind and the gap widens.
 “By the time children leave the third grade, some can be as much as a grade and a half or more behind the other students. It isn’t an issue with the child learning, they are learning throughout the school year. The problem is the slide backwards during the summer months which creates a gap nearly impossible to close,” Haneckow said.
 She explained children without access to books are not going to the library, they have no one reading to them or showing interest in books. They are also not attending museums, summer camps, going on vacations or to day care settings which encourage reading or gives experiences to build connections to what the child is reading.

 Haneckow said an interesting thing found in the slide studies, however, is that low-income children who have access to books increase in knowledge during the summer slightly above high-income children with access to books.
 The parents are asked to commit 15 to 20 minutes per day reading with their child and are given a tool kit containing useful information, book mark reminders of skills and creative ways to help children read, comprehension and vocabulary strategies, coloring pages for the reader and reward stickers.
 Once parents have attended the meeting and agreed to the commitment to read, the children can pick which books they would enjoy taking home for the summer. The books range in a variety of reading levels and genres including adventures, animal stories, cookbooks, joke books and more. There are also “We Both Read” books which have one page with more difficult text for the adult to read and simpler text on the next page for the child to read.
 Haneckow asked parents to support their young readers even if they bring home a book which is too advanced or doesn’t challenge them enough, to keep an open mind, because it is a topic which interests their child. She cautioned parents not to count bedtime reading as part of the program, as that is not a time conducive to active learning but is a great way to snuggle with their child before they sleep.

 “Even if they read the same book, over and over again, let that happen, support them, read with them, give them whatever support they need. Spending 15 minutes reading with your child every day is more beneficial than any time a teacher can spend with them at school,” Haneckow said.
 A midsummer reunion party is planned for the elementary students in the program and students are encouraged to bring the books they got in June to the party and pick out 15 to 20 new books to take home until school starts in August.
 Bearre said reading is reading and it doesn’t matter where the book comes from. She invited children who are in the elementary school program to use those books and reading hours as part of the library’s summer reading program requirement to enter for prizes, so long as the child is signed up at the library.

Lions club officers installed Monday

July 1, 1943 ~ A Ladies night dinner and dance was held at Alcona Beach by the Harrisville Lions Club Monday evening with over eighty members, wives and friends present. Program committee chairman George Freer presided, following the regular business meeting conducted by vice-president Viggo Klein.

A welcome was extended to all by Mayor Curtis, a member of the Club.

Officers for the ensuing year were officially installed by District Governor James Mugan of Port Huron.

Directors are Casper Blumer, Jack Haley, Judge

Herman Dehnke, and Carl Steadman.

District Governor Mugan gave an interesting talk to the group. He paid tribute to Milo N. Johnson, retiring president of the club and complimented them on the splendid achievements made during the past year. These included sponsoring presented Mr. Johnson, acceptance made by Mrs. Johnson in his absence from town on business. He stressed the importance of the Youth

Committee and urged that they help provide wholesome entertainment for our boys and girls.

Attendance awards from the International office of Lions Clubs were presented to Viggo Klein, John Frechette, Carter Miller, Kenneth Noyes and George Freer.

Chairman Freer outlined the activities of the Club during the past year. These included sponsoring a U.S.O. Drive, Scrap Metal Drive, Fall

Victory Festival, Christmas party for the boys. Minstrel Show, netting $140, Red Cross Bingo Party, Purchase of $5,300 in war bonds during the 2nd War Loan Drive in April, promotion of Victory Gardens, U.S.O. Bingo Benefit Party, netting $261, and a Soldiers Honor Roll, now being erected on the Courthouse Park. Ten new members were enrolled during the year.

Coast Guard, stationed out of New York, who visited here this week. Guests from the Alpena Club were Dr. and Mrs. T. R. Bell Mr. and Mrs. Edward Nowack and Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Lamp.

News of the boys in service

July 1, 1943 ~ PFC Melvin DeMott, writes his sister, Mrs. R. E. Middleton of Glennie, from North Africa:

May 1, 1943.

Dear Sis and Family:

Just a few lines to let you know I'm just fine and hope this letter finds you all the same. Well, I am now in North Africa, and what a place! I never thought it could be what it is, but guess it is. The gardens and the rest of the land is beautiful. I told mom about the animals here and you can read her letter and she read yours because there isn't much room to write on this paper.

Now, about the camp. At the present time we are in 4x6 tents, two men to a tent. We sleep on the ground and it's been quite rainy here all day.

Now the food. The food is fine so far and I hope it stays that way for awhile anyway.

I told Mom something about the people here and I will tell you some more. The women here wear masks over their face. All you can see is their eyes. The rest of the face is all covered and the men all wear skirts which are very badly worn out. They are all very poorly dressed. The clothes that the Bums back there would throw away is a Sunday suit here, and I am not stretching the truth any either.

There isn't much food for the people that live here. They are very poorly fed, so I hear, and it surely looks like to see them. The cars here are very few. The taxis are bicycles with a two wheel trailer with one seat in it.

Well, guess I will close. Write soon.

Love, Mel

Weather Trivia

Can a rainbow appear at night?

Answer: Yes. When the moon is extremely bright, it can produce a rainbow.

www.WhatsOurWeather.com

StarWatch By Gary Becker - Satellite of Hard Knocks - The Moon

The moon's gossamer appearance bathed in ghostly earthshine when a razor crescent; Luna's changing phases that are easy to discern; its rapid movement from night to night as it approaches and sometimes occults bright stars and planets; its sun like illumination under the photographic lens; and its ability to hide in the shadows of the Earth or court the sun to the exhilaration of the visual senses during a lunar or a solar eclipse, make it a joy to observe. The airless, nearly waterless moon has been with us almost since Earth's formation. The early solar system was a rough and tumble place, laced with debris both large and small as the planets accreted. Some satellites undoubtedly formed in this leftover material orbiting around their parent planets. Others were captured, like the small moons of the outer giant planets and Mars, but our moon's origin was probably different. Most planetary astronomers believe that a Mars-sized object sideswiped Earth, drawing material from our primordial crust and spraying it into space. Some of this matter went into orbit around the Earth and rapidly coalesced to form the moon. Other debris continued to bombard Luna, creating a completely crater saturated surface which today is called the highlands. Watch the moon as it blossoms this week towards its full phase. Other locales of the moon's nearside are darker and more circular in nature, indicating another chaotic period of lunar history. Protoplanets thrown inward by the outer planets or perhaps a major breakup of the asteroid belt pummeled the moon's surface about 3.85 billion years ago, gouging from its surface huge basins that were eventually inundated with lava gushing from its depths. This basaltic rock had a slightly different composition, and therefore, a different reflectivity. Today, we observe the basins called maria as the darker lowlands of Luna's surface. They are dated to about 3-3.5 billion years of age. So, as you look at the moon this week, consider the fact that you are witnessing a chronological palette of events, billions of years in the making and right in front of your eyes. www.astronomy.org

Shell-shaped watch holder

Shell-shaped decorative objects were very popular during the 19th century. There were trinket boxes covered in tiny shells, counter bells made with several mother-of-pearl shells put together into a container, or nautilus shells used as part of cleverly shaped lamps that held a special light bulb. Some large conch shells were kept whole as decorations, often with the addition of a cameo carved into part of the shell. Glassmakers adapted the shell shape to their medium, and during the late 1800s, many "shells" were made of colored glass that was decorated with enamel paint or held in elaborate metal frames.

This unusual watch holder, 11 inches high, sold for over $700. It had minor wear and unusual color.

A shell-shaped cranberry glass watch holder with enameled decorations was auctioned recently. The almost egg-shaped glass was held in a gilt metal frame with leaves, flowers and a bird finial. The unusual piece, probably American, sold for $708 at a Conestoga auction in Pennsylvania. It was lined with padded fabric to protect the watch. A pocket watch kept in a holder on a table near the bed served as a bedroom clock.

Yvonne, Annette, Cecile, Emilie and Marie, were born in Canada on May 28, 1934. They were the first quintuplets to survive infancy. When they were four months old, they became wards of the Canadian government and were put under the guardianship of Dr. Dafoe, the doctor who delivered them. The girls lived in the Dafoe nursery, where they became a major tourist attraction. They returned to live with their family in 1943. Thousands of special dolls and souvenirs were made picturing the quints at different ages. Annette and Cecile are still alive. The value of your dolls is about $20.

Stand downs for 2018

Stand Down season has begun, and whether you're on the side of needing services or providing help to homeless veterans, the information is out there and waiting for you.

Stand Downs are events that take place over one to three days, depending on the location. On a typical day, homeless veterans can get services for benefits eligibility screening, personal care items, employment help, legal assistance, haircuts, case management, housing and mental health services. In addition, many locations have food, clothing, shelter, health and dental screenings right on the spot, with multiple agencies and sources of assistance coming together. You might find college resources, a career fair and more, depending on the location. If you have your DD-214 or a Department of Veterans Affairs medical card, bring it.

Stand Downs have been going on since 1988, and there now are locations all across the country.

To see the VA list of Stand Downs, go online to www.va.gov/homeless/events.asp and scroll down. You'll find dates, location, and names and phone numbers, as well as email addresses. The season runs until December in some areas. Make contact as early as you can, whether you need services or can volunteer. Many locations have transportation to the event, if you call ahead. If you don't see a listing for your area, contact the nearest VA Medical Center. Perhaps your event isn't posted yet, or maybe they need to gauge interest. You also can search online by listing your state for "veterans Stand Down schedule 2018."

The National Coalition for Homeless Veterans has its own Stand Down page at www.nchv.org. There's also a list of contacts for immediate help, such as the crisis line [1-800-273-TALK (veterans press 1)] and community-based organizations near you.

If you know veterans who need this information, please clip and copy, then pass it around, especially to homeless shelters.

• "Restore the shine on dull buttons by painting them with a coat of clear nail polish. I've renewed the buttons on my cardigan several times this way. I think it also strengthens the threads holding the buttons on." -- R.H. in Maine

• "Turn a regular bra into a racerback strap with a simple paperclip. Just tuck both arm straps into the paperclip and adjust the point on your back where they come together. This has saved me when I had a nice tank top under a light jacket but then wanted to remove the jacket without my straps showing." -- A.J. in California

- On July 15, 1606, Dutch master Rembrandt van Rijn is born in Leiden, the son of a miller. His humble origins may help account for the uncommon depth of compassion given to the human subjects of his art.
- On July 11, 1916, President Woodrow Wilson signs the Federal Aid Road Act. Since the mid-19th century, the building and maintenance of roads had been seen as a state and local responsibility.
- On July 13, 1930, France defeats Mexico 4-1 and the United States defeats Belgium 3-0 in the first-ever World Cup soccer matches, played simultaneously in host city Montevideo, Uruguay. The World Cup has since become the world's most watched sporting event.
- On July 9, 1947, in a ceremony at the Pentagon, Gen. Dwight Eisenhower appoints Florence Blanchfield a lieutenant colonel in the U.S. Army, making her the first woman in U.S. history to hold permanent military rank.
- On July 14, 1968, Atlanta Braves slugger Henry "Hank" Aaron hits the 500th home run of his career. Aaron retired in 1976 as the all-time leader in runs batted in, extra base hits and total bases. He was named to the Baseball Hall of Fame in 1982.
- On July 12, 1984, Walter Mondale, Democratic presidential candidate, announces his choice of Rep. Geraldine Ferraro of New York as his running mate, the first woman nominated by a major party for the vice presidency.
- On July 10, 1992, the Alaska court of appeals overturns the conviction of Joseph Hazelwood, the former captain of the oil tanker Exxon Valdez. Hazelwood, who was found guilty of negligence for the massive oil spill in Prince William Sound in 1989, argued that he was entitled to immunity because he had reported the oil spill 20 minutes after the ship ran aground.

Strange But True

By Samantha Weaver

- It was popular British romance author Jilly Cooper who made the following observation: "The male is a domestic animal which, if treated with firmness, can be trained to do most things."
- If you're like the average human, you blink about 17,000 times every day.
- Filmmaker George Lucas is arguably best known for his "Star Wars" franchise, but he also directed "American Graffiti." During the making of that earlier film he designated each reel of film with an R before the reel's number, and each instance of dialog was prefixed with a D. At one point during the sound mixing, the sound designer needed to use Reel 2, Dialog 2, and so asked for "R2D2." Lucas liked the sound of it so much that he used it for the name of a robot character in his later work.
- At 6 feet, 4 inches tall, Abraham Lincoln is the tallest president in the history of the United States.
- I'd be very surprised if you'd ever heard of Bokassa I, former emperor of the Central African Republic. It's interesting to note, though, that while he was on trial for infanticide, cannibalism and torture, he commented, "Being head of state is an extremely thankless job."
- If you suffer from ophidiophobia -- and, sadly, many people do -- you may find the following tidbit to be rather unsettling: There are more than 3,000 different species of snakes.
- Researchers have discovered that humans aren't the only ones to imbibe alcohol on a regular basis. It seems that the tiny pen-tailed tree shrew makes a habit of consuming naturally fermented palm flower nectar, which has an alcohol content of 3.8 percent -- comparable to that of most beers.

Federal, state, local and community leaders, healthcare providers, private sector/academic experts, privacy law experts, local health departments, childcare centers and homeowners and tenants are invited to attend any of the forums to provide input on the next steps for implementation.

The CLEEC was established in 2017 to coordinate all efforts for the elimination of child lead exposure statewide, including the implementation of recommendations for the report A Roadmap to Eliminating Child Lead Exposure issued by the Child Lead Poisoning Elimination Board in November 2016. For more information or to review the action plan, visit www.michigan.gov/leadcommission. To submit comments on the action plan, e-mail MDHHS-leadcommission@michigan.gov.
