Great Lakes water levels remain high for spring

Despite a dry month in February across the Great Lakes basin, water levels on each of the Great Lakes remain very high going into the spring, according to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Detroit District.

Lakes Superior, Michigan, Huron, and Erie set new monthly records for February 2020. The records were previously set on lakes Superior, Michigan and Huron in 1986, and in 1987 on Lake Erie.

"After months of generally wet conditions, February was finally drier across most of the Great Lakes," said John Allis, chief of the Great Lakes Hydraulics and Hydrology Office, Detroit District. "However, levels remain above or near record highs for this time of year, and we expect impacts to those along the coastline to increase as water levels now begin rising towards their seasonal peaks."

According to Allis, late winter and spring is usually a period of seasonal rise on all the Great Lakes due to increased rainfall and runoff.

Water levels typically peak in the summer or early fall.

Significant erosion continues in many locations as water levels remain extremely high. Strong storm systems and resulting large waves have led to substantial erosion along much of the Great Lakes coastline.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers urges those impacted by the high water levels in 2019 to prepare for similar or higher levels in 2020. The most recent six-month forecast of Great Lakes water levels still forecasts that water levels could peak very near last year's record levels.

The Detroit District monitors and forecasts Great Lakes' water levels and provides the data and analysis on its Website www.lre-usace.army.mil.

During response operations, Detroit District, Emergency Management Office conducts emergency operations to save lives and protect specific properties (public/facilities or services,) which includes providing technical

Board of Commissioners appoint new medical examiner

By Mary Weber
Staff Writer

To potentially save money and receive additional services, the Alcona County Board of Commissioners unanimously agreed to contract with a new medical examiner service.

Marcus Atkins, senior director of development of the Michigan Institute of Forensic Science and Medicine (MIFS) thanked the board after it voted to a three-year contract with the group.

The board also voted unanimously to accept Dr. Russell Bush as the new county medical examiner, since Bush is affiliated with MIFS.

Craig Johnston, commission chairperson, explained going with the new company made better financial sense for Alcona County and could potentially lower costs by $5,000 to $8,000 per year depending on how many exams were needed.

"There will also be better communications with administration in place to handle calls back and forth between funeral homes and people wanting death certificates and such. This is the direction most counties are going. It's very difficult to operate a medical examiner's office out of a small county. This will be a good thing," Johnston said.

Commissioner Gary Wnuk said the county is already familiar with Dr. Bush who served as the community medical director for Health Department No. 2 for many years. "It was Dr. Bush who generally showed up at most of the meetings. It's nice to have a trusted member at hand," Wnuk said.

Johnston couldn't think of a single negative going forward with MIFS except it deals with medical exams of dying people. "It's a difficult process but one that must be done properly, efficiently, ethically and with care," he said.

One of the positives of going with MIFS is that local Alcona County Emergency Medical Technicians (EMTs) who have already been trained as Medical Examiner Scene Investigators (MESIs) will be able to be utilized.

"When they are not working as EMTs they can be on-call as an investigator. They will be the on-scene eyes for the medical examiner and get guidance from him on whether an autopsy will be necessary," Johnston said.

According to Johnston, considerable cost would be involved to outfit each of the medical investigators with cameras and other necessary equipment and give them additional ongoing training. He wasn't sure of the exact cost but said probably around $10,000.

"This company will pick up all that cost and pay for the medical investigator call outs. They will also provide transportation of the deceased to Saginaw and back if an autopsy is needed.

U.S. Forest Service plans fire management

The U.S. Forest Service will begin to conduct prescribed fires this month on the Huron-Manistee National Forest across Michigan including local counties.

This year, the fire management team has identified wild-fire fuels reduction opportunities for prescribed fires in Wexford, Manistee, Lake, Mason, Oceana, Newaygo, Muskegon, Alcona, Crawford, Iosco and Oscoda counties. Alerts will be placed on the Huron-Manistee's Facebook page to inform the public that a prescribed burn may be occurring in their area.

"Prescribed fires reduce hazardous fuels that increase the danger of wildfires and allow fire to play its natural part of many ecosystems on the Huron-Manistee National Forests," said John Norton-

Jensen, East Zone assistant fire management officer. "Species such as white tailed deer, turkey, butterflies, songbirds, grouse and turtles use burned areas for food, cover and a place to raise their young."

Before implementation, Prescribed Fire Burn Plans are prepared taking into consideration a variety of ecological concerns and agency policies. "Project locations are selected based upon a variety of parameters, including wind speed and direction, relative humidity and temperature, fire danger and seasonal re-

Planning your garden style

- Consider a container garden to grow your fruits, vegetables, or herbs. Only a small, sunny area is needed for your pots.
- You can choose a raised garden bed. This works for smaller properties, or if you prefer multiple small beds instead of one large plot.
- You can plan an in-ground garden. Make sure the area receives good sun, then plan its dimensions, what you will plant in it, and how much you will plant. Prepare the soil and the water source to be used. Schedule the planting and maintenance. - B. Weaver

Dear Savvy Senior,
Do kidney problems run in families? My mother died from kidney failure 10 years ago at age 74 but didn't know she had a kidney problem until it was too late.

Dear Just,
Anyone who has a family history of kidney disease, or who has high blood pressure or diabetes is at increased risk and needs to have their kidneys tested.

According to the Center for Disease Control and Prevention, around 37 million U.S. adults have chronic kidney disease (when the kidneys can't properly do their job of cleaning toxins and wastes from the blood), and millions more are at risk of developing it, yet most people don't realize it. That's because kidney disease develops very slowly over many years before any symptoms arise.

But left untreated, the disease can eventually require people to spend hours hooked up to a dialysis machine or get a kidney transplant. Even mild kidney problems can double a person's risk of heart attack and stroke, as well as cause anemia and bone disease.

The reason kidney disease has become so widespread today is because of the rise of obesity, type-2 diabetes and high blood pressure which all strain the kidneys.

Another factor is the increasing number of people who take multiple medications, which can overtax the organs. People over age 60 are especially vulnerable both because they tend to take more drugs, and because kidney function normally declines somewhat with age.

Get Tested

Because kidney disease has no early symptoms, the only way to catch it before it advances is to have a simple blood and urine test by your doctor. So, anyone that has diabetes, high blood pressure or heart disease, a family history of kidney disease, or is age 60 or older needs to get tested. African, Hispanic, Asian and Indian Americans along with Pacific Islanders are also at increased risk.

If you're diagnosed with kidney disease you need to know that there's no cure, but there are steps you can take to help contain the damage, including:

- Control your blood pressure: If you have high blood pressure, get it under 130/80. If you need medication to do it, ACE inhibitors and ARBs are good choices because of their proven ability to protect the kidneys.

- Control your diabetes: If you have diabetes, keep your blood sugar as close to normal as possible.

- Change your diet: This usually means reducing the amount of protein and phosphorus you eat and cutting back on sodium and possibly potassium. Your doctor can help you determine an appropriate eating plan, or you may want to talk to a dietitian.

Savvy Senior

- Watch your meds: Dozens of commonly used drugs can damage the kidneys, especially when taken in high doses over long periods – most notably NSAIDs like ibuprofen and naproxen.

Herbal supplements can also be very dangerous. Talk to your doctor about all the prescription, over the counter and herbal products you take to identify potential problems and find alternatives.

- Exercise and lose weight: If you're overweight and inactive, start an aerobic fitness routine (walk, swim, cycle, etc.) that gets your heart pumping. This will help lower blood pressure, control diabetes and help you lose excess weight all of which will help your kidneys.

- Quit smoking: If you smoke, quit. Heart disease becomes a much greater risk to the kidneys if you smoke. Smoking also doubles the rate of progression to end-stage renal failure.

- Limit alcohol intake: Drinking too much alcohol can worsen kidney disease too, so talk to your doctor to see if it's safe for you to drink, and if so, limit yourself to no more than one drink per day.

support and direct support during flood operations.

Assistance is supplemental to local and state efforts and normally at the request of the state's governor or local municipality.

In addition, citizens of Indiana and Michigan may decide to work on personal construction projects to alleviate erosion or flooding, which could potentially impact the nation's rivers, streams, wetlands and other aquatic resources that may require a permit from the Corps of Engineers' Regulatory Office.

strictions, and potential smoke impacts in order to best reach the identified resource objectives specific for the project area," Norton-Jensen said.

"Prescribed fires are conducted with the safety of the public and fire fighters as the highest priority and will only occur when appropriate resources are available," said Persephone Whelan, West Zone assistant fire management officer. "If it is necessary to temporarily close forest roads and trails, the forest service will notify the public of these closures by posting signs."

Agency personnel remain on-site to conduct the prescribed fire and monitor results for as long as there is visible smoke, she added. During prescribed fires, Whelan said, "visitors and residents may see and smell smoke many miles away and for several days afterward." She explained that after the prescribed fire, burning material is extinguished near the outer edges. Logs and stumps may burn for a few days after the burn is done.

"Fire fighters will return until the fire is considered extinguished," Whelan said. She explained that any fire lines created will be allowed to grow back with vegetation.

According to the Michigan Prescribed Fire Council, prescribed burning has long been recognized by land managers as a management tool capable of bringing about a complex array of outcomes, depending on how it is applied. These include both encouraging and discouraging plant growth, reducing thatch and duff, increasing nutrient availability, increasing rates of solar soil warming, and exposing mineral soils for better seed germination. More recently, land managers have come to understand the ecological outcomes of burning, particularly increases in biological diversity.

For more information on prescribed fire on the Huron-Manistee National Forests, visit the Prescribed Burning Story Map. The U.S. Forest Service manages 193 million acres of public land.

Examiner

"They will do the ongoing training. New requirements through the state are common and this is one of those things where it is better to have someone in the business who is up to date on everything. All this isn't cheap, and it was all on us before," Johnston said.

During the commission meeting, Dr. Bush addressed commissioners and said it was nice being back in the county. He relayed as a medical examiner with health department experience, he would like to have a bond formed between the two entities. "One of the things that many, if not most, medical examiner systems don't do is get to know their health department. The medical examiner program is as much public health as it is anything else."

"People need to know how healthy their community is and how do you know that except to look at people who died. What are they dying from? Where are they dying and under what circumstances? Public health can't always tell you that. I plan to make that connection," Bush said.

When contacted by phone, Dr. Amy Marker, the county medical examiner for the last four years, who works full-time as a family doctor in Bay City, Mich., was not rattled by the news of the county going with MIFS.

"Quite honestly, I think this is an excellent change for the county. I don't have any hard feelings at all towards anyone with regard to this. This is in the county's best interest because they (MIFS) can offer services that otherwise wouldn't be affordable to a small county," Marker said.

The new contract will cost Alcona County $18,000 for the first year and $20,000 the second and third year with MIFS.

Atkins first brought his proposal to make Alcona County the first northern county to contract with his group last November. Since then, he and commissioners, especially Carolyn Brummund, spent significant time working on the contract, speaking with Dr. Bush and making sure Alcona County Emergency Services, Alcona County Sheriff's Department and Gillies Funeral Home were on board and ready for the change.

Atkins said he was very impressed with Brummund's professionalism and help with the final contract and said some of the verbiage she added will be implemented in future contracts with other counties.

Lady Tigers fall in district final to Oscoda

By Ben Murphy
Sports Writer

The Alcona varsity girls basketball team certainly put up a fight in its division three district championship game against Oscoda last Friday night.

The Lady Tigers, who battled foul trouble much of the night, weren't quite able to overcome the heavily favored Lady Owls.

The much-anticipated match-up was close early on, with Oscoda playing to a slim 9-7 lead after the first quarter. Alcona had its opening frame highlighted by a buzzer-beating lay-in by Liz Henderson, on a nice entry pass by Kelsey Hansen.

Alcona took leads of 13-11, 15-13 and 17-15 on baskets by Lily Bilbey, Rachel Layton and Henderson.

Oscoda answered that with a quick 9-0 spurt to surge ahead 24-17, but hoops by Layton and Bilbey closed that gap to 24-21 at the half.

Bilbey opened the third quarter with a basket that made it 24-23, with Henderson's go-ahead shot that made it a 25-24 Alcona lead.

The Lady Tigers trailed just 25-22 at the half and took a 25-24 lead on a short bank shot by Henderson, but the Owls took control of the game with a 17-2 run, ending the third quarter with a 39-27 lead. The run spilled over into the fourth quarter and pushed that gap to 41-27.

Anna Loyer finally stopped the bleeding by converting an and one play. Henderson followed that with a 16-footer that sank through the rim, cutting the Owl lead down to 41-32. Oscoda scored a basket on its next trip down the court, but Loyer made it an eight-point game thanks to canning a three from the right corner, setting the score to 43-25.

About midway through the fourth quarter, a three by Hansen and a fast break hoop by Megan Grove drew Alcona within 47-40, but the Owls netted the next nine points to regain control with a 56-40 edge at just over a minute to play.

Grove ended the Owl run with a three-pointer to make it 56-43. Although Grove made two more buckets, Oscoda finished its second straight district title.

"I thought our girls absolutely played their hearts out in this game, but it just didn't go our way," said head coach Mark Feldhiser.

"Both teams played very hard all night," Feldhiser said. "Not to take anything away from Oscoda, they are a good team and I wish them the best moving on, but I have to say it is surprising the game was that close considering they shot 19-of-29 from the line and we shot four-of-five. It was apparent that the foul trouble was wearing on our kids and hampered what we could do in the second half."

Henderson finished the game with 13 points. Grove netted nine. Bilbey and Hansen had seven apiece. Loyer netted five, Layton scored four and Karen Sharboneau had two.

Alcona reached the finals, thanks to a hard-fought win over Tawas, 40-38, during the semifinal contest on Wednesday, March 4.

"This was a game that shows the type of team that we had this year," Feldhiser said. "The stats from the game would suggest that we couldn't win; We did not shoot very well, and committed too many turnovers. However, we hung in there and won with grit and determination. We let our defense take care of this one... This game proved the old adage that it is tough to beat a team three times in the same season. I am very proud of how we hung in there and got the job done."

Grove hit a long two-pointer at the end of the first quarter which gave Alcona a 14-6 lead after the first quarter. Tawas hung around though, with the Lady Tigers leading just 20-19 at the half.

The Lady Braves jumped to a 28-22 lead out of the locker room, but after an Alcona timeout, it was able to regroup and knotted the game at 30-apiece on a three by Layton just before the end of the third quarter.

Tawas took a 38-36 lead with just over a minute to play. Grove hit a pair of free throws to knot the game at 38-all with 1:04 to go.

Tawas attempted to play for the last shot, but Grove stole a pass headed for the paint. She was fouled shortly after the steal, and sank what was the game-winning free throws with just seven seconds remaining.

Grove finished with 19 points. Layton added seven. Henderson and Loyer had five points apiece. Hansen and Sharboneau had two points apiece.

Alcona finished the season 17-5 overall.

"We had a great season, our team can be very proud of what we accomplished this year," Feldhiser said. "This is a great group of young ladies and I am glad that I had the opportunity to coach them. I am already looking forward to next year. The tradition of strong teams for Alcona girls basketball is intact, and we are already looking forward to next year."

Ukrainian student sets goals for himself

By Mary Weber
Staff Writer

While Alcona County wasn't exactly his idea of what life in the United States would be like, an exchange student from Ukraine is making his time here a crucial step forward to the life he wants to live.

Slava Belychenko is a 17-year-old senior from Luhansk, Ukraine, a big city which, he explained, has about a million people living in it. Luhansk is known for some of the more prestigious universities in Ukraine and is home to the main campus of Taras Shevchenko National University, East Ukrainian Volodymyr Dahl National University and of Luhansk State Medical University.

Coming from such a big city to rural Alcona County was somewhat of a shock for the student and much different than what he envisioned while watching movies and television shows of flashy New York City lifestyles. Still, he is excited to be here and said the experience he is gaining will help move his life in the right direction.

Slava is part of the Future Leaders Exchange (FLEX) program. Not just anyone can be a part of the program. He applied with about 11,000 other Ukraine youth. "Only about 100 of us were accepted. That's a pretty small percentage. I knew the FLEX program would be a good experience; it was not easy. It was a big, big challenge, but I knew I needed this so I could move forward to a new level of life," he said.

Slava is a determined young man full of lofty goals. He said the exchange program has helped to push him out of his comfort envelope where he lived in Ukraine with his mom and dad and his little Yorkshire terrier named Carolena. These comforts, such as speaking his native language, knowing how his school system worked, being close to friends and the foods he loves to eat, are much of what every student takes for granted.

"This program is pushing me to a new level. It's like a new life. New people, I don't know them, and they don't know me. Learning how schools work here. Just a whole new experience which is getting better and better every day," Slava said.

He feels the experience will give him a great advantage in the business world he would like to be a part of after college. "My dream is to open something big and become great. It's one of the reasons I wanted to take part in FLEX, to overcome things like language and other barriers which will help me in the future," Slava said.

Slava, who speaks Ukraine, Russian, English and some German and French, said language has been his most difficult challenge. His command of the English language is exceptionally good, however, his heavy accent, gets in the way sometimes from being understood.

He explained the differences also between the schools in Ukraine and the schools here where classes are much more difficult in Ukraine with homework nearly every day. "There are 25 different classes you must take in Ukraine. It is not like here where you get to pick and choose," he said.

Taking sports is also mandatory in Ukraine, which suits Slava's energy and desire to keep physically fit. He said while sometimes he feels there is not as much to do in Alcona County, he has begun wrestling at Alcona High School which is a new sport to him as well.

At home in Ukraine, he has competed in mixed martial arts (MMA) which he explained is fighting without rules. He also enjoys Tae Kwon Do, basketball, volleyball and soccer.

Slava said he is enjoying being with his host family, Donna Stadler and her 16-year-old son, Chad. "I appreciate everything they are doing for me and have had a lot of new experiences. Every day something fun is happening. Chad is a fun guy who likes to do pranks. I'm a more serious guy."

Donna is impressed by Slava's drive and ambition. "He's a very determined young man who likes to set goals. He will do things 75 days in a row like read 10 pages of a book or do a certain amount of exercises. He is determined to reach whatever goals he sets for himself."

Since coming to Michigan, Slava has visited the state capital in Lansing, Mich. and went with the Stadlers on a driving vacation to Florida for two weeks. They also plan on taking Slava to a Detroit Red Wings game and a tour of the city while they are there.

Slava feels the whole experience has already made him a better man and given him an awareness of the world he never had while living in Ukraine. "I thought Ukraine was paradise and the best place in the world but coming here I see it from a different side. There are good and bad things everywhere."

He sat back in the kitchen chair and smiled. "One day when I become great," he said, "people will look at my biography and what I did. They will see I was a FLEX student. All of the great people have had challenges along the way and worked to solve those problems. I want to do that. One day I will look in the mirror and think about who I was and who I became. I think I will see the guy I always wanted to be."

Alcona senior receives science award for window efficiency study

By Mary Weber
Staff Writer

A passion for science and dreams of a career as an astrophysicist brought one high school senior a step closer to her goal. It also brought Alcona Community Schools its very first student to attend a state science symposium and bring home a first-place win.

Rose Schopfer, daughter of Bonnie and Richard Schopfer of Mikado, has always loved science so when she was approached to participate in an environmental, life science and engineering studies poster competition at the Junior Science and Humanities Symposium taking place at Wayne State University, she jumped at the chance.

Through the opportunity, Schopfer garnered a first-place win, a $200 cash prize, a portfolio certificate and even more important to Schopfer, a chance to listen, meet and talk with someone she idealizes as a career hero, Dr. Douglas M. Hudgins, a renowned astrophysicist from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA). Hudgins was the keynote speaker for the day-long symposium.

"It's my dream to someday work at NASA," Schopfer said, "Meeting him was a thrill. He told me to pick something I'm passionate about and follow it. If it takes me to NASA, that's great, but he said there were many routes to get there and he couldn't give me just one definite way."

The excited senior explained Hudgins worked on the original Kepler telescope launch which finds new planets every year and made huge contributions to the NASA program.

For her science study,

Rose Schopfer won first place at the Junior Science and Humanities Symposium. She is the first Alcona Community Schools student to receive this award. Courtesy photos.

Schopfer, along with ninth-grade student, Jerzey Brown, who she chose to mentor, worked on a window study at the school comparing the efficiency of new windows to old windows and if the newer windows would offer energy and cost savings to the school.

"The school brought the idea of the window study. It was relevant and interesting, so it was fun for Jerzey and me to coordinate, analyze and write about," Schopfer said.

She explained how they had a room at the school with newer windows in it and a room with older windows and sectioned off identical sizes to measure temperature with an infrared temperature gun. Data was collected and recorded in the morning and afternoon and when there was no sun, so different variables were involved.

"We also had temperature readings of outside and inside each room. We found there was a 12.7 average increase in temperature between the new windows over the old windows. We roughly estimate new windows would save about $1,085 from the $5,000 per month heating bill. I was surprised at the results. I was expecting a few degrees of difference, but one test showed the new windows were 120 percent more efficient than the old," Schopfer said.

Brown, the daughter of David and Angela Brown of Lincoln, said her favorite part of the study was being mentored by Schopfer and getting to know her and Helen-Ann Cordes, the high school's career navigator who assisted in bringing the idea of attending the science symposium along with Brandon Schroeder, a school board member and senior educator with the Michigan Sea Grant for Michigan State University Extension.

Brown had fun taking the temperatures and collecting data. "I learned how to apply my knowledge and make data charts. This will help my future. It will look great on my college application and shows I can communicate and work well with partners and teams," she said.

Schopfer explained the process of winning first place, from making her professional-looking poster with a computer template to being questioned by five judges from the U.S. Army Corp of Engineers.

"I wasn't nervous. I just wanted to give it my all. When they first started to question me there was a jazz band playing in the lobby and they couldn't hear me. We had to move to another location. That's the way it goes. I thought it would mess with my presentation, but it Schopfer, a senior, presented her study on the efficiency of new windows compared to old which won first place at the symposium. Brown was mentored by Schopfer during the study.

Police reconstruct face from unidentified woman's skull

March 8, 1995
By Jim Dunn

A clay sculpture constructed on the actual skull of a woman whose skeleton was discovered last October in the woods near Curtisville was unveiled on Friday afternoon at the Alcona County Sheriffs Department.

Police hope that publicizing the facial reconstruction through the media, police computers and publications, and even on the internet might spark someone's memory to give them a lead on the identity of the woman "This (sculpture) should resemble the person, very closely, as they looked in life," explained Amy Michaud, who created the reconstruction and is employed in the micro-chemistry unit of the Michigan State Police Crime Lab in East Lansing. "It is built right on the skull, and those are her actual teeth, which people should concentrate on. The gap in her two upper front teeth is very distinctive," she said.

"The idea is to remind someone; to just get someone to pick up the phone and say that looks like..." added Dr. Norman Sauer, a forensic anthropologist at Michigan State University who did the skeletal reconstruction from the remains and who assisted Michaud in the facial reconstruction.

Sauer said that his analysis of the skeletal remains indicates that the woman was between 30-50 years old, between five feet and five feet four inches tall, and that her body had been in the woods for between 1-4 years. He added that two vertebrae in her upper and lower back, as well as the bone in her left arm above the elbow, had been fractured some time well before her death, because they had healed. "The back injuries appear to be compression fractures, like might happen in an auto accident," said Sauer.

"Coupled with the looks of this face, and the knowledge of, for example, an auto accident, some one might know of a woman with a similar background," he said.

"We also noted that she had four tooth extractions, which might be indicative of someone who had braces at an earlier age," pointed out Sheriff Doug Ellinger, who added that all of the information about the woman had been entered into the police computer network, which network, which found 26 possibilities in the missing persons files. So far, about eight of those have been eliminated, including but was recently located in the Detroit area after considerable police work.

Ellinger said that his department has received 34 tips so far in the case, most of which have been cleared.

Michaud explained that she gave the sculpture hazel eyes, because that is the most common color among Caucasians. The blondish hair, in a short hairstyle, was fashioned because a small amount of hair, between 1-4 inches long and determined to be either dark blond or light brown, was found on the skull. "We try to keep everything as generic, or average, as possible," she said.

Michaud added that once the reconstruction is photographed and publicized, the clay will be removed and the skull returned to the crime lab. She said that she has been doing this type of work for the state police for three years, and two identifications of remains have been made from her clay reconstructions.

Sauer added that if a photograph is found of a potential match up, the photo can be superimposed over the skull on a computer which can also provide an identification. He said that his investigation didn't reveal a cause of death.

The skeleton of the woman was discovered on October 26 about one mile east of the Brodie Road and Bamfield Road intersection by a hunter who was looking for a place to build a deer blind.

Anyone who thinks they might recognize the woman from the reconstruction should contact the Alcona County Sheriffs Department at 724-6271.

Families take part in geography challenge

March 8, 1995 ~ There are 67 Alcona families involved in a 10-week family geography challenge program at Alcona Elementary School.

Barbara Matteson and Sharon Taylor, teacher consultants for the Michigan Geographic Alliance, presented the program in cooperation with the Enrichment Committee of the Alcona Elementary School and teachers Connie Petrovich and Ann Boucher.

The Family Geography Challenge is a program designed for parents and their children to learn more about geography and current events in a way that's fun, interesting and easy. Geography is an important part of the student's curriculum and the program encourages parents to become involved with their child's education in the comfortable and non-intimidating environment of their own home.

During the one-hour presentation parents and students were actively involved in fun, geography activities that provided them ideas and ways in which they could learn about geography together.

Each participating family received a National Geographic Society (NGS) world wall map and a handbook journal to take home and use during the 10-week program.

Each family pledges to watch the evening news at least once a week, discuss what's talked about and locate places mentioned on their world map.

Each family completing the 10-week program will receive a certificate, beachball globe and bumper sticker from the Michigan Geographic Alliance.

The Family Geography Challenge is sponsored by the Michigan Geographic Alliance, National Geographic Society Education Foundation, IJB Foundation, Inc. of the Industrial Bank of Japan, LTD.

didn't," Schopfer said.

She explained public speaking doesn't rattle her because of the amount of practice she has had speaking before peers and groups through her years attending Alcona Community Schools.

Cordes said the competition was interesting and the equivalent to working on a university graduate research project. Other studies in the competition included the pain threshold of young children, bringing back native pitcher thistle, an aloe vera plant study, the study of perception of color and object recognition and a study on Ebola. "I was quite shocked to win," Schopfer said.

Schroeder explained that Alcona Community Schools was one of just three north-east Michigan schools participating in the symposium this year through the lens of Great Lakes and natural resource science and research explorations.

Schroeder brought his 12-year-old daughter, Emma, with him to the symposium. Emma is a sixth grader at Alcona schools and thought the experience was cool. "I could relate to the kids presenting because they were only a couple of years older than I am. It will be exciting to see what I can come up with to present when I am in high school," Emma said.

Schroeder was appreciative of Schopfer's efforts. "She jumped into this research project whole-heartedly, did a fantastic job and nicely represented Alcona Community Schools."

"Rose is just an outstanding young lady who set an amazing precedent for the school. In addition to winning the symposium, she has also come up with a plan to host a science fair for middle/high school students at the school," Cordes said.

Schopfer is hopeful the science fair, which will be held May 16, will encourage other students to take their projects to the next level and compete at the symposium next year. She said it was one of the best opportunities she has experienced to help her attain the goals she has set for herself beyond high school and wants others to experience that.

Dan O'Connor, Alcona Community Schools superintendent, said Schopfer and Brown did an amazing job of independently working on the project. "Their efforts not only impact the direction of our future sinking fund work but helped to develop skills needed once they are in college or career. Their project exemplifies the type of authentic learning and practical application of skills learned in the classroom to real life."

Local scouts and venturers celebrate Scout Sunday

On Sunday, Feb. 9, a day after the 110th birthday of the Boy Scouts of America (BSA), Crew 7 and Troop 7G took advantage of the occasion to participate in the service at Hope-St. John's Church. The Sunday closest to the birthday of the BSA is celebrated annually as Scout Sunday.

The Rev. Richard Klender officiated. He was assisted by venturer Lewis Axline, who read the Old Testament lesson; venturer and scout Paige Gower read the psalms; venturer Rhea Gereau read the New Testament; venturer and scout Violet Roiter and scout Jennifer Heilig led the prayers of the people; and venturer and scout Savannah Webster read the gospel. The offering was collected by venturer Hunter Roiter and scout Miranda Roiter.

Young women have been active as members in the Senior Division Programs of the Boy Scouts of America (Venturing, Exploring and Sea Scouts) since 1969. Girls were allowed to join Cub Scouts in 2018 and Boy Scouts in 2019.

Scout troops are segregated by gender and Oscoda boasts both a troop for girls (Troop 7G) and a troop for boys (Troop 959). Troop 7G meets on Wednesdays from 5:15 to 6:45 p.m. at Hope-St. John's Church and is chartered by American Legion Post No. 274 in Oscoda. Troop 959 also meets on Wednesdays from 5 to 6 p.m. at the Oscoda Methodist Church, which also charters them.

Venturing Crews are co-educational and Crew 7 meets at the Hope-St. John's Church every other Sunday evening from 6:30 to 8:15 p.m. The next meeting is on Sunday, March 22.

Crew 7 is the only Venturing Crew north of Bay City, Mich. and has venturers from National City, Mich. to Alpena, and beyond. Crew 7's programs are diverse and focus on the outdoors, STEM and leadership development.
