Army Corps commander visits Harrisville Harbor

By Mary Weber
Staff Writer

The Harrisville Harbor of Refuge was the topic of discussion by a noted guest last week who wanted to see the harbor in person, talk about solutions to problems and discuss future possibilities.

With a boots-on-the-ground approach to see some of the northeast Michigan harbors in his district's command, Lt. Col. Scott Katalenich from the Army Corps of Engineers, Detroit District, met with City of Harrisville Mayor Jeff Gehring, and Harrisville Harbor Committee Member Joe Lukasiewicz.

Katalenich brought a few members of his team including Tom Gramer, facilities operation specialist and Patrick Kuhne, emergency manager/area engineer.

As the group walked the docks together, Katalenich listened to problems the harbor has had recently. Gehring pointed out the most concerning was the high water encroaching over the break wall.

"The break wall is not the property of the harbor or the City of Harrisville. With as high as the water has been, the break wall, specifically the southeast section, is not protecting our docks. It has been sickening to watch the new docks, which have been funded with tax dollars, getting smashed up," Gehring said.

Gehring spoke about the improvements the harbor has received in phases over the past five years including new dock piers, floating fingers, gas shed and equipment.

Gehring explained he contacted the Army Corps of Engineers in Spring of 2020 and the State of Michigan about the insufficiency of the break wall.

"The initial contact with the Army Corps of Engineers came after we had storm damage. There was a complex series of events, high water and lack of sufficient break wall. We are not unique, but what created our uniqueness was the several million dollars (spent) to improve our infrastructure over the last four years, only to watch it get damaged from an inferior break wall.

"I just kept talking to whoever would listen, calling every contact I could think of. In a town of 500 (residents), it's easy to get overlooked on something like this. I made sure we wouldn't be overlooked," Gehring said.

Katalenich said the harbor was beautiful and agreed more rock was needed. Gramer said a final evaluation and inspection of the break wall will be completed this week and there is a good possibility work will begin to improve the wall in late August or early September. Katalenich confirmed the work would be accomplished by combining efforts of the Army Corps of Engineers and the State of Michigan.

Gehring and Lukasiewicz also spoke to Katalenich about the possibility of having a walking pier out into the lake where people could come and fish or just take in the view and what that would mean for the county's small rural community.

"We have nowhere to fish from in the community. We need a walkway or something to generate some foot traffic like they have in Oscoda or Tawas," Lukasiewicz said.

Gehring also spoke of the dangers of walking the rock break wall where people have been injured and needed assistance to get off the rocks. "Some people try and walk it to fish from, but teenagers mostly are the ones that walk it, it's almost like a rite of passage. They listen to music out there and swim. We had to rescue one recently from the water, he didn't need resuscitation, but he took on too much water and needed assistance," Gehring said.

While building a walking pier was beyond what the Army Corps of Engineers could assist with, Katalenich

Alcona County resident tests positive for COVID-19 Delta variant

An unvaccinated male has been identified with the Delta variant (B.1.617.2) of COVID-19 in Alcona County, according to the District Health Department No. 2 (DHD2). The health department was notified by the Michigan Department of Health and Human Services (MDHHS).

Only a small percentage of COVID-19 positive test samples are sent on for genetic sequencing to identify any variant strains. Therefore, it is likely there are more unidentified cases of the Delta variant in Alcona County, and the greater DHD2 jurisdiction. "The Delta variant is more contagious than previous versions of COVID-19 and by the time it has been identified, an infected individual may have already exposed many more people," said Dr. Mark Hamed, DHD2 medical director. "With more than 80 percent of new cases being a highly contagious COVID-19 variant, vaccination is more important than ever. Current COVID-19 vaccines show effectiveness against these variants and reduce the risk of serious illness that may lead to hospitalization or death."

Hamed asked everyone to continue practicing mitigation strategies to protect themselves and others from COVID-19 and its variants, including Delta. These strategies include:

- Getting the COVID-19 vaccine.

- Wearing a mask around others in crowded indoor or outdoor areas, especially in counties with substantial and high community transmission.

Hog-nosed snakes can be found throughout much of the state and are one of the many harmless snake species found in Michigan. They prefer areas with sandy soils, and their favorite prey are toads. It may be startling to see one of these snakes because they will often flatten their head and hiss loudly as a defensive posture to appear more intimidating. However, according to the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, the hog-nosed snake is not venomous and poses no danger to people. Photo courtesy of Michigan DNR.

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor,

My congratulations to the Alcona County Commission for the unanimous stand presented to our state legislature against the privatization of mental health services in Michigan.

Privatization is bad for us. It would end our local control of health services currently administered through the Northeast Michigan Community Mental Health Authority, and turn it over to down-state and out of state for-profit businesses. This will increase the costs of services for our county, not to mention causing us to lose control of a big part of our health system.

These for-profit corporations have been lobbying our state legislators to proceed with the privatization. Let them know that we, their constituents, do not want this to happen.

Fake emergency, winning a prize, threat of arrest -- all scams

The Alcona County Sheriff's Department has seen an increase in telephone scams over the last several weeks. According to Alcona County Sheriff Scott Stephenson, these calls are often targeted at senior citizens but can also be used to victimize all citizens regardless of age.

The most common scams are:

• Sweepstakes Scam – the caller will notify the victim that they have won the Publishers Clearing House sweepstakes or something similar. However, the victim must pay a tax before they can receive their winnings. Often, the caller will ask the victim to pay in gift cards. The caller can be very convincing. Sometimes, there is a slow “prep” to this scam where the victim will receive notices in the mail. “Citizens should never send money to an unknown source, especially to be able to claim a prize,” Stephenson said.

• IRS Scam – The caller will notify the victim that there has been or will be, a warrant issued for their arrest for unpaid taxes. The caller threatens the victim with arrest and jail time unless they pay immediately. The caller will often say they can strike a deal, but that it must be kept secret. “The sheriff's department will not arrest anyone for unpaid taxes,” Stephenson said.

• The Grandma/Grandpa Scam – The caller will pretend to be the victim's grandchild and ask the victim to send money for an emergency. Often, they will claim to have been in an accident or arrested. The caller will try to trick the victim into giving a grandchild's name so they can make the call sound more legitimate. “If you are concerned that it may be legitimate, we recommend calling your grandchild or their parent. Never send money, gift cards, etc.,” Stephenson said.

“These are just the common scams we see,” Stephenson said. “Anytime you are being pressured to ‘pay now’ or face arrest, loss of utilities, or anything else, do not pay or give any personal information – Social Security number, credit card, or bank information. With prizes, remember ‘if the deal sounds too good to be true, it probably is.’”

“We recommend you hanging up the telephone, watching your caller ID and not answering calls you don't recognize. Again, do not send any type of payment or give out your personal information,” he said.

For additional information, contact the Alcona County Sheriff's Department by calling (989) 724-6271.

The hidden dangers of sleep apnea

Dear Savvy Senior,
How can you know when someone has sleep apnea? My husband has become such a terrible snorer that he wakes himself up at night, and he keeps me up too.

Tired Teri

Dear Tired,
If your husband is a loud snorer who wakes himself up during sleep, he probably needs to be tested for sleep apnea, a dangerous disorder that affects more than 22 million Americans, but often goes undiagnosed.

Sleep apnea is a disorder that causes a person to stop breathing during sleep, hundreds of times during the night, for 10 seconds or more at a time. Left untreated, it can cause extreme daytime sleepiness, as well as a host of serious health conditions like high blood pressure, heart attack, stroke, diabetes and dementia. In fact, it's estimated that every year, around 38,000 Americans die in their sleep from a heart attack or stroke because of sleep apnea.

But the good news is that sleep apnea is very treatable and most insurance companies, including Medicare, cover it.

There are three types of sleep apnea: obstructive, central and mixed. Of the three, obstructive sleep apnea (or OSA) is by far the most common and occurs when the throat muscles relax during sleep, blocking the airway.

While anyone can have it, sleep apnea is most common in people who are overweight, male, middle-aged and older. For women, the risk increases after menopause.

The symptoms include loud snoring (however, not everyone who snores has apnea), long pauses of breathing, gasping or choking during sleep and daytime drowsiness. But because most of these symptoms happen during sleep, most people don't recognize them. It's usually the person they're sleeping with who notices it.

Diagnosing Sleep Apnea

To help you get a handle on your husband's problem, the American Sleep Apnea Association has several diagnostic tests he can take at SleepApnea.org/treat - click on "Test Yourself."

If the screening indicates that he may have sleep apnea, make an appointment with his doctor or a sleep specialist who will probably recommend an overnight diagnostic sleep test called polysomnography, which can take place at a sleep center lab (see SleepEducation.com), or at home using a portable device.

Treatment Options

Your husband is at greater risk for sleep apnea if he's overweight, smokes, and/or consumes excessive amounts of alcohol. Excess weight, especially around the neck, puts pressure on the airway, which can cause it to collapse. Smoking can increase the amount of inflammation and fluid retention in the upper airway. And alcohol and sleeping pills can relax the muscles in the back of his throat, interfering with breathing. Addressing these issues, if necessary, is usually the first line of treatment.

If that doesn't do the trick, mild cases of sleep apnea may respond to oral devices that fit into the mouth like a removable mouth guard or retainer. These devices work by positioning the lower jaw slightly forward to keep the airway open during sleep.

Another noninvasive treatment option to consider is the new FDA approved eXciteOSA device (eXciteOSA.com). This treats sleep apnea and snoring by improving tongue muscle function by delivering electrical stimulation to the tongue through a mouthpiece that's worn for just 20 minutes during the day.

If none of these options work, the most effective and commonly prescribed treatment for OBA is a continuous positive airway pressure (CPAP) device. This involves sleeping with a snorkel-like mask that's hooked up to a machine that gently blows air up the nose to keep the passages open.

said they could approve the permit to get the process going. Katalenich also asked his team on hand about signage for the wall to remind people to stay off it. It was agreed they would double-check to make sure signage was in place.

Gehring explained all five phases of dock renovations have been completed but they have not closed on the last phase because of few additional applications such as storm mitigation with the floating docks and replacement of a few floaters. He expects all phases to be completed by Labor Day.

Gehring felt the visit was valuable to the Harrisville Harbor of Refuge and the Army Corps of Engineers. "You can look at data, drone pictures or whatever, but where the real value is having boots-on-the-ground for an overall evaluation.

"The Lt. Col. said it was important, not just for our community but for the other small communities, especially those bordering Lake Huron, to see the harbors in person and talk about concerns. They needed to get the whole scope of the problem first-hand," Gehring said.

Gehring also felt a kinship with Katalenich, and not just because they have children about the same age. Gehring's late father, Neal, who was a past chairman for the harbor board, was a civilian who worked for the Army Corps of Engineers for 38 years. Gehring's mother, Barb, was also on hand to greet Katalenich.

"When we were wrapping up our conversation, knowing my dad spent so much time with the Corps, he (the Lt. Col.) wanted to sit down and have a conversation with my mom. That made a big impression on me.

"As a kid, I grew up with the Corps because that was what my dad did. It meant a lot for me and my mom and they had a super talk together. She likes to keep up with the retirees and what is going on with the Corps and the Lt. Col. was very accommodating. She was thrilled for him to stop and acknowledge our family's dedication and appreciated him visiting.

"The Lt. Col. was very receptive to what we had to say while walking the docks. The whole visit was invaluable and made for good relations between the city and the Army Corps of Engineers which is something we can build on and will, hopefully, last for years," Gehring said.

According to the United States Army Corps of Engineer's website, Katalenich assumed command of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Detroit District in July of 2020 after 18 years of Army service.

Katalenich, who hails from Roscommon, Mich., graduated with a Bachelor of Science in Civil Engineering from the United States Military Academy and received his commission as an officer in the United States Army Corps of Engineers in 2002. He holds a Master of Philosophy in Geotechnical Engineering from the University of Cambridge, and a Master of Science in Civil & Environmental Engineering - Sustainable Design & Construction and a Doctor of Philosophy in Civil & Environmental Engineering - Atmosphere/Energy from Stanford University.

As District Engineer, he, along with the district's more than 400 employees, are responsible to oversee 3,200 miles of Great Lakes shoreline which includes all of Michigan and parts of Minnesota, Wisconsin and Indiana.

The district maintains 84 harbors and connecting channels on Superior, Michigan, Huron, St. Clair and parts of Lake Erie and investigates, plans, designs, constructs, operates and maintains congressionally authorized water resource projects related to navigation, flood control, hydropower production and recreation.

The Corps also provided support to tribal nations, international organizations and other federal, state and local government agencies, acts as a regulator over wetlands adjacent to navigable waterways and completes ecosystem restoration projects throughout the region.

Harrisville's Pocket Park organizers officially open park to public

By Ann L Pringle

More than 100 people watched Harrisville City Mayor Jeff Gehring cut the ribbon to celebrate the grand opening of the Harrisville Pocket Park on Saturday, July 31 and enjoy the festivities.

After the ceremonial ribbon, held taut by Richard Pringle and Mike Bean, was snipped, Mayor Gehring expressed his appreciation on behalf of the residents of Harrisville and the surrounding area for this beautiful addition to the community. He noted the leadership of Becky Bean, who for four years worked tirelessly to raise the funds to purchase the land, develop a plan, and see it to fruition.

Becky Bean spoke, thanking the many people who provided sweat equity as well as financial support, purchased bricks and made in-kind contributions. She commented that perhaps some people thought she was a little crazy to take on this project, but she had a vision and a stubborn streak that kept her goal in sight.

Kathy Matteo, a committee member who took on the complicated task of receiving the orders for the bricks and overseeing their engraving, expressed her admiration for Bean's dogged pursuit of excellence, her ability to delegate, and inspire others to jump aboard the Pocket Park train.

Music was provided by Joe Thomas and Laura Frawley, popcorn, water and juice were available to enjoy as people walked about searching for their bricks and reading the sentiments on over 350 engraved pavers scattered over the curving walkway. Others tried out the benches which will soon have permanent plaques. The threat of rain may have cut the two-hour celebration short, but the sun came out to smile on the event.

The creation of the Harrisville Pocket Park is a positive feature to a community that has seen too many empty buildings. Able to be seen from the intersection of US-23 and M-72, it will invite visitors for decades to read the bricks and learn about the people of our community.

Anyone who would like to order a brick, September 15 is the deadline to get orders in so that they can be engraved and installed before the first frost. Order forms can be picked up at the Pocket Park.

The Harrisville Pocket Park can be seen from the intersection of US-23 and M-72.

Hearings demanded on C. P. A. charges

August 1, 1946 ~ Harold Hanchett, of Clare, and Fred C. Sharboneau of Lincoln, demanded examination when, arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Clarence S. Pettit in Bay City, late Monday afternoon on charges of constructing a livestock auction building at Lincoln in violation of the federal government's Veteran Housing Act order.

The hearing was set for Aug. 27 and both were released on $1,000 bond.

The charges arose out of construction of the building without authority of the Civilian Production Administration.

The defendants had been refused a building priority last May because estimated cost was in excess of $4,000.

Bolivians get local help

August 7, 1996 ~ Dr. John MacMaster and Dr. Jaci Fitzgerald and their two children, Will, 8 and Kate, 6, are leaving Monday for Montero, Bolivia for two weeks.

Both doctors are volunteering to assist in giving medical aid to residents of Montero and surrounding communities.

They will be treating a "full gamut" of injuries and diseases and expect to see 100 to 150 patients a day, according to Dr. John MacMaster. "It's going to be an interesting experience," he said. The couple has traveled to Africa in 1986 and the Dominican Republic in 1989 on similar medical mission trips. They are working in conjunction with St. Phillip's Church in Battle Creek, Mich.

They are traveling light, but have to be prepared for variable, unpredictable weather.

On the Black River reef

August 1, 1896 ~ The propeller Pringle and schooner Sweetheart went on the reef at Black River at 5 p. m. last night.

The Sturgeon Point crew got there at 12 o'clock last night. Alpena was applied to for tugs this morning. The boats were loaded with lumber from Duluth to Buffalo. The Sweetheart will get off without much trouble, but the Pringle is on hard. So far no damage is done.

LATER —The Sweetheart is released but at noon the prospects are that the Pringle will have to be unloaded before she can be taken off.

The Atlantis goes on a reef by daylight

August 1, 1896 ~ The steambarge Atlantis went hard on the reef north of the Union Dock while trying to come in Monday morning for a load of cedar. It was very smoky at the time and there was some excuse, therefore, for that style of navigation beyond the tipsy condition of the skipper. Fortunately, there was an off-land breeze and the vessel rested easily on the rocks until the tug Sigison came to the rescue.

The Captain wired to Alpena for the tug Ralph but the Ralph was not in port at the time and the tug Geo. W. Sigison, which was just clearing for Detroit, agreed to come in here and pull the Atlantis off. Before the Sigison's arrival the captain whistled up the station crew from Sturgeon point and they arrived on the scene and rendered valuable service. The Atlantis' stern was on the rocks in 4 feet of water and her regular draft when light is 6 feet. The Sigison had hardly taken the Atlantis off when the tug Ralph steamed into port, but she was too late to get line out.

Strange But True

By Lucie Winborne

- In the 1880s, businessman LaMarcus Thompson was so upset over the temptations presented by saloons and brothels that he decided to clean up what he viewed as one of America's most immoral places—New York's Coney Island. To that end he built the country's first roller coaster in a bid to give folks some good, clean fun well away from sleazier pursuits.
- Flamingos bend their legs at the ankle, not the knee. Their knees are closer to the body and covered by feathers.
- Those apples you buy at your local market aren't all that fresh. They're typically plucked between August and November, then covered in wax, hot-air dried, and sent to cold storage before landing in stores six to 12 months later.
- The world's largest waterfall, in the Denmark Strait between Iceland and Greenland, is underwater.
- Dunce caps used to be a sign of intelligence! Thirteenth-century philosopher John Duns Scotus believed that a pointed cap helped spread knowledge from the tip to the brain, and his followers proudly wore them as badges of honor. A few hundred years later, when his ideas became less popular, the meaning of the Duns cap was turned on its, er, head, becoming a joke that led to its less flattering association.
- About a month after its dedication, the Statue of Liberty became a working lighthouse for 16 years.
- When Benjamin Franklin designed the first U.S. penny in 1787, it was emblazoned not with E Pluribus Unum, but "Mind Your Business."
- The tongue of a blue whale can weigh as much as an elephant.

REAL ESTATE GUIDE

The choice for staying put or moving on

Many home improvement television series show people deciding whether to improve upon their current homes to make them into the houses of their dreams or to put "For Sale" signs in their lawns and move on to something new.

The question of whether to move or stay put depends on various factors. Such factors may include emotional attachment to a home, the current economic climate and the cost of real estate. Current data points to a greater propensity for people to invest and improve upon their current properties rather than trading up for something new.

According to information collected by John Burns Real Estate Consulting, the percentage of homeowners moving up to their next home is the lowest in 25 years. Many are opting to make starter homes permanent by expanding them and repairing homes for the long haul.

The National Association of Realtors said that, between 1987 and 2008, home buyers stayed in their homes an average of six years before selling.

Since 2010, however, NAR says the average expected length of time people will stay in their homes before selling is now 15 years.

Part of what's fueling this permanency is that many home buyers were able to acquire rock-bottom mortgage interest rates shortly after the 2008 recession. As a result, they're not inclined to walk away from those rates, even if doing so means getting more house. Also, a low inventory of available houses has stymied repeat buying for many people.

Those factors and others have led many homeowners to invest in renovations instead. The experts at Bankrate say realistic budgeting and comparing renovation project costs against mortgages and interests rates can further help individuals decide whether to remain in their current homes or move out. Very often a smarter layout and more efficient floor plan can make meaningful differences in spaces. Renovations and redesigns can make sense and often are less expensive and disruptive than moving.
