Elementary students experience place-based science projects

By Mary Weber Staff Writer

Thanks to a $10,000 grant, students at Alcona Elementary are learning to care for the land and for themselves while excelling in place-based science classes taking full advantage of northeast Michigan woods and wetlands.

Jenny Schroeder, elementary science teacher, explained the grant was funded by the Michigan Science, Technology, Engineering and Math (MI-STEM) in which the school was awarded for helping a statewide team develop a playbook for other schools to integrate play-space science projects.

Alcona Community Schools has 40-plus acres of land surrounding the school which many teachers use to create outdoor classrooms with hands-on lessons.

Schroeder garnered additional funds and partners through other entities under the Northeast Michigan Great Lakes Stewardship Initiative umbrella such as the Department of Natural Resources, AuSable Audubon, Huron Pines, Otsego Conservation District as well as private donations through White Barn Gardens and other local resources.

Collaborating with the

Schroeder assigned first through fifth-grade classes with hands-on projects to meet their science standards.

The fifth graders worked on an ecosystem restoration project of the school forest, looking at the flow of matter, energy, and decomposition.

Each fifth-grade class had a 50 x 100-yard plot of land they went through and cataloged what plant species they found and if the plot had animal signs. They found they had a large amount of autumn olive, an invasive species. Huron Pines partnered with the project and talked to the students about the four different ways to remove it," Schroeder said.

Students then decided collectively how they wanted to remove it. In one class a stump cut was decided on, which meant cutting the plant low and having Huron Pines spray to kill the plant and root.

The other class chose to remove it by hand which involved hours and hours of cutting, hauling and digging by the students. "We had to ask the maintenance crew to bring the tractor over to get some of the bigger ones out. The students invested a lot of time and hard work pulling it out. Autumn olive has thorns.

"The goal was to get rid of other teachers, this year the invasives and put back native species. Huron Pines also talked to the kids about succession and forest change so they could learn the different layers. It was an intensive project," Schroeder said.

She wanted the students to pick out what kind of native plants they would like to replace the autumn olive with, so the classes went on a field trip to Otsego Conserva- their plants so the deer won't

Next year the new fifthgrade class will pick a different part of the forest and Schroeder hopes, over time, the autumn olive will be eliminated.

Supply chain slowdown could boost demand for recycle materials

By Danielle James

Capital News Service

The same supply chain disruptions that slow Michigan manufacturing could help the recycling industry bring in new business.

The opportunity started with pandemic shutdowns, which disrupted manufacturing and the movement of goods, said Dave Smith, a recycling coordinator at the Michigan State University Recycling Center.

That resulted in material shortages for businesses across the state, said Patrick Gagliardi, the chairman of the state Liquor Control Com-

Since 2020, the adult beverage industry has struggled to manufacture and ship glass, aluminum, cardboard and bottle caps, Gagliardi said. And recent spikes in the $price\, of\, petroleum\, in\, response$ to the war in Ukraine have not helped. Shortages of raw materials cause price spikes. And rising prices for petroleum are making plastic much more expensive. The cost to make "virgin" or new plastic products is much higher than normal, Smith explained.

The cost of polypropylene, a flexible plastic resin used to make items like reusable water bottles, plastic food containers and car parts, has risen roughly 36 percent since 2020, according to Statistica, an online data analytics plat-

Its report, which compiles price points from 2017 to 2022, shows that the price jumped to $1,285 per ton in 2021 and was $1,208 per ton as of March of this year. For plastic producers, the higher cost makes it harder to keep up with demand, Smith said. As oil prices increase, plastic prices do as well.

But recycling centers like that at MSU could benefit when cost-cutting companies look for alternatives.

Selling recycled plastic is one way. "Generally, as oil prices go up, so does the value of recycled plastic scrap. I would say that there has been more demand, especially for products associated with shipping," Smith said.

According to data from Recycle Ann Arbor, number one and number two plastics, which contain polyethylene, have the strongest domestic recycling markets. Polyethylene is used to make the plastic for trash bags and That's followed by number five plastics, which contain polypropylene. And it's not just plastic that is in demand.

"Over the last year, I have received several calls from companies which recycle cardboard, inquiring if we would be willing to sell them bales of material," Smith said.

"So there definitely has been an increased demand for cardboard and paper products. We have also seen strong markets for recycled plastic scrap," Smith said.

The increase in demand for recycled products allows recycling centers to charge higher prices, Smith said.

According to Resource Recycling, an industry business journal, prices for baled recycling center plastic increased substantially in April.

The national average price of PET plastic, a form of polyester, increased by 17 percent to 39.22 cents per pound, compared to 33.42 cents in March.

Polypropylene sold for an average of 34.56 cents per pound in April, which is also a 17 percent increase from 29.44 cents per pound in March.

But more demand for recycled plastic also requires more supply. The recyclable material collected monthly at MSU took a dive in April 2020. The numbers still haven't returned to pre-pandemic lev-

Smith said he's not sure if continuous supply chain disruptions will also lead to less recycling coming into the drop-off center in the future. "If you have been to the grocery store over the last couple of years, you will have seen some empty shelves," Smith said. "If the product isn't there to buy, then consumers aren't able to use it and recycle the bottle or tub when they are done consuming the prod-

"That being said, most retailers have been able to restock shelves, so this has been a fairly short term problem."

And despite the slow recovery for MSU's center, recycling in Michigan has reached an all-time high, according to the Department of Environment, Great Lakes and Energy. The agency found that the overall state recycling rate increased from 14.25 percent before 2019 to 19.3 percent this year, a 35.4 percent increase.

That's partly due to a state investment to increase the number of households with curbside recycling carts and available drop-off sites, department director Liesl Clark said in a press statement. That resulted in nearly three quarters of the state with access to recycling services.

"Michiganders are recycling now more than ever before," Clark said. The estimate from a three-year analysis that started in 2019 is that over 500,000 more tons of cardboard boxes, milk cartons, plastic bottles and other recyclables have been returned. Recycling centers across the state process 440,828 tons of material annually, not including the additional 60,000 tons of organic material.

Recycling rates may continue to rise with the recent announcement of state grants to expand recycling centers in Flint, Marquette and Alpena, among others.

Alpena will receive a $1 million grant to construct a $5 million recycling center near the Alpena County Regional Airport.

Staying motivated with walking program

Dear Savvy Senior,

My doctor recently suggested I start a walking program to help get my weight and blood pressure under control, but I've never exercised much and am 66. Can you recommend some tips? Hate to Exercise

Dear Hate,

You should follow your doctor's orders. Years of research have shown that walking may be the single best exercise you can do to improve your health as you age. It burns calories, which will help you lose weight, builds endurance, enhances muscle tone and it doesn't pound your

It also helps improve or prevent many age-related health problems including high blood pressure, diabetes, heart disease, arthritis, osteoporosis, dementia and even depression.

But walking is not only good for what ails you. It's also one of the easiest and most convenient exercises you can do and is completely free. All you need is a good pair of walking shoes that fit well and a little desire. Here are some things you should know to help get you started and stay motivated.

Getting Started

Start out slow if you need to. For many people this means head out the door, walk for 10 minutes, and walk back. Do it every day for a week. If that seems easy, add five minutes to your walks the next week and keep adding five minutes until you are walking as long as you desire. It's also a smart idea to start and finish your walk with a few simple warm up and cool down stretches. Stretching will make you feel better and help prevent injury.

Most fitness professionals recommend walking about 30 minutes, five or more days a week. Or, for optimal health benefits aim for 10,000 steps per day, which is the equivalent of about five miles.

Your walking pace is also important. While strolling around the park or neighborhood at an easy pace is good for you, a brisker pace that has you breathing heavily, but you are still able to carry on a conversation, provides better health, fitness and weight loss benefits.

Staying Motivated

While starting a walking program takes initiative, sticking with it takes commitment. Here are some tips to help you stay motivated:

• Find a walking buddy: Having a friend to walk with can provide motivation and support along with companionship.

• Wear a fitness tracker or pedometer: These devices measure how far you've walked in steps and miles, providing motivation by spurring you to meet a particular goal and showing you if you've met it. Or, if you use a smartphone there are free pedometer apps you can download like MyPacer.com, Google-.com/fit or Accupedo.com.

• Join a walking club: To find one in your community,

*≸*avvy $enior

call your nearby medical center, mall, health club, senior center, running shoe stores or Area Agency on Aging to see if they sponsor or know of any clubs or groups. Or try MeetUp.com or the American Volkssport Association (AVA.org), to search for noncompetitive walking clubs in your area, or start one.

• Keep a journal: Use it to keep track of your walking minutes, steps, or mileage and total it up at the end of each week to see how you're progressing. There are also free apps like MapMy-Walk.com and Walkmeter-.com that use GPS to map your walk and measure your distance and time, which is fun and motivating.

• Have a backup plan: If bad weather, allergies or other factors limit your outdoor walking have a backup plan like walking at your local mall, buying a home treadmill or joining a health club.

Alcona Tigers take down AuGres to win district championship

By Ben Murphy

Sports Writer

Two well played wins gave the Alcona varsity baseball team a Division 4 district trophy on Saturday, June 4. The day culminated with a 6-2 win over AuGres in the championship game held at Whittemore-Prescott.

"This was a good day for Alcona baseball," said head coach Dru Carson. "We walked away as district champs.

Owen Borsvold was the winning pitcher, as he gave up two runs on seven hits. Gavin Walker had a triple, a single and one walk. Richard Schott had a double and an

In the semifinals Alcona won 4-1 over Mio.

Evan Borsvold was the winning pitcher, as he went six and two-third innings and gave up one earned run on two hits and 16 strikeouts. G. Walker threw one pitch to get the final out of the game.

The offense was sparked by Collin Walker who had a double, a single and one RBI.

"This was a good outing for the freshman Evan Borsvold," Carson said.

Alcona (11-17 overall) Johannesburgplayed Lewiston on Wednesday in the regional semifinals. The winner of that contest moves on to the regional finals on Saturday in Rudyard, Mich.

Lady Tigers dominate on road to district championship

By Ben Murphy Sports Writer

The Alcona varsity softball team had to win three games in order to win the district championship last week.

Not only did the Lady Tigers do that, but they did so in convincing fashion, and capped it off with a 19-4 home win over AuGres in the district championship on Satur-

"They made big plays when needed and worked together to come up with a district win," said head coach Chelsea Neuenfeldt. "This is something they have been working for since day one and have put in a lot of hours and effort to earn it."

Miah Schopfer was the winning pitcher, as she gave up four runs, two earned in four innings of work. She gave up three hits, struck out two and walked two.

Avery Wrobel had two doubles, a single and five RBI. Jena Wambold, Hannah Turner, Schopfer and Sage Gauthier all singled.

"Our bats started off slow (but) the girls really dug deep, kept their cool and stayed positive when they went back up to bat," Neuenfeldt said.

In the semifinals, Alcona had a mercy-style win over Hale, 17-0.

"We had a huge first inning setting the tone of the game," Neuenfeldt said. "The girls kept the momentum going and didn't look back. They were talking well, seeing the Schopfer had the win, striking out two batters and not allowing a hit.

On Tuesday, May 31 the Lady Tigers opened up the post-season with a 14-1 predistrict win over visiting Whittemore-Prescott.

"Our offense started off on the wrong foot, all of our hits were right to the defense," Neuenfeldt said. "Once the district jitters settled down they came to life on the base paths and our bats got hot. Our defense was solid tonight as well. Only giving up two errors and communicating well."

Schopfer was the winner in this one, as she went five innings and gave up one unearned run on two hits, five strikeouts and three walks.

Wrobel had three singles. Gracyn Tracy and Goddard had two hits apiece. Gauthier doubled and Wright had a key two-run single that gave Alcona an early lead. Schopfer and Wambold had one hit each.

Alcona heads to Carson City-Crystal on Saturday, June 11 for regionals. The Lady Tigers play Breckenridge in the semifinals, with Mt. Pleasant Sacred Heart and Portland St. Patrick playing in the other semifinal.

which was their idea. "In fourth grade, students learn about marine debris and the students figured out we had a lot of food that goes to waste. This year they wanted to carry that lesson forward and started composting.

"They took turns monitoring fifth-grade lunch and taking the uneaten food to compost. Before the school year ends the fifth graders, who will be going off to middle school next year, will teach the current fourth graders how to compost so they can continue that program,"

Schroeder explained she and another fourth-grade teacher attended training on a marine debris curriculum and through that received enough grant funds to purchase a large composter.

The fourth graders also did a biodiversity project looking at the different mammals who live on the school property. Through trail cameras, they have seen fox, coyote, squirrels, raccoon, turkey, opossum, rabbits and even caught a large bobcat walking the trail in the middle of the day,

"They want to do the work and get invested in the project. That's as good as it gets... The fifth graders this year were worried their hard work wouldn't continue when they go off to middle school. That's awesome they show that kind of concern for the land,"

> ~ Jenny Schroeder, Elementary science teacher

Schroeder said.

In the school hoop house, which elementary students share with high school agriscience classes, fifth graders partnered with White Barn Garden, which helped build the hoop house a few years ago and supplies the plants and other support for the students. This year the students planted watermelon, cantaloupe, tomatoes, cucumbers, carrots and spinach.

Fourth graders worked on doing lunch audits and then looked at collected data to figure out what is wasted and talked about different solutions to the problem.

"The classes picked one project to carry out. Food waste came up again, so one class is putting out a survey to all students to find out what they like and do not like to eat for lunch - - thinking if students liked the food more, there would be less waste.

"The other team wants to get rid of plastic baggies the carrots and other fruits and vegetables come in. They want to plant carrots, pea pods, and cucumbers in the school garden so in the fall we can have more of our own food and less plastic waste," she in addition to many deer. "They have not seen any bear yet, but we know the bear are here," Schroeder said.

She explained a few years ago the school was locked down for a while because a bear was visiting one of the high school's bird feeders while class was taking place.

For the third year in a row, third-grade students worked on a sturgeon in the classroom project. This year the students named their sturgeon "Spike" and was introduced to the classroom tank last October. The sturgeon was quite small and grew to 306 grams.

"It was the biggest one we released yet. Just like with the other projects, the goal is for students to meet their science standards but in the context of real-world learning and connecting with their community. They learned a lot about life cycles and human impact," Schroeder said.

Students in first grade learned about embryology by watching eggs hatch and grow into egg-laying chickens. Schroeder brings in adult chickens so students can learn the difference between their chicks and the adult chickens.

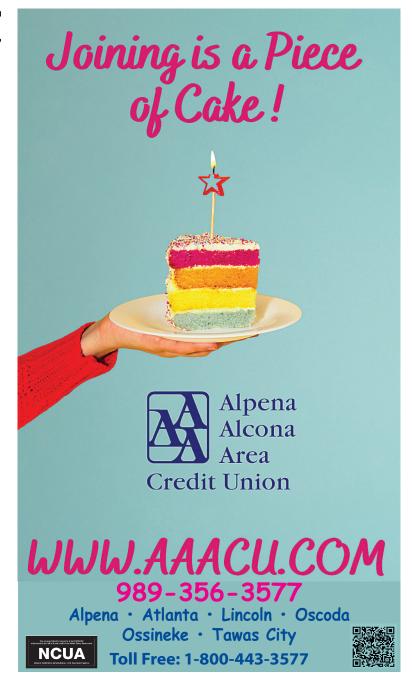

She explained when the agricultural project is complete, the students adopt the chickens out to families and 4-H students who want to raise their own food. The young students assist the adoption process by writing instructions on what they have learned about the chickens and how to care for them which goes out with each set of chicks adopted.

The first graders also learn about different pollinators and assist with the school garden by weeding and mulching it. They also plant flowers in the Harrisville Library caterpillar garden.

Schroeder explained second graders partner with the Department of the Natural Resources (DNR) at the boat launch site and the Harrisville Harbor. "We've adopted the birding trail land close to where they shoot off the fireworks each year. Students learn about the bird habitat and animal adaptations and how those connect," she said.

The students then choose what they can do to make the habitat more bird-friendly with one class choosing to plant elderberry, serviceberry and nine-bark bushes to feed and protect the birds. The other class opted to make bird houses. Both classes re-

June 8, 1922 ~ Wm. Edwards this week sold the building occupied by his poolroom to Thos. Quinlan.

The deal includes the pool tables, equipment and fixtures. Mr. Quinlan expects to start at once renovating and repairing the place and will open up for business as soon as the work is finished.

Tom's decision to quit the farm and engage in business calling for less strenuous physical effort was brought about by an accident which he suffered last winter when he was thrown from a load of wood and received injuries to his back which put him out, so far as hard farm work is concerned.

Walter Burt will have charge of the Quinlan farm this season.

Body of drowning victim recovered

June 12, 1947 ~ The body of Charles Vohs, aged 32, of Marysville, Michigan, was recovered from the backwaters of Alcona Dam about 1:30 p. m. Tuesday, June 10. The victim's brother, John Vohs of Detroit, discovered the body about ten rods from the scene where the drowning occurred ten days previous.

Vohs was drowned when his outboard motor boat capsized on the pond Saturday morning, May 31, while he and a companion attempted to go out on a fishing trip. His companion, Vincent Andrzeekewski of Smiths Creek, Michigan, was rescued by other members of their party who witnessed the accident from shore, but Vohs had apparently suffered a cramp or a heart attack and lost his hold on the overturned boat. His coat was later found.

Dragging operations by Conservation Department men failed to discover the body. A constant search since the tragedy, has been made by boat and by a Conservation Department Plane from Traverse City. His brother, John Vohs, and their father, John Vohs Sr., of Florida, have kept a constant vigil at the scene since the accident occurred.

The body was removed to Smith's Undertaking Parlors in Lincoln, and later taken to Detroit, where services were to be held, with burial in Mt. Olivet Cemetery.

had the pleasure of seeing Alcona County from the air, last Friday, when Harold "Ki" Cuyler invited him to take a plane ride. We think "Ki" never dreamed that the invitation would be accepted - but it was - and was really enjoyed. One never realizes the amount of land under cultivation in this area, until you look down on it. In all, we think it is a beautiful county, both from the air and on the ground. All it needs is a little boosting, and an entrance that can be found by the tourist.

Have you been up to the new baseball diamond - or maybe we should call it a stadium? Harrisville has one of the finest that has ever been built in the county.

New wire around the field, new dug-outs, and a beautiful new score and sign board. Plans are now under way to secure bleachers. Much credit is due the management and the boys for the fine job done. Go to the game Sunday, and see a fine ball club, and a fine ball field.

The 1907 rabbit hunting champions

By Eric Paul Roorda

Artist & Author

The people of Alcona County have always considered just about every creature to be fair game for hunting. Alconians—Alconiacs? have also always competed with one another in just about every way: sports, logging, fishing, farming, animal husbandry, and especially hunt-

Hunting and competition have always gone together here in The First of 83.

Today, it's all about the buck poles that sprout outside Up North taverns in November. Showing off and comparing big white tail deer on the racks that we now call "buck poles," has been one form of hunting competition for a century, at least.

But in the not-so-distant past, the hunters of Alcona County competed in the pursuit of a whole menagerie of prey beyond the mighty male white tail.

Over the decades, the hunters of Alcona County have held events for the purpose of finding and shooting, and counting and photographing, bears, raccoons, bobcats, foxes, and every sort of wild-fowl (including, alas, doomed passenger pigeons).

Even innocuous rabbits, the opposite of trophy game, were in the crosshairs of Alconiac marksmen. Annual rabbit hunting tournaments deployed droves of men armed with .22 caliber rifles, to find out which of them could bag the most bunnies.

In 1907, the most successful bunny-baggers had familiar Alcona County surnames: Ray Walker, Arthur Gallaway, and Russell Gilpin.

While Kindergartners did not work on a play-based project for science this year, Schroeder is hoping to include them next year by working on where animals live and the places they call home.

Schroeder loves to see the 'a-ha' moment in her students, such as the time one of her students wondered out loud what impact they will have on the animals of the forest.

She also loves her students' eagerness to complete outdoor projects while learning as much as they can about

"They want to do the work and get invested in the project. That's as good as it gets. It's been hard the last few years not being able to finish projects. The fifth graders this year were worried their hard work wouldn't continue when they go off to middle school.

> "We want students to have ownership and a voice to come up with ideas and solutions. It's hard to juggle that with meeting science standards. I want science to never be boring. I want them to continually love to learn. The goal is to make them lifelong learners and to make a difference their community," Schroeder said.

> She is hoping to build a volunteer summer garden club of students and adults to keep the garden growing and looking healthy while students are not in class.

For more information about the garden club, contact the school at (989) 736-6413 or contact Schroeder email Schroederj@alconaschools.net.
